

L.H. Kemp
1947

CORA J. OUGH,

St. Jude's Vicarage,
Bethnal Green, E.2.

The Courtauld Institute of Art,
Portman Square, W.1.

Seal of Sir RICHARD DE BEAUCHAMP, K.G., Fifth Earl of WARWICK : died A.D. 1439. No. 448.—See pages 215, 321.

Seal of Sir THOMAS DE BEAUCHAMP, K.G., Third Earl of WARWICK : died A.D. 1369. Date of the Seal, 1344.
No 446 - See No 447, page 322 ; also see page 321

ENGLISH HERALDRY

BY

CHARLES BOUTELL, M.A.

AUTHOR OF "HERALDRY: HISTORICAL AND POPULAR," "THE MONUMENTAL BRASSES OF ENGLAND," "CHRISTIAN MONUMENTS IN ENGLAND AND WALES," "A MANUAL OF BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGY," ETC.

WITH

FOUR HUNDRED AND FIFTY ILLUSTRATIONS

Drawn and Engraved on Wood by Mr. R. B. UTTING

"To describe . . . emblazoned Shields"

MILTON

SIXTH EDITION

ROYAL ARMS (1340-1405)

GIBBINGS AND CO., LIMITED

18 BURY STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON

1899

[All rights reserved]

Printed by BALLANTYNE, HANSON & Co.
At the Ballantyne Press

THE GETTY CENTER LIBRARY

TO

A NOBLE LADY,

WHOSE ADMIRABLE QUALITIES DIGNIFY HER RANK,

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

LOUISA, LADY ASHBURTON,

THIS VOLUME

IS INSCRIBED.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS	ix
PREFACE	xv

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY—Early Popularity of Heraldry in England— Origin of English Heraldry; Definition; Characteristics; Developments; Early Uses; Not connected with Earlier Systems—Ancient Heraldry—Past and Present Treatment of the Subject.	I
---	---

CHAPTER II

EARLY HERALDIC AUTHORITIES—Seals; Monumental Effigies, &c.; Rolls of Arms, Official Heraldic Records, &c.—Earliest Heraldic Shields and Banners—Allusive Quality of Early Armory—Attributed Arms
---	--

CHAPTER III.

The English Heraldry that is now in existence—First Debasement of Heraldry—Later Debasement—Revival of English Heraldry —Heraldic Art	20
---	----

CHAPTER IV.

GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY: Section I—Language—Nomencla- ture—Style—Forms of Expression—Blazon—The Shield: its Parts, Points, Divisions, Dividing and Border Lines, Varieties of Form, and Heraldic Treatment	20
---	----

CHAPTER V.

PAGE

GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY : Section 2—Tinctures : Metals, Colours, Furs—Varied Fields—Law of Tinctures—Counter-changing—Diaper—Disposition—Blazoning—Blazoning in Tinctures	40
---	----

CHAPTER VI.

GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY : Section 3—The Ordinaries :—Chief : Fesse : Bar : Pale : Cross ; its Heraldic Varieties : Bend : Saltire : Chevron : Pile	49
--	----

CHAPTER VII.

GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY : Section 4—The Subordinaries :—Canton or Quarter : Inescutcheon : Orle : Tressure : Bordure : Flanches : Lozenge, Mascle, Rustre : Fusil : Billet : Gyron : Frette—The Roundles	64
--	----

CHAPTER VIII.

GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY : Section 5—Miscellaneous Charges :—Human Beings : Animals : Birds : Fish : Reptiles and Insects : Imaginary Beings : Natural Objects : Various Artificial Figures and Devices—Appropriate Descriptive Epithets . .	73
---	----

CHAPTER IX.

GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY : Section 6—The Lion and the Eagle in Heraldry	83
--	----

CHAPTER X.

GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY : Section 7—Glossary of Titles, Names, and Terms	100
--	-----

CHAPTER XI.

MARSHALLING :—Aggroupment : Combination : Quartering : Dimidiation : Impalement : Escutcheon of Pretence : Marshalling the Arms of Widowers, Widows, and others ; Official Arms ; and the Accessories of Shields	161
--	-----

CHAPTER XII.

PAGE

CADENCY :—Marks of Cadency are temporary, or permanent : the Label : the Bordure : the Bendlet, Barrulet, and Canton : Change of Tinctures : Secondary Charges : Single Small Charges : Differences of Illegitimacy : Cadency of Crests, Badges, &c. : Modern Cadency	180
---	-----

CHAPTER XIII.

DIFFERENCING :—Differencing to denote Feudal Alliance or De- pendency : Differencing without any Alliance—Augmen- tation—Abatement	200
--	-----

CHAPTER XIV.

CRESTS	216
------------------	-----

CHAPTER XV.

BADGES	227
------------------	-----

CHAPTER XVI.

SUPPORTERS	245
----------------------	-----

CHAPTER XVII.

FLAGS :—The Pennon : the Banner : the Standard : the Royal Standard : the “Union Jack :” Ensigns : Military Standards and Colours : Hoisting and Displaying Flags	254
---	-----

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE ROYAL HERALDRY OF ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND :—Shields of Arms of the Reigning Sovereigns of England, of Scotland, and of the United Kingdom : Crowns and Crests : Sup- porters : Mottoes : Banners : Armorial Bearings of the late Prince Consort, of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and of the other Princes and Princesses, the Sons and Daughters of H.M. the Queen	267
--	-----

CHAPTER XIX.

PAGE

ORDERS OF KNIGHTHOOD AND INSIGNIA OF HONOUR :—Feudal Knighthood—Orders of Knighthood : Knights of St. John : Knights Templars : the Order of the Garter, of the Thistle, of St. Patrick, of the Bath, of St. Michael and St. George, of the Star of India—The Victoria Cross—The Albert Medal —Naval and Military Medals—Foreign Insignia bestowed on British Subjects	281
--	-----

CHAPTER XX.

PRECEDENCE : GENEALOGIES	296
------------------------------------	-----

CHAPTER XXI.

The COLLEGE OF ARMS—The LYON OFFICE of Scotland— Grants of Arms—Tax on “Armorial Bearings,” and on “Arms Found”	305
---	-----

CHAPTER XXII.

MISCELLANEOUS :—Coins—Seals—Heraldry in Architecture, in Monuments, in Illuminations, in Encaustic Tiles—Heraldic Personal Ornaments, and various Heraldic Decorations— Conclusion	317
---	-----

GENERAL INDEX	331
-------------------------	-----

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS.

NO.	PAGE
1. Arms of St. George ...}
2. Arms of St. Edward ...}	Preface.
3. Arms of St. Edmund...}
4. Arms of Sir Walter Scott, of Abbotsford	I
5. Lance Flag, Bayeux Tapestry.	6
6. Lance Flag, Bayeux Tapestry.	6
7. Ancient Shield, from a Greek Vase	8
8. Ancient Shield, from a Greek Vase	8
9. Ancient Shield, from a Greek Vase	8
10. Ancient Shield, from a Greek Vase	8
11. Seal of Walter Innes	11
12. Seal of William Innes	11
13. Banner of Templars... ..	14
14. Banner of Leicester... ..	14
15. Shield of Brittany	14
16. Shield of Waldegrave	14
17. Shield of Fitz Warine	14
18. Shield at Whitworth... ..	14
19. The Escarbuncle	15
20. Shield of Montacute... ..	17
20A. Shield of Montacute	70
21. The Planta Genista	17
22. Arms assigned to William I. 18, 268
23. Arms assigned to the Saxon Princes	18
24. Shield of Prince John of Eltham	26
25. Badge of Richard II., West- minster Hall	28
26. Badge of Richard II., West- minster Hall	28
27. The Points of an Heraldic Shield... ..	33
28. Shield divided per Pale	33
29. Shield divided per Fesse... ..	33
30. Shield divided Quarterly... ..	33
31. Shield divided per Bend	33
32. Shield divided per Bend Sinis- ter	33
33. Shield divided per Saltire	33
34. Shield divided per Chevron	33
35. Shield divided per Tierce	33
36. Shield Quarterly of Eight	34

NO.	PAGE
37. Compound Quartering	34
38. Border and Dividing Lines	35
39. Bowed Shield	35
40. Heraldic Shield	36
41. Heraldic Shield	36
42. Heraldic Shield	36
43. Heraldic Shield	36
44. Heraldic Shield	36
45. Modern Shield	37
46. Cartouche	37
47. Lozenge	37
48. Arms of Provence	38
49. Shield Couché	38
50. Symbolisation of Or... ..	40
51. Symbolisation of Argent... ..	40
52. Symbolisation of Azure	40
53. Symbolisation of Gules	40
54. Symbolisation of Sable	40
55. Symbolisation of Vert	40
56. Symbolisation of Purpure	40
57. 57A. Ermine	41, 42
58. Ermines	41
59. Erminoise	41
60. Pean	41
61. Vair	41
62. Vair	41
63. Counter Vair	41
64. Potent	41
65. Counter Potent	41
66. Compoñée	43
67. Counter Compoñée	43
68. Arms of Earl de Warrenne	45
69. Arms of Jerusalem	44
70. Arms of Fenwick	44
71. A Chief... ..	50
72. Arms of Le Botiler	50
73. Arms of De Brus	50
74. Arms of De Clintone	50
75. Arms of De Clintone	50
76. Arms of De Clifford... ..	51
77. Arms of De Pateshulle	51
78. Arms of Le Vavasour	51
79. Arms of De Hemenhale	51
80. Arms of De Dageworthe	51
81. Arms of De Harecourt	51
82. Arms of Wake	51
83. Arms of De Huntercumbe	52
84. Arms of De la Mere... ..	52

NO.	PAGE	NO.	PAGE
85. Arms of Fitzalan of Bedale...	53	145. Arms of De Burgh, Earl of Kent...	69
86. Arms of De Valence ...	53	146. Arms of Deincourt ...	70
87. Arms of Erskine ...	53	147. Arms of Campbell ...	70
88. Arms of Grandison ...	53	148. Frette ...	71
89. Cross Fimbriated ...	54	149. Arms of De Etchingham ...	71
90. Cross Pointed ...	54	150. Trellis Clouée ...	71
91. Greek Cross ...	55	151. Bezan ...	72
92. Latin Cross ...	55	152. Torteau ...	72
93. Tau Cross ...	55	153. Fountain ...	72
94. Cross Quadrate ...	55	154. Annulet ...	72
95. Cross Patriarchal ...	55	155. Shield of Douglas ...	74
96. Cross Fourchée ...	55	156. Shield of Douglas ...	74
97. Arms of De Molines ...	56	157. Shield of Douglas ...	74
98. Arms of Bishop Anthony Bec ...	56	158. Shield of Isle of Man ...	74
99. Arms of William de Vesci ...	56	159. Shield of St. Alban's Abbey...	75
100. Cross Fleurie ...	56	160. Early Martlet ...	77
101. Cross Fleurette ...	56	161. Martlet ...	77
102. Cross Pommée... ..	56	162. Banner of De Barre ...	77
103. Cross Botonée ...	57	163. Dolphin ...	78
104. Cross Crosslet ...	57	164. Arms of De Lucy ...	78
105. Cross Clechée ...	57	165. Escallop ...	78
106. Cross Patée ...	57	166. A, B, C, Crescent, Increscent, Decrescent ...	80
107. Cross Maltese ...	57	167. At Gaze ...	81
108. Cross Potent ...	57	168. Tripping ...	81
109. Cross Avellane ...	57	169. At Speed ...	81
110. Cross Botonée Fitchée ...	57	170. Stag's Head Cabossed ...	81
111. Arms of Le Scrope... ..	58	171. Lion Rampant ...	85
112. Arms of De Radclyffe ...	58	172. Lion Rampant Guardant ...	85
113. Arms of Le Boteler ...	58	173. Lion Passant ...	85
114. Arms of De Bohun, Earl of Hereford... ..	59	174. Lion Passant Guardant ...	85
115. Arms of De Bohun (differenced)... ..	59	175. Lion Statant ...	85
116. Arms of De Montford ...	60	176. Lion Statant Guardant ...	85
117. Arms of De Bray ...	60	177. Lion Sejant ...	86
118. Paly Bendy ...	60	178. Lion Sejant Rampant ...	86
119. Barry Bendy ...	60	179. Lion Couchant ...	86
120. Arms of St. Andrew ...	60	180. Lion Salient ...	86
121. Arms of De Neville ...	60	181. Lion Queue Fourchée ...	86
122. Arms of De Neville ...	60	182. Lion Coward ...	86
123. Arms of De Stafford ...	61	183. Lion's Head ...	87
124. Arms of De Clare ...	61	184. Lion's Face ...	87
124A. Early Shield of De Clare ...	62	185. Lion's Jambe ...	87
125. Arms of De Peyvre ...	62	186. Demi-Lion Rampant ...	87
126. Arms of De Chandos ...	62	187. Arms of England ...	87, 268
127. Arms of De Brian ...	62	188. Arms of Richard I....	88
128. Arms of De Bassett ...	62	189. Arms of Prince John ...	88
129. Arms of De Kyrkeby ...	65	190. Arms of Richard I. ...	88
130. Arms of Blundell ...	65	191. Arms of Le Strange ...	89
131. Arms of De Mortimer ...	65	192. Arms of Giffard ...	89
132. Arms of Darcy... ..	65	193. Arms of Mowbray ...	89
133. Arms of De Wyllers ...	65	194. Arms of De Lacy ...	89
134. Arms of De Balliol... ..	66	195. Arms of De Segrave ...	89
135. Single Tressure Flory ...	66	196. Arms of De Percy ...	90
136. Tressure Flory Counterflory.	66	197. Arms of De Longespée... ..	90
137. Double Tressure Flory ...	66	198. Crest of Black Prince ...	91
138. Arms of Scotland ...	67, 269	199. Crest, &c., Richard II. ...	91
139. Arms of De Waltone ...	68	200. Eagle Shield in Westminster Abbey ...	93
140. Arms of Richard, Earl of Cornwall... ..	68	201. Imperial Eagle... ..	93
141. Flanches ...	69	202. Royal Eagle ...	93
142. Flasques ...	69	203. Arms of Earl of Cornwall ...	94
143. Mascle ...	69	204. Seal of Euphemia Leslie ...	94
144. Rustre ...	69	205. Shield of Piers Gaveston ...	95

NO.	PAGE	NO.	PAGE
206. Arms of Montacute and Monthermer	96	263. Helm of Esquires and Gentlemen	130
207. A Vol	96	264. Heneage Knot	131
208. Arms of De Charlestone	96	265. Arms of the Herald's College	131
209. Arms of De la Mere	96	266. Arms of Lyon Office	132
210. Shield at St. Albans	98	267. Jessant de lys... ..	134
211. Austrian Eagle	98	268, 269. Heraldic Keys	134
212. German Imperial Eagle	99	270. Hastings Badge	134
213. German Eagle, wings erect... ..	99	271, 272, 273. Labels	135
214. French Imperial Eagle	99	274. Lacy Knot	135
215. Badge of Ulster	101	275. Lymphad	137
216. Breys	104	276. Arms of Hastings	137
217. Baron's Coronet	104	277. Coronet of Marquess	138
218. Water Bouget... ..	106	278. Mullet	140
219. Bouchier Knot	106	279. Mullet, Pierced	140
220. Bowen Knot	107	280. Mural Crown	141
221. Caltrap	107	281. Naval Crown	141
222. Castle	108	282. Bourdon	142
223. Celestial Crown	108	283. Panache Crest of Edward Courtenay	143
224. Chapeau of Estate	108	284. Panache Crest of William le Latimer... ..	143
225. Arms of Saxony	108	285. Panache Crest of Edmund Mortimer	143
226. Chess Rook	109	286. Pennon of D'Aubernoun	144
227. Cinquefoil	109	287. Pheon	144
228. Clarions	109	288. Portcullis... ..	144
229. Cockatrice	110	289. Coronet of Prince of Wales	146
230. Collar of York	110	290. Coronet of Queen's Daughters and Younger Sons	146
231. Collar of Lancaster	110	291. Coronet of Queen's Grandchildren	146
232. Crest-Coronet... ..	114	292. Coronet of Queen's Cousins	146
233. Crest-Wreaths	114	293. Quatrefoil	147
234. Crown of H. M. The Queen	115, 275	294. The Ragged Staff Badge	147
235. Dacre Knot and Badges	115	295. Rebus of Abbot Kirton	149
236. Dragon	117	296. Rebus of Bishop Beckington	149
237. Duke's Coronet	117	297. Rebus of Sir John Peché	149
238. Earl's Coronet	118	298, 299. Heraldic Roses	150
239. Eastern Crown	118	300. Rose-en-Soleil... ..	150
240. Electoral Bonnet	119	301. Crest of Hamilton... ..	152
241. Arms of Byron	119	302. Sixfoil	153
242. Estoile	120	303. Arms of Shakespeare	153
243. Fer-de-Moline	121	304. Stafford Knot... ..	153
244. Fermails	121	305. Staple Badge	153
245. Fetter-lock	121	306. Arms of City of London	155
246. Fleur de lys	122	307. Tabard	156
247. Arms of France Ancient	123	308. Badge of James I.	156
248. Arms of France Modern	123	309. Trefoil Slipped	157
249. Arms of Edmund, Earl of Lancaster	123	310. Trumpet	158
250. Arms of Margaret, Queen of Edward I.	123	311. Viscount's Coronet	159
251. Seal of Margaret, Queen of Edward I.	124	312. Shield at St. Michael's Church, St. Albans	159
252. Shield of Edward III., A.D. 1340	125, 269	313. Wake Knot	159
253. Shield of Henry IV., about 1405	125, 269	314. Catherine Wheel	159
254, 255. Fylfots	126	315. Wyvern	159
256. Shield of R. de Gorges	128	316. Seal of Margaret, Queen of Edward I.	163
257. Hawk's Lure	129	317. Seal of Margaret, Lady De Ros... ..	164
258. Hawk's Bells and Jesses	129	318. Seal of Joan, Countess of Surrey	165
259. Helm of the Sovereign	130	319. Seal of Mary, Countess of Pembroke	164
260. Helm of Princes and Nobles	130
261. Helm of Baronets and Knights	130
262. Helm of Esquires and Gentlemen	130

NO.	PAGE	NO.	PAGE
320. Seal of Matilda of Lancaster	167	366. Shield of Earl of Chester	201
321. Seal of Oliver de Bohun	168	367. Shield of Fitz Ralph	202
322. Shield of Earl John de Dreux	168	368. Shield of De Luterell	203
323. Shield of Castile and Leon	169	369. Shield of De Wadsley	203
324. Shield of Henry, Earl of Northumberland	170	370. Shield of De Wortley	204
325. Shield of Mayor of Winchelsea	171	371. Shield of De Mounteney	204
326. Shield of De Valence and Claremont Nesle	172	372. Shield of De Mounteney	204
327. Shield of Camoys and Mortimer	173	373. Shield in St. Alban's Abbey	210
328. Shield of D'Aubigny and Scotland	173	374. Shield of Howard, after Flodden	211
329. Shield of Earl Richard Beauchamp	174	374A. Howard Augmentation	211
330. Four Diagrams illustrative of Marshalling	175	375. Fan-Crest, Richard I.	216
331. 332. Two Diagrams illustrative of Marshalling	175	376. Fan-Crest, Henry de Perci	216
333. 334. 335. Three Diagrams illustrative of Marshalling	176	377. Fan-Crest, Henry de Laci	216
336. Shield of Eldest Sons of Edward I. and II.	182	378. Seal of Alexander de Balliol	217
337. Shield of Black Prince	182	379. Helm, &c., Thomas, Earl of Lancaster	218
338. Label of Lancaster	183	380. Helm, &c., Geoffrey Lutet	219
339. Label of Brittany	183	381. Seal, Sir Robert de Marny	219
340. Label of York	183	382. Seal, William de Wyndesore	221
341. Label of Clarence	184	383. Crest, Sir R. Greyf K.G.	222
342. Label of Henry and John of Lancaster	184	384. Helm, &c., Richard II.	223
343. Label of Thomas of Lancaster	184	385. Helm, &c., Sir Hugh Hastings	224
344. Shield of Holland, of Kent	185	386. Crest-Wreath, Sir William Vernon	224
345. Shield of Henry of Lancaster	186	387. Crest-Wreath, Sir Robert Harcourt	224
346. Shield of Beauchamp of Elmely	187	388. Crest - Wreath, Effigy at Tewkesbury	224
347. Shield of Beauchamp at Carlawerock	187	389. Basinet and Crest-Wreath, Sir H. Stafford	225
348. Shield of Beauchamp of Warwick	188	390. Seal, Earl Robert Bruce	232
349. Shield of Beauchamp of Bletshoe	188	391. Seal, Lord Hungerford	232
350. Shield of Bishop Grandison	189	392. Seal, Sir Robert de Hungerford	233
351. Seal of Bishop Le Despencer	189	393. Badge, Tau and Bell	234
352. Shield of Sir Fulk Fitz Warin	190	394. Ostrich Feather Badge	238
353. Shield of Thomas le Scrope	191	395. 396. Three Ostrich Feathers, Peterborough	238
354. Crescent, for Difference	191	397. Ostrich Feather Badge, Ludlow	239
355. Mullet, for Difference	191	398. Ostrich Feather Badge, Deanery, Peterborough	239
356. Shield of Lord Latimer	191	399. Ostrich Feather Badge, St. Alban's Abbey	239
357. Shield of Neville	191	400. Ostrich Feather Badge, Exeter Cathedral	239
358. Shield of Sir Wm. de Brewys	191	401. Shield "for Peace" of Black Prince	241
359. Shield of Henry, Earl of Worcester	193	402. Ostrich Feather Badge, Seal of Henry IV.	243
360. Shield of Beaufort, before 1397	194	403. Ostrich Feather Badge, Seal of Thomas, Duke of Gloster	243
361. Shield of Beaufort, after 1397	194	404. Ostrich Feather Badge, Garter Plate of John Beaufort	243
362. Shield of Charles, Earl of Worcester	194	405. Seal of Devorguilla Crawford	247
363. Shield of Sir Roger de Clarendon	195	406. Seal of Margaret, Lady Hungerford	248
364. Arms of Radulphus de Arundel	195	407. Seal of Earl Edmund de Mortimer	250
365. Seal of William Fraser	199	408. Seal of Robert Graham	251

NO.	PAGE	NO.	PAGE
409. Seal of Sir Wm. Lindsay ...	251	433. Shield of Prince and Princess of Wales	279
410. Seal of Sir John Drummond ...	252	434. "Lesser George" of the Garter	286
411. Pennon	255	435. Badge of the Thistle	288
412. Pennon of Percy	255	436. Badge of St. Patrick	288
413. Banners and Pennons	256	437. Badge of the Bath, Naval and Military... ..	290
414. Seal of Earl John Holland ...	258	438. Badge of the Bath, Diplo- matic and Civil	291
415. Standard of Sir H. de Staf- ford, K.G.	260	439. Badge of the Star of India... ..	292
416. The Royal Standard	260	440. Victoria Cross... ..	293
417. The First Union Jack	261	441. The Albert Medal	294
418. Banner of St. George	261	442. Seal of Lord Bardolf	319
419. Banner of St. Andrew	261	443. Seal of William Mure	320
420. The Second Union Jack	262	444. Seal of Thomas Monypeny. ...	320
421. The Banner of St. Patrick... ..	262	445. Seal of Richard Stuart	320
422. Red Ensign	263	446. Seal of Earl Thomas de Beauchamp Frontispiece
423. Royal Arms of Stuart Sove- reigns	270	447. Counter-Seal of the same	322
424. Arms of Nassau	270	448. Seal of Earl Richard de Beauchamp Frontispiece
425. Diagram of Arms of William III. and Mary	270	Seven woodcuts from the Seals of the Original Settlers in New England, respectively numbered, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7	323, 324
426. Diagram of Arms of William III. alone	270	449. Seal of Sir Walter Scott, A. D. 1529	330
427. Diagram of Arms of Anne ...	271
428. Arms of Hanover	271
429, 430. Diagrams of Royal Arms	271, 272
431. Crest of England	273
432. Signet Ring of Queen Mary Stuart	274

No. 2.
St. Edward.

No. 1.
St. George.

No. 3.
St Edmund.

P R E F A C E.

THIS little Volume, specially prepared for the use of students at an early period of their study of English Heraldry, commends itself also to those inquirers who may desire to obtain some general information on the same subject, without having any intention to devote to Heraldry much either of their time or of their serious regard.

The success, no less extraordinary than gratifying, of my larger work on Heraldry, led me to hope that a not less favourable reception might be extended to a simpler and much shorter essay, more decidedly elementary in its aim and character, and yet as far as possible within its limits complete. Such a treatise I have endeavoured to produce in this Volume.

Inseparably associated with the History of our Country, and more particularly when our national History becomes a Biography of eminent Englishmen, English Heraldry has the strongest claims upon the attention not only of all Historians, but also of all who desire to become familiar with their writings. In like manner, Heraldry may be studied with no less of advantage than of satisfaction by all Artists, whether Architects, Sculptors, Painters, or Engravers. Nor is it too much to assert that some knowledge of Heraldry, in consequence of its singular and comprehensive utility, ought to be estimated as a necessary element of a liberal education. In confirmation of my own views, I am tempted to quote the following passage from M. GOURDON DE GENOUILLAC'S introduction to his excellent "Grammaire Héraldique," of which a new edition has just been published at Paris :—"Le blason," says M. de Genouillac, "est une langue qui s'est conservée dans sa pureté primitive depuis les siècles, langue dont la connaissance est indispensable aux familles nobles, qui y trouvent un signe d'alliance ou de reconnaissance, aux numismates, aux antiquaires, aux archéologues, enfin à tous les artistes, gens de lettres, &c. ; cependant cette langue est presque inconnue, et la plupart des personnes qui possèdent le droit de porter des armoiries seraient fort en peine de les expliquer selon les termes techniques !" Heraldry, indeed, I believe to be a study worthy to be universally regarded with affectionate respect, as it certainly is eminently qualified to inspire such a sentiment in every class of students.

In this spirit I have here treated the elements of the Heraldry of England, confident that, of those who may accompany me as far as I shall lead them, very many will not be content to stop where I shall take leave of them. Thus much I promise my companions—I will be to them a faithful guide. They may trust to my accuracy. I have made no statement, have adduced no example, nor have I exhibited any illustration, except upon authority. I myself like and admire what is real and true in Heraldry; and it is by the attractiveness of truth and reality that I desire to win for Heraldry fresh friends, and to secure for it firm friendships.

It will be understood that from the authority, the practice, and the associations of the early Heraldry of the best and most artistic eras, I seek to derive a Heraldry which we may rightly consider to be our own, and which we may transmit with honour to our successors. I do not suggest the adoption, for present use, of an obsolete system. But, while I earnestly repudiate the acceptance and the maintenance amongst ourselves of a most degenerate substitute for a noble Science, I do aspire to aid in restoring HERALDRY to its becoming rank, and consequently to its early popularity, now in our own times. This is to revive the fine old Heraldry of the past, to give to it a fresh animation, and to apply it under existing conditions to existing uses and requirements: not, to adjust ourselves to the circumstances of its first development, and to reproduce as copyists its original expressions. It is not by any means a necessary condition of a consistent revival of early Heraldry, that our revived Heraldry should admit no deviation from original usage or precedent. So long as we are thoroughly animated by the spirit of the early Heralds, we may lead our Heraldry onwards with the advance of time. It is for us, indeed, to prepare a Heraldry for the future, no less than to revive true Heraldry in the time now present. We may rightly modify, therefore, and adapt many things, in order to establish a true conformity between our Heraldry and the circumstances of our own era : for example, with advantage as well as propriety we may, in a great measure, substitute Badges for Crests ; we may decline any longer to display the armorial insignia of Ladies upon unsightly and inconvenient Lozenges ; and we shall do well to adopt a style of drawing which will be perfectly heraldic, without being positively unnatural.

The greater number of my Illustrations have been engraved only in outline, with the twofold object of my being thus enabled to increase the number of the examples, and to adapt the engravings themselves to the reception of colour. It will be very desirable for students to blazon the illustrations, or the majority of them, in their proper tinctures : and those who are thoroughly in earnest will not fail to form their own collections of additional examples, which, as a matter of course, they will seek to obtain from original authorities. With the exception of two small groups, my Illustrations, in number 460, have all been executed expressly for this work ; and they all have been drawn on wood and engraved by Mr. R. B. UTTING. The exceptions are thirteen admirable woodcuts of Scottish Seals, all of them good illustrations of Heraldry south of the Tweed, originally engraved for Laing's noble quarto upon "The Ancient Seals of Scotland," recently published in Edinburgh, which have been most kindly lent to me by Mr. H. LAING ; also, seven other woodcuts, lent to me by Mr. W. H. WHITMORE, of Boston, in the United States, and which appeared for the first time in a very interesting volume by that gentleman, published in his own country, under the title of "Elements of Heraldry, with an Essay on the use of Coat-Armour in the United States." The cuts are examples of some of the Seals of Arms, all of them "undeniably engraved in England," which the first settlers in New England took with them from their mother country. Scottish Heraldry, I must add, as in any particulars of law and practice it may differ from our Heraldry on this side of the Tweed, I have left in the able hands of the Heralds of the North: at the same time, however, the Heraldry of which I have been treating has so much that is equally at home on either side of "the border," that I have never hesitated to look for my examples and authorities to both the fair realms which now form one Great Britain.

C. B.

London: August, 1867.

ENGLISH HERALDRY.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY.

Early Popularity of Heraldry in England. Origin of English Heraldry; Definition; Characteristics; Developments; Early Uses; not connected with Earlier Systems. Ancient Heraldry. Past and Present Treatment of the Subject.

“What! Is it possible? not know the figures of Heraldry! Of what could your father be thinking?”

ROB ROY.

No. 4.

HE sentiment unquestionably was his own which Sir Walter Scott taught delightful Die Vernon to express when, with indignant surprise, she asked Frank Osbaldistone of what his father could have been thinking, that he had been permitted to grow up without any knowledge of Heraldry. Sir Walter was right in his estimate of the high value of Heraldry as an element of education: and, in professing herself a votress of the Herald's "gentle science," it was quite right in Die Vernon to suggest to other ladies that it would be well for them if Heraldry should find favour in their eyes also. The age of Rob Roy, however, was far from being in harmony with heraldic associations: nor was the author of "Waverley" himself permitted to accomplish more, than to lead the way to that revival of a popular sympathy with every expression of early Art, which now forms one of the most remarkable characteristics of our own era.

In the olden time, in England, the love of Heraldry, which was prevalent amongst all classes, was based upon an intelligent appreciation of its worthiness. A part of the feudal system of the Middle Ages, and at once derived from the prevailing form of thought and feeling, and imparting to it a brilliant colouring peculiar to itself, Heraldry exercised a powerful influence upon the manners and habits of the people amongst whom it was in use. By our early ancestors, accordingly, as Mr. Montagu has so happily written, "little given to study of any kind, a knowledge of Heraldry was considered indispensable:" to them it was the "outward sign of the spirit of chivalry, the index, also, to a lengthened chronicle of doughty deeds." And this Heraldry grew up, spontaneously and naturally, out of the circumstances and requirements of those times. It was invented and introduced, because it was needed for practical use; it was accepted and cherished, because it did much more than fulfil its avowed purpose. At first, simply useful to distinguish particular individuals, especially in war and at the tournament, English Heraldry soon became popular; and then, with no less rapidity, it rose to high honour and dignity.

From the circumstance that it first found its special use in direct connection with military equipments, knightly exercises, and the mêlée of actual battle, mediæval Heraldry has also been entitled ARMORY. Men wore the ensigns of Heraldry about their persons, embroidered upon the garments that partially covered their armour,—and so they called them Coats-of-Arms: they bore these same ensigns on their shields,—and they called them Shields-of-Arms: and in their Armorial Banners and Pennons they again displayed the very same insignia, floating in the wind high above their heads, from the shafts of their lances.

The Heraldry or Armory of England, an honourable and honoured member of the illustrious family of mediæval European Heraldry, may be defined to be a symbolical and pictorial language, in which figures, devices, and colours are employed instead of letters. Each heraldic composition has its own definite and complete signification, conveyed through its direct connection with some particular individual, family, dignity, or office. Every such heraldic composition, also, is a true legal possession, held and maintained by an express right and title: and it is hereditary, like other real property, in accordance with certain laws and precedents of inheritance. But in this respect heraldic insignia are singular and unlike other property, inasmuch as it is a general rule that they cannot be alienated, exchanged, or transferred otherwise than by inheritance or other lawful succession. Exceptions to this rule, when they are observed occasionally to have occurred, show clearly their own exceptional character, and consequently they confirm the true authority of the rule itself. It will be understood, as a necessary quality of its hereditary nature, that the signification of an heraldic composition, while “definite and complete” in itself, admits of augmentation and expansion through its association with successive generations. Thus, the Royal Shield of EDWARD III. is “complete” as the heraldic symbol of that great monarch, and of the realm under his rule: and yet this same shield, equally “complete” (with one simple modification) as the heraldic symbol of each successive Sovereign till the death of ELIZABETH, has its signification infinitely augmented and expanded through its hereditary association with all the Sovereigns of the Houses of Plantagenet and Tudor.

That true Heraldry, which now is under consideration, appears to have been introduced into England, in all probability from Germany through France, in a very immature condition, in the second half of the twelfth century. Until the concluding quarter of that century, the traces of its existence are faint and few in number. Early in the thirteenth century the new science began to establish itself firmly amongst our ancestors of that age; and it is certain that, as soon as its character and capabilities were in any degree understood aright, it grew speedily into favour; so that in the reign of HENRY III. (A.D. 1216—1272) English Heraldry had confirmed its own claims to be regarded as a Science, by being in possession of a system, a classification, and a technical language of its own.

The Crusades, those extraordinary confederacies without a parallel in the history of civilised nations, were themselves so thoroughly heraldic, that it was only an inevitable result of their existence that they should give a powerful impulse to the establishment and development of Heraldry in the early days of its career.

But Heraldry, from the time of its first appearance in England, was found to be valuable for other uses besides those which so intimately connected it with both real and imitative warfare, with the fierce life-and-death conflict of the battle-field, and with the scarcely less perilous struggle for honour and renown in the lists. Very soon after the Norman Conquest, in consequence of their presence being required to give validity to every species of legal document, SEALS became instruments of the greatest importance; and it would at once be obvious that heraldic insignia, with a representation of the knightly shield upon which they were displayed, were exactly suited to satisfy every requirement of the seal-engraver. By such means Heraldry became interwoven as well with the peaceful concerns of every-day life, as with the display of martial splendour and the turmoil of war.

Many attempts have been made to set aside the opinion that the Heraldry of the Middle Ages in England was a fresh creation, a production of indigenous growth: and great is the ingenuity that has been brought into action to carry back the Heraldry of our own country from the commencement of the thirteenth century through the previous elementary stages of its existence, in order to trace its direct lineal descent from certain decorative and symbolical devices that were in use at much earlier periods. The careful and diligent researches, however, of the most learned Heralds have at present led them almost unanimously to reject all such theories as these, as speculative and uncertain. At the same time, it is an indisputable fact that, in all ages of the world, and amongst all races of men, some form of symbolical expression has been both in use and in favour. And it is equally true that this symbolism, whatever it may have been, has generally been found in some way associated with a military life and with the act of warfare. Soldiers, and particularly those in high command, have always delighted to adorn their shields with devices that sometimes were significant of their own condition or exploits, or sometimes had reference to their country, or even to their families; and, in like manner, it has been a universal custom to display similar devices and figures in military standards of all kinds. At the time of the Conquest, as is shown in the famous Bayeux Tapestry of the Conqueror's Consort, the shields and standards of both Normans and Anglo-Saxons were painted, and perhaps the latter were embroidered, with various figures and devices; but certainly without any heraldic significance or any personal associations being indicated by these figures and devices, which bear a general resemblance to the insignia of the Legions and Cohorts of Imperial Rome. Nos. 5 and 6 give representations of the standards that are introduced into the Bayeux Tapestry. The same species of decoration, consisting chiefly of painted patterns, with discs, stars, crescents, and some other figures, continued in use in our own country until it was superseded by a true Heraldry; and it also may be assumed to have prevailed in England in much earlier times.

Nos. 5 and 6. Lance Flags—Bayeux Tapestry.

In still more remote ages a more decided Heraldry was displayed upon signets, coins, shields, and standards. In this ancient Heraldry, occasionally the important and characteristic quality of hereditary association in certain devices is apparent. Thus, Virgil (Æneid, vii. 657) assigns to Aventinus "insigne paternum" upon his shield—his hereditary device, derived by him from his father. But these devices generally appear to have their significance in a greater or a less degree restricted, amongst the ancients, to certain particular incidents; consequently in all these examples there is nothing to show that the man who bore one device at one time, did not bear another device at another time.* For

* In his recently published "Hand-book of Engraved Gems," Mr. King maintains that "the devices on the signets of the ancients were both hereditary and unalterable, like our armorial bearings;" but, at the same time, he admits that the "armorial bearings," which appear example, Æschylus, the Greek tragedian (B.C. 600), has recorded that Capaneus, when attacking the city of Thebes, bore on his shield the figure of a warrior carrying a lighted torch, with the motto, "I will fire the city!" But, on another occasion, we have reason to believe that the same Capaneus bore quite a different device, applicable to that other occasion; and this deprives these ancient devices, heraldic as they are in their general character, of that special personal association which true Heraldry requires and, indeed, implies. The beautiful painted vases, the works of Greek artists, that are discovered in such extraordinary numbers and in perfect preservation in some parts of Italy, constantly give most striking representations of the shields of ancient Greek warriors and other personages, with heraldic devices displayed upon them. These shields illustrate, in a remarkable manner, both the appropriate significance of particular devices, and the usage then prevalent for a variety of devices to be borne on different occasions by the same individual. Shields upon vases in the collections in the Museum of

"on the shields of the Grecian heroes in the most ancient pictures extant, the Vase-paintings," "seem to have been assumed at the caprice of the individual, like the knights' cognisances at tournaments in the days of chivalry, and not to have been hereditary."—"Hand-book," page 216. Almost immediately, however, Mr. King adds, that traditions exist which represent the mythic heroes bearing "engraved on their signets the same devices that decorated their shields." It would seem that the argument from such traditions would rather indicate the signet-devices to have been arbitrary, than the shield-devices to have been unalterable. While I readily admit the very interesting devices of antiquity to possess decided heraldic attributes, I cannot consider Mr. King to have shown that, as a general rule, they were held by the ancients themselves to have been either "unalterable" or "hereditary." Possibly, further light may be thrown upon the hereditary quality of ancient Heraldry: but, I certainly do not expect to see any evidence adduced, which would establish a line of descent connecting the Mediæval Heraldry of England with any heraldic system of classic antiquity.

the Louvre at Paris, and in the British Museum, where they are easy of access, contain a great variety of devices. The examples, Nos. 7, 8, 9, and 10, are from our own National

No. 7.

No. 8.

No. 9.

No. 10.

Ancient Shields from Greek Vases.

Collections. No. 7, the shield black, the border and the pegasus red; No. 8, the shield black, and the two dolphins white; No. 9, the shield black, with a border adorned with red discs, the serpent white; No. 10, the shield black, with purple border, the three human legs conjoined white. The shields, Nos. 9 and 10, are both borne by the goddess ΑΘΗΝΗ (Minerva); and the remarkable device displayed on No. 10 is also found on the coins of ancient Sicily. Other similar shields display lions, horses, dogs, wild boars, fish, birds, clusters of leaves, chariots and chariot-wheels, votive tripods, serpents, scorpions, with many others, including occasional examples of human figures. In another collection I have seen an anchor and an Amazon's bow.

A device differing from that in No. 10 only in having the conjoined limbs in armour, will be found in our own English Heraldry to be the armorial ensign of the Isle of Man.

This Heraldry of Antiquity is to be regarded as the predecessor, and not as the ancestor of the Heraldry of England. There may be much that is common to both ; but, there is nothing to show the later system to have been a lineal descendant from the earlier. The Heraldry, therefore, that has flourished, declined, and now is in the act of reviving in our own country in almost the full vigour of its best days, I shall treat as an independent science, proceeding from a single source, and from thence flowing onwards with varied fortunes, side by side with the chequered chronicles of England. In the course of its progress from the palmy days of EDWARD III., it has had to encounter, in a degree without precedent or parallel, that most painful and mischievous of trials—the excessive admiration of injudicious friends. Hence, Heraldry was brought into disrepute, and even into contempt, by the very persons who loved it with a genuine but a most unwise love. In process of time, no nonsense appeared too extravagant, and no fable too wild, to be engrafted upon the grave dignity of the Herald's early science. Better times at length have succeeded. Heraldry now has friends and admirers, zealous as of old, whose zeal is guided aright by a sound judgment in alliance with a pure taste. Very much already has been accomplished to sweep away the amazing mass of absurdities and errors which had overwhelmed our English Heraldry, by such men as Nicholas, Nichols, Courthope, Seton, Planché, Walford, Montagu, and Lower : and the good work goes on and prospers, with the most cheering assurances of complete and triumphant success.

CHAPTER II.

EARLY HERALDIC AUTHORITIES.

Seals: Monumental Effigies, &c.: Rolls of Arms, Official Heraldic Records, &c. Earliest Heraldic Shields and Banners. Allusive Quality of Early Armory. Attributed Arms.

“Let us begin at the beginning.”—PURSUIVANT OF ARMS.

AT the head of the earliest existing authorities in English Heraldry are SEALS. To the fortunate circumstance of the legal importance attached to them we are indebted for the preservation of these equally interesting and valuable relics, in great variety and in very considerable numbers. The heraldic evidence of Seals is necessarily of the highest order. They are original works, possessing contemporaneous authority. Produced with peculiar care and approved by their first possessors, their original authenticity is confirmed by their continued use through successive generations.

Having been in use before the introduction and adoption of Heraldry in England, Seals enable us to compare the devices that preceded true Heraldry with the earliest that are truly heraldic: and thus they show that, in many instances, regular coats-of-arms derived their hereditary bearings from similar devices that had been adopted in the same families before the heraldic era. For example: the Seal of John Mundegumri, about A.D. 1175, bears a single fleur-de-lys, not placed upon a shield; and, accordingly, here is seen the origin of the three golden fleurs-de-lys, borne afterwards upon a blue shield by the descendants of this John, the Montgomeries, Earls of Eglintoun. Again: the Seal of Walter Innes, A.D. 1431, displays the shield of arms of his house—three blue mullets (stars generally of five rays) on a field of silver, No. 11; and these mullets

No. 11.—Seal of Walter Innes.

No. 12.—Seal of Wm. Innes.

may be traced to the single star, that appears on the Seal of William Innes, or De Ynays, No. 12, appended to his deed of homage to Edward I., in the Year 1295. I have selected these examples from the "Catalogue of Scottish Seals," published by Mr. Laing, of Edinburgh, that I may be enabled here to refer in the highest terms of admiring commendation to that most excellent work. It is greatly to be desired that a corresponding publication should treat, with equal ability, of the Seals of England which, from the dawn of Heraldry, continue their admirable examples and illustrations throughout its career.

Monumental Effigies, Sepulchral Memorials, early Buildings, and early Stained Glass, frequently are rich in authoritative examples of "the figures of Heraldry." In addition to the various forms and combinations of heraldic composition, these works illustrate the early style of drawing in favour with Heralds during the great eras of mediæval Art, and they have preserved to us most useful and suggestive representations of various devices in their proper heraldic aspect. In many instances the Heraldry of early Monuments and Architecture possesses a peculiar value, arising from the circumstance of the shields of arms and other insignia having been sculptured in low relief or outlined in incised lines, and consequently these devices and compositions retain their original forms: and, in like manner, the original colouring of the Heraldry of Stained Glass remains safe from restoration or destruction, in consequence of the impossibility of re-painting it.

The early written Literature of English Heraldry is calculated to throw but little light upon either its true character or its history. In addition, however, to the various and numerous official documents of the Heralds' College, several examples of one particular class of heraldic record have been preserved, the value of which cannot be too highly estimated. These are ROLLS OF ARMS—long, narrow strips of parchment, on which are written lists of the names and titles of certain personages, with full descriptions of their armorial insignia. The circumstances under which these Rolls were prepared are for the most part unknown: but, the exact accuracy of their statements has been established beyond all question by careful and repeated comparison with Seals and other Monuments, and also with Documents which give only an indirect and yet not the less conclusive corroboration to the records of the Rolls of Arms themselves. The earliest of these Rolls at present known date about A.D. 1250; and since in these earliest Rolls a very decided technical language is uniformly adopted, and the descriptions are all given in palpable accordance with fixed rules which must then have been well understood, we infer that in the course of the first half of the thirteenth century Heralds had framed some system for the regulation of their proceedings, had raised Heraldry to the rank of a Science, had fixed upon certain terms and rules for describing heraldic devices and figures, and had established laws to direct the granting, the assuming, and the bearing arms.

The most interesting of these early heraldic Rolls records, in a metrical form, and in Norman-French, the siege and capture of the fortress of Carlaverock, on the Scottish border, by EDWARD I., in the year 1300. In addition to very curious descriptions of the muster of the Royal troops at Carlisle, their march northwards, and the incidents of the siege (which last have a strange resemblance to what Homer has recorded of incidents that took place during the siege of Troy), this Roll gives some graphic personal sketches of the princes, nobles, bannerets, and knights, whose banners and shields of arms are set forth in it with minute exactness. This Roll, as well as several others, has been published, with translations and very valuable notes.

In the Manuscript Collections of the British Museum also, and of other Libraries both public and private, and in the County Histories, and other works of a cognate character, there are many documents which contain various important records and illustrations of early English Heraldry.

In any references to authorities, that it may appear desirable for me to make in the course of this and the following chapters, I must be as concise as possible. A direct reference to Seals, Effigies, &c., will be necessary in each case : but, in referring to Rolls of Arms it will be sufficient to denote the period of the authority in general terms. Accordingly, I shall refer, not to each particular Roll, but collectively to those of each of the following reigns—HENRY III., EDWARD I., EDWARD II., EDWARD III., and RICHARD II. ; and these references will severally be made thus,—(H. 3), (E. 1), (E. 2), (E. 3), and (R. 2).

Amongst the earliest Shields and Banners of Arms, all of them remarkable for their simplicity, many are found to be without any device whatever, their distinction consisting simply in some peculiarity in the colouring. Such examples may be considered to have been derived from pre-heraldic times, and transmitted, without any change or addition, to later periods. The renowned Banner of the Knights Templars, by them called Beauseant, No. 13, is black above and white below, to denote that, while fierce to their foes, they were gracious to their friends. An ancient

No. 13.—Banner of Templars.

Banner of the Earl of Leicester (H. 3) is white and red, the division being made by a vertical indented line; No. 14. The Shield of the ducal House of Brittany, closely connected with the Royal Family of England, is simply of the fur ermine; No. 15. The Shield of Waldegrave is silver and red, as in No. 16: and that of Fitz Warine (H. 3), also of silver and red, is treated as in No. 17.

No. 14.
Banner of Leicester.

No. 15.—Brittany. No. 16.—Waldegrave. No. 17.—Fitz Warine.

Some of the earliest of the simple devices of true Heraldry were evidently adopted from the structural formation (or from a structural strengthening) of the Shields, on which they were displayed. Thus, a raised border, and bands of metal variously disposed in order to impart additional strength to a shield, with distinct colouring, would produce a series of heraldic compositions. A good example occurs in the shield of an early Effigy at Whitworth, Durham, No. 18, in which

No. 18.—Shield at Whitworth.

the heads of the rivets or screws employed to fix the border on the shield, appear to have been made to assume the character of heraldic additions to the simple border and horizontal bands. Other primary devices of the same simple order, which in like manner may have had a structural origin, I shall consider in detail in subsequent chapters. (See particularly Chapter VI.)

The central boss, at once an appropriate ornament of an early shield, and an important addition to its defensive qualities, when extended in the form of decorative metal-work, would readily suggest a variety of heraldic figures, and amongst others several beautiful modifications of a simple cruciform device which it might be made to assume. The figure called an escarbuncle, No. 19, is simply a shield-boss developed into decorative structural metal-work. This figure appears in the Temple Church, London, upon the shield of an Effigy, which Mr. J. Gough Nichols has shown to have been incorrectly attributed to Geoffrey de Mandeville, Earl of Essex.

No. 19.—The Escarbuncle.

The greater number of the earliest devices that appear in English Heraldry were adopted for the express purpose of their having some allusive association, through a similarity of sound in their own names with the names and titles of certain persons, dignities, and places. In exact accordance with the principles and aim of primitive mediæval Heraldry, and in perfect harmony with the sentiments and requirements of the age in which it grew up into a science, devices of this kind addressed themselves in very plain and expressive language to the men of their own era. In them they saw the kind of symbolical writing that they could remember, as well as understand. They also evidently liked the quaint style of suggestiveness that was a characteristic of these allusive devices : and, it is more than probable that there frequently lurked in them a humorous significance, which by no means tended to detract from their popularity. Devices of this same order have never ceased to be in favour with Heralds and lovers of Heraldry. They were used in the sixteenth century at least as commonly as in the thirteenth ; but, as would be expected, in the later period they often became complicated, far-fetched, and extravagant.

This allusive quality, distinguished in English Heraldry as "canting," has commonly been misunderstood, and therefore incorrectly estimated, by modern writers, who have supposed it to be a fantastic conceit of the Heralds of a degenerate age. By writers such as these, accordingly, all "canting arms" (by French Heralds called "armes parlantes") have been absurdly assigned to a separate class, in their estimation having an inferior heraldic grade.

The prevalence of the allusive quality in early arms may be assumed to have been even more general than is now apparent, since so many of the original echoes and allusions have become obscured or altogether lost in the lapse of time, and through the changes that have taken place since the accession of HENRY III. in the French language and in our own also. The use of the Latin language, again, in the Middle Ages led, at later periods, to translations of names ; French names, too, were translated in the same manner into English equivalents : and, at other times, the sound of a Latin or a French (Anglo-Norman) name was transferred to an English representative having a somewhat similar sound, without the slightest reference to the original signification. Who, for example, now associates the well-known MORTIMERS, through the forgotten exploit of a Crusader ancestor, a "De Mortuo Mari," with the Dead Sea ? Or, who in the name of MONTAGU now recognises instinctively the original allusion to a mountain with its sharply peaked crests, and so discerns the probable allusive origin of the sharp triple points of the devices on the old Montacute shield, No. 20? It is easy to see how much must have been unconsciously done, by such changes in names and their associations, to obliterate what once was clear, significant, and expressive. I must be content here to give, simply by way of explanatory illustration, a very few examples of allusive arms; and, in so doing, it may be well for me to observe that the early Heralds of our country always employed the French language as it was spoken in their own times in England as well as in France. In the time of HENRY III., G. de Lucy has for his arms three lucies—fish now known as pike: Robert Quency has a quintefueil—a flower of five leaves: Thos. Corbett has two corbeaux—ravens: A. de Swyneburne has "trois testes de senglier"—three heads of the wild boar, or swine: (E 2), Sir R. de Eschales has six escallops—shells: Sir G. de Trompintoun, of Trumpington, near Cambridge, has two trompes—trumpets: Sir J. Bordoun has three bourdons—pilgrim's staves: Sir G. Rossel has three roses: and Sir O. Heron has the same number of herons. So also, for the Spanish provinces Castile and Leon, a castle and a lion: for Falconer, a falcon: Butler, cups: Forester, bugle-horns: Arundel, hirondelles—swallows: Wingfield, wings: Shelley, shells: Pigot, pick-axes: Leveson, leaves: and Martel, martels—hammers. The Broom-plant with its seed-pods, in Latin Planta genista, No. 21, gave their name to the PLANTA-

No. 20.
Shield of Montacute.

No. 21.—Planta Genista.

GENETS. I shall hereafter add several other curious examples of devices of this class, when treating of Badges, Rebuses, and Mottoes.

There is one class of early arms, which it is important that students of Armory should observe with especial care, lest they be led by them into unexpected errors. These are arms that were invented after Heraldry had been established, and then were assigned to personages of historical eminence who had lived and died before the true heraldic era. In the days in which every person of prominence bore heraldic arms, and when Heraldry had attained to high renown, it was natural enough to consider that suitable armorial devices and compositions should be assigned to the men of mark in earlier ages, both to distinguish them in accordance with the usage then prevalent, and to treat their memory with becoming honour. No proof can be shown that the arms said to have been borne by WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR are not of this order—made for him, that is, and attributed to him in after times, but of which he himself had no knowledge. These arms, No. 22, differ from the true Royal Insignia of England only in there being two, instead of three, lions displayed upon the shield. The arms of EDWARD THE CONFESSOR, No. 2, were certainly devised long after his death, and they appear to have been suggested to the heralds of HENRY III. by one of the Confessor's coins: the shield is blue, and the cross and five birds (martlets) are gold. In like manner, the arms attributed to the earlier Saxon Sovereigns of England, No. 23, a gold cross upon blue, are really not earlier than the thirteenth century. The arms, No. 2, having been assigned to ST. EDWARD, a patron saint of mediæval England, were long regarded with peculiar reverence. I have placed them, drawn from a fine shield of the thirteenth century in Westminster Abbey, to take a part in forming a group at the head of my Preface, with the shields of the two other saintly Patrons of "old England," ST. GEORGE and ST. EDMUND, No. 1 and No. 3—a red cross on a silver shield, and three golden crowns upon a shield of blue.

No. 22.—WILLIAM I.

No. 23.—Saxon Princes.

CHAPTER III.

The English Heraldry that is now in existence. First Debasement of Heraldry. Later Debasement. Revival of English Heraldry. Heraldic Art.

“Sans changer.”—MOTTO OF STANLEY.

ENGLISH Heraldry, as it exists amongst us in our own times, is the very same Heraldry that flourished under the kindly influences of the greatest of the Plantagenets. It is not of a new, but of the old, Heraldry of England that I am setting forth the elements. Our Heraldry has had to pass from good days to bad ones : and, having gone through the worst of bad days, the circle at length has revolved, so that we are witnessing the happy change of a vigorous heraldic revival. Heraldry already enjoys a very great popularity ; and, without a doubt, it will become still more popular, in the degree that its utility is better and more generally understood. For its complete ultimate success, the present revival of true English Heraldry must mainly depend upon the manner in which we apply the lessons that may be learned by us, no less from the warnings of the recent evil days of the science, than from the example of the brilliant ones that preceded them long ago. Nor should we deal faithfully with our revived Heraldry, were we not to form a just estimate of whatever was imperfect in the best era of its early history, in order to apply to present improvement the lessons that thus also may be learned. It must be admitted that the Heralds of the seventeenth century, following the footsteps of some of their immediate predecessors, led the way towards the thorough debasement of their own science. Their example was not without effect upon those who followed them—men quite equal to the perpetration of whatever had not been already done to bring Heraldry into contempt. This was accomplished first, by gravely discoursing, in early heraldic language, upon the imaginary Heraldry of the patriarchal and antediluvian worthies: making a true coat of arms of Joseph's "coat of many colours," giving armorial ensigns to David and Gideon, to Samson and Joshua, to "that worthy gentleman Japheth," to Jubal and Tubal-Cain, and crowning the whole by declaring that our common progenitor, Adam, bore on his own red shield Eve's shield of silver, after the mediæval fashion that would denote his wife to have been an heiress!

Then there set in a flood of allegorical and fantastic absurdities, by which the fair domain of Heraldry was absolutely overwhelmed. Wild and strange speculations, in a truly vain philosophy, interwoven with distorted images of both the myths and the veritable records of classic antiquity, were either deduced from armorial blazonry, or set forth as the sources from whence it was developed. Fables and anecdotes, having reference to less remote eras, were produced in great variety and in copious abundance. The presence in blazon of animated beings of whatsoever kinds, whether real or fabulous, led to rambling disquisitions in the most ludicrously unnatural of imaginary Natural History. From every variety also of inanimate figure and device, the simplest no less than the more elaborate, after the same fashion some "moral" was sought to be extracted. The technical language, too, of the early Heralds, had its expressive simplicity travestied by a complicated jargon, replete with marvellous assertions, absurd doctrines, covert allusions devoid of consistent significance, quaint and yet trivial conceits, and bombastic rhapsodies. Even the nomenclature of the Tinctures was not exempt from a characteristic course of "treatment," two distinctive additional sets of titles for gold, silver, blue, red, &c., having been devised and substituted for those in general use (see Chapter V.); of these the one set was derived from the names of the Planets, and employed to emblazon the insignia of Sovereign Princes; and the other set, derived from the names of Jewels, was applied to the arms of Nobles. In the midst of all the rubbish, however, which they thus delighted to accumulate, there may generally be discovered in the works of writers of this class, here and there, references to earlier usages and illustrations of original principles which, in the extreme dearth of genuine early heraldic literature, are both interesting and of real value. Nor are these writings without their value, estimated from another point of view, as contemporaneous and unconscious commentaries upon the history of their own times. It must be added that, in more than a few instances, beneath the surface there lurks a vein of both political and personal allusion, of which the point and bearing now are altogether lost, or at the most are only open to conjecture and surmise. And, again, even in their most extravagant and frivolous lucubrations, the heraldic writers of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries are not without touches of humour; as when Gerand Legh (A.D. 1562), discoursing of "beastes," remarks of the "Ramme" that in "aucthoritye he is a Duke, for hee hath the leadying of multitudes and flockes of his own kynde;" and of the ass, "I could write much of this beaste, but that it might be thought it were to mine own glorie."

The adoption of additional quarterings for the purpose of display, and the introduction of more complicated compositions in the time of HENRY VIII., were speedily followed by the substitution of pictorial representations, often of a most frivolous and inconsistent character, and many of them altogether unintelligible without written explanations, instead of the simple, dignified, and expressive insignia of true Heraldry. For example, in the year 1760, a grant of arms was made to a Lincolnshire family named Tetlow, which, with thirteen other figures, includes the representation of a book duly clasped and ornamented, having on it a silver penny, upon which is written the Lord's Prayer; while above the book rests a dove, holding in its beak a crow-quill! This was to commemorate one of the family having, with a crow-quill, actually achieved the exploit of writing the Lord's Prayer within the compass of a silver penny. Amongst the most objectionable of the arms of this class are those which were granted to distinguished naval and military officers—arms, that certainly ought to have conferred fresh honour on illustrious names, instead of inflicting dishonour upon Heraldry itself. Battles by sea and land, landscapes and sea views and fortified cities, flags of all kinds, with medals and ribbons, all of them intermixed with devices not quite so unheraldic, abound in these extravagant compositions. The arms of Lord Nelson, and still more recently those of General Lord Gough, may be specified as flagrant examples of this degenerate pictorial Heraldry. The Duke of Wellington happily escaped a similar infliction. It would be but too easy to enumerate other equally inconsistent and unheraldic compositions: but, I must be content to refer only to the armorial shield granted to the great astronomer, Sir John Herschel, on which is displayed his forty-feet reflecting telescope, with all its apparatus! These, and all such violations of heraldic truth and consistency, though in some instances they are of very recent date, are now to be assigned to a closed chapter in the history of English Heraldry.

In our present revival of English Heraldry, it is essential that we impress upon our minds a correct conception of the two-fold character of all Heraldry—that it is a Science, and also that it is an Art. We have to vindicate the reputation of our Heraldry, as well in the one capacity as in the other. Of very noble heraldic Art we happily possess original examples in great numbers, which have been bequeathed to us, as a precious inheritance, from “the brave days of old.” The style of Art that we see exemplified in these early authorities we may accept almost unreservedly as our own style; and we must aspire to sympathise heartily with their genuine heraldic feeling. In our representation, also, of almost all inanimate and natural objects in our own armorial compositions, as a general rule, we may trust confidently to the same good guidance. The early method of representation, indeed, must form the basis of our system of treatment; and, we may faithfully adhere to this rule, and yet occasionally we may find it to be desirable that the form and the accessories of some devices should be adapted to modern associations. In truth, it is not by merely copying the works of even the greatest of the early heraldic artists, that we are to become masters in heraldic Art. When the copies are good, copying is always valuable, as a branch of study; but, if it be our highest and only aim to reproduce the expressions of other men’s thoughts, then copying is worse than worthless. What we have to do is to express our heraldic Art in the spirit of the early Heralds, to keep it in harmony with what, in the best of the early days, they would have accepted as the highest heraldic Art, and at the same time to show that our heraldic Art in very truth is our own.

The treatment of animate creatures in Heraldry requires a certain kind, and also a certain degree, of conventionalism.

Here, as before, in the early Heralds we have excellent masters ; but, here we must follow their teaching with more of reserve, and with cautious steps. We recognise the happy consistency of the conventionalism which they displayed in their representation of animate creatures, without any purpose to adopt it in the same degree with them. Had the early Heralds been more familiar with the living presence of the various creatures that they summoned to enter into their service, without a doubt they would have represented them with a much closer conformity to Nature. We must apply our better knowledge, as we may feel confident the early Heralds would have applied a similar knowledge had they been able to have acquired it. Heraldic animals of every kind—lions, eagles, dolphins, and all others—must be so far subjected to a conventional treatment, that they will not exhibit a strictly natural appearance : and, on the other hand, being carefully preserved from all exaggerated conventionalisms, they must approach as near to Nature as a definite conventional rendering of natural truth will admit. The lions of the early Heralds, spirited beasts always, generally show a decided disposition to exhibit their heraldic sympathies in excess. They have in them rather too much that is heraldic conventionalism, and not quite enough that is natural lion. And, with the first symptoms of decline in heraldic Art, the treatment of lions showed signs of a tendency to carry conventionalism to the utmost extravagance. The same remarks are applicable to eagles. It must be added, however, that truly admirable examples of heraldic animals occasionally may be found as late even as the commencement of the sixteenth century, as in the chantry of Abbot Ramryge, in the Abbey Church at St. Alban's, and in King's College Chapel at Cambridge. It must be our care to blend together the true attributes of the living lion and eagle, and those also of other living creatures, with the traditional peculiarities of their heraldic representatives. And we must extend the corresponding application of the same principles of treatment to imaginary beings and heraldic monsters, as they occur in our Heraldry. The shield, No. 24, of Prince JOHN OF ELTHAM, younger brother of EDWARD III., finely sculptured with his effigy in alabaster, in Westminster Abbey (A.D. 1336), and in perfect preservation, gives us characteristic examples of lions of the best heraldic era, their frames, attenuated as they are, being perfect types of fierce elasticity. With this shield may be grouped others, having admirably suggestive examples of heraldic lions of a somewhat later date, which are preserved upon the monuments of EDWARD III. and the BLACK PRINCE, severally at Westminster and Canterbury. I shall refer to these fine shields again, and to other admirable examples with them, hereafter (Chapter IX.). The conventionalism in all these examples, however felicitous the manner in which it is treated in them, is very decidedly exaggerated. Without being so attenuated and so lengthy in their bodies, these lions might have been at least as thoroughly heraldic. These examples, and others such as these, are not the less valuable to us because their teaching includes an illustration of the excesses that we must always be careful to avoid. I may here observe, that on the subject of armorial Art I leave my examples (all of them selected from the most characteristic authorities, and engraved with scrupulous fidelity) for the most part to convey their own lessons and suggestions: my own suggestion to students being that, in such living creatures as they may represent in their compositions, while they are careful to preserve heraldic consistency and to express heraldic feeling, they exhibit beauty of form coupled with freedom of action and an appropriate expression. "Freedom of action" I intend to imply more than such skilful drawing, as will impart to any particular creature the idea of free movement of frame and limb: it refers also to repeated representations of the same creature, under the same heraldic conditions of motive and attitude. And, here "freedom of action" implies those slight, yet significant, modifications of minor details which, without in the least degree affecting armorial truth, prevent even the semblance of monotonous reiteration. Thus, at Beverley, in the Percy Shrine in the Minster, upon a shield of England the three lions are all heraldically the same; but, there is nothing of sameness in them nevertheless, because in each one there is some little variety in the turn of the head, or in the placing of the paws, or in the sweep of the tail. And again, in Westminster Hall, the favourite badge of Richard II., a white hart, chained, and in an attitude of rest, is repeated as many as eighty-three times ; and all are equally consistent with heraldic truth and accuracy, without any one of them being an exact counterpart of any other. In Nos. 25 and 26 two examples are shown from this remarkable series of representations of this beautiful badge, each one different from the other, and yet both really the same.

No. 24.—Prince JOHN OF ELTHAM, A.D. 1336.

No. 25.

No. 26.

Badge of RICHARD II., Westminster Hall.

CHAPTER IV.

THE GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY.

SECTION I.

The Language of Heraldry. The Nomenclature. Style and Forms of Expression. Blazon. The Shield: its Parts, Points, Divisions, Dividing Lines, Varieties of Form, and Heraldic Treatment.

“The shield hangs down on every breast.”—LORD OF THE ISLES.

THE LANGUAGE OF HERALDRY.—The original language of English Heraldry was the Norman-French, which may also be designated Anglo-Norman, habitually spoken at the Court of England in the early heraldic era. After a while, a mixed language succeeded, compounded of English and the original Norman-French; and this mixed language still continues in use.

NOMENCLATURE.—Like its language, the Nomenclature of English Heraldry is of a mixed character, in part technical and peculiar to itself, and in part the same that is in common use. Thus, many of the figures and devices of Heraldry have their peculiar heraldic names and titles, while still more bear their ordinary designations. Descriptive terms, whether expressed in English or in French (Anglo-Norman), are generally employed with a special heraldic intention and significance. In the earliest Roll of Arms known to be now in existence, which was compiled (as appears from internal evidence) between the years 1240 and 1245, the Nomenclature is the same that is found in Rolls and other heraldic documents of a later date. This fact of the existence of a definite Nomenclature at that time, proves that before the middle of the thirteenth century the Heraldry of England had been subjected to a systematic course of treatment, and had been established and recognised as a distinct and independent Science.

STYLE AND FORMS OF EXPRESSION.—With the Nomenclature, a settled Style and certain fixed technical Forms of Expression were introduced and accepted in the first half of the thirteenth century; and, since that period, the Style and Forms of Expression have undergone only such comparatively slight modifications as tended to render them both more complete and more consistent. As it was at the first, it still is the essence of heraldic language to be concise yet complete, expressive, and also abounding in suggestions. Not a syllable is expressed that is not absolutely necessary; not a syllable omitted, the absence of which might possibly lead to any doubt or uncertainty. In the more matured style, the repetition of any important word in the same sentence is scrupulously avoided; and, where it would be required, another form of expression is substituted in its stead. Much meaning also is left to be implied and understood, through inference, either based upon certain accepted rules and established heraldic usages for the arrangement of the words and clauses of a sentence, or derived from the natural qualities and characteristic conditions of certain figures and devices: but, nothing is ever left to be inferred when an uncertain inference might possibly be adopted, or that can be understood clearly and with certainty only by means of an explicit statement. Superfluous words and particles of all kinds are altogether omitted. Descriptive epithets follow the nouns to which they refer: as, a red cross is styled a cross gules. The general rules, by which the arrangement of the words in heraldic descriptive sentences is determined, will be found in the last subdivision of this chapter. Examples of heraldic Language, Nomenclature, Style and Forms of Expression, will be given in abundance throughout the following chapters and sections of this treatise. With these examples students will do well to familiarise themselves, by repeating them in writing: then, let them prepare additional examples for that "practice," which (as Parker's "Glossary of Heraldry" says, p. 60) "alone will make perfect," by writing down correct descriptions of heraldic compositions from the compositions themselves; after which process they may advantageously reverse the order of their study, and make drawings of these same (or, if they prefer it, of some other) heraldic compositions from their own written descriptions of them.

When any heraldic description of a figure, device, or composition has been completed, a statement is made to signify the person, family, community, or realm whose armorial ensign it may be. This is done by simply writing the appropriate name, after the last word of the description; or, by prefixing the word "for" before the name when it is placed in the same position. Thus, a description of the three lions of England is to be followed by the word—"ENGLAND;" or, by the formula—"for ENGLAND." If preferred, with equal consistency the arrangement may be reversed, and the Name, with or without the prefix "for," may precede the description: thus—"ENGLAND," or "For ENGLAND," three lions, &c. It is to be borne in remembrance, that armorial ensigns are very generally attached to Names, and—with the exception of Sovereign Princes—by comparison but rarely to Titles and Dignities.

BLAZON, BLAZONING, BLAZONRY.—When a knight entered the lists at a tournament, his presence was announced by sound of trumpet or horn, after which the officers of arms, the official Heralds, declared his armorial insignia—they “blazoned” his Arms. This term, derived from the German word “blasen,” signifying “to blow a blast on a horn” (or, as one eminent German Herald prefers, from the old German word “blaze” or “blasse,” “a mark” or “sign”), in Heraldry denotes either to describe any armorial figure, device, or composition in correct heraldic language; or to represent such figure, device, or composition accurately in form, position, arrangement, and colouring. This description and representation may be distinguished as blazoning and blazonry, the verb “to blazon” being used in either sense. The word “blazon” also, as a noun, may be employed with a general and comprehensive signification to denote “Heraldry.”

THE SHIELD :—ITS PARTS, POINTS, AND DIVISIONS.—Their Shield, which the knights of the Middle Ages derived from the military usage of antiquity, and which contributed in so important a degree to their own defensive equipment, was considered by those armour-clad warriors to be peculiarly qualified to display their heraldic blazonry. And, in later times, when armour had ceased to be worn, and when shields no longer were actually used, a Shield continued to be regarded as the most appropriate vehicle for the same display. The Shield, then, which with its armorial devices constitutes a Shield of Arms, always is considered to display its blazonry upon its face or external surface. This blazoned surface of his shield the bearer, when holding it before his person, presents (or would present, were he so to hold it) towards those who confront him. The right and the left sides of the person of the bearer of a Shield, consequently, are covered by the right and left (in heraldic language, the dexter and sinister) sides of his shield: and so, from this it follows that the dexter and sinister sides of a Shield of Arms are severally opposite to the left and the right hands of all observers. The Parts and Points of an heraldic Shield, which is also entitled an "Escutcheon," are thus distinguished:—

No. 27. A, The Chief: B, The Base:

C, The Dexter Side: D, The Sinister Side:

E, The Dexter Chief: F, The Sinister Chief:

G, The Middle Chief: H, The Dexter Base:

I, The Sinister Base: K, The Middle Base:

L, The Honour Point: M, The Fesse Point.

No. 27.

In blazoning the Divisions of a Shield, the term "Per," signifying "by" or "by means of," is employed sometimes alone, and sometimes (having the same signification) with the word "parted" or "party." The primary Divisions of a Shield are indicated in the following diagrams, Nos. 28—35:—

No. 28. Per Pale, or Parted per Pale, or Party per Pale.

No. 29. Per Fesse, or Parted per Fesse.

No. 30. (Nos. 28 and 29 together) Per Cross, or Quarterly.

No. 31. Per Bend.

No. 32. Per Bend Sinister.

No. 33. (Nos. 31 and 32 together) Per Saltire.

No. 34. Per Chevron.

No. 35. Per Tierce, or Tiercée (divided into three equal divisions by two vertical lines).

A Shield may be further divided and subdivided, thus:—

No. 36.

No. 37.

It may be divided into any number of Quarterings by lines drawn per pale and per fesse, cutting each other, as in No. 36, which Shield is quarterly of eight: in like manner the Quarterings of any Shield, whatever their number (which must be an even number), are blazoned as, quarterly of twelve, &c. This, to whatever extent the dividing of the Shield may be carried, is simple Quartering. Again: a quartered Shield may have one or more of its primary quarters, or every one of them, quartered: this, which is the subdivision of a part, the quartering of quarters, is compound Quartering: for example, in No. 37, the Shield is first divided into the four primary quarters, severally marked A, B, C, D; then, so far as the quarters A, B, D are concerned, the “simple quartering” is subjected to the process of “compound quartering,” and quarters A, C are quarters quarterly, and B. is a quarter quarterly of six, while C remains unaffected by the secondary process. The terms “quarterly quartering” and “quarterly quartered” are used to signify such secondary quartering as is exemplified in A, B, D of No. 37. The four primary quarters (A, B, C, D, of No. 37) are distinguished as Grand Quarters: consequently, the quarter B of this example is the second grand quarter, quarterly of six. This term "Grand Quarter" may be employed to distinguish any primary quarter that is "quarterly quartered."

DIVIDING and BORDER LINES, in addition to simple right lines and curves, assume the forms that are represented in the next diagram, No. 38:—

- | | |
|--|--|
| No. 38. A. Indented | |
| B. Dancette | |
| C. Wavy or Undée ... | |
| D. Engrailed | |
| E. Invected | |
| F. Embattled | |
| G. Ragulée | |
| H. Nebulée
(2 varieties) | |
| I. Dovetail | |

THE SHIELD: ITS VARIETIES OF FORM.—The front face of an heraldic Shield is generally flat; but sometimes the curved edges are made to appear as if they had been slightly rounded off. Some early Shields are represented as bowed—hollowed, that is, in order to cover more closely the person of the bearer, and consequently having a convex external contour, as in No. 39. In early examples of bowed Shields the whole of the armorial blazonry is generally displayed on the face of that portion of the Shield which is shown. A ridge, dividing them in pale, but not necessarily in any way acting as an heraldic dividing line, appears in many Shields, and particularly in those of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. The large elongated Shields that have been entitled "kite-shaped," and which were in use in the days of RICHARD I. and amongst the Barons of Magna Charta, were superseded by the smaller "heater-shaped"

No. 39.

No. 40.

No. 42.

No. 41.

Shield as early as the reign of HENRY III. The most beautiful forms of this Shield are represented in Nos. 40, 41, and 42 : of these, No. 40 has its curves described about the sides of an inverted equilateral triangle, and then they are prolonged by vertical lines towards the chief : in Nos. 41, 42, the sides curve from the chief to the base. The forms of Shields admit of various slight modifications, to adjust them to varying conditions. Towards the close of the fourteenth century the form of the Shield is found to undergo some singular changes : and, at later periods, changes in form of this kind became generally prevalent. Nos. 43, 44, exemplify such changes as these : they also show the curved notch that was cut in the dexter chief of the Shields of the same periods, to permit the lance to pass through it as the Shield hung down on the breast: a Shield so pierced is said to be à bouche. The Surface of the Shield, No. 43, which is in the Episcopal palace at Exeter, is wrought into a series of shallow hollows, which curve gracefully from the central ridge, some to the dexter, and others to the sinister. Such a Shield as this may be consistently used in our own Heraldry: but, since now we do not associate lances laid in rest with our heraldic Shields, it appears desirable that we should not draw our Shields à bouche. In recent Heraldry the Shield has commonly been made to appear such an unsightly and un-heraldic deformity as is represented in No. 45. Instead of a true heraldic Shield also, a rounded oval with a convex surface, called a cartouche, or cartouche shield, No. 46, is occasionally used for the display of armorial blazonry; or a circle is substituted for such an oval. These cartouches probably owe their origin to the usage of placing a Garter of the Order about a Shield (prevalent in the fifteenth century), and to the subsequent omission of the Shield. A Lozenge, No. 47, takes the place of a Shield to bear the arms of Ladies, with the sole exception of the Sovereign: this very inconvenient substitute for the heraldic Shield was introduced early in the fourteenth century.

No. 43.

No. 44.

THE SHIELD: ITS HERALDIC TREATMENT.—When a Shield is represented as standing erect, it is not necessary to specify that fact, since such a position may be assumed for a Shield unless another be set forth in blazoning. Shields are commonly made to appear suspended by the guige, or shield-belt (which was worn by Knights to sustain and secure their Shields to their persons) ; in some Seals and generally in architectural compositions, Shields-of-Arms appear suspended, erect, from their guiges ; at Westminster some of the earliest Shields are thus suspended, with a very happy effect, from two points of suspension, the guige passing over sculptured heads, as in No. 48, the Arms of Provence, borne by ALIANORE of Provence, Queen of HENRY III.—the shield is gold, and on it are blazoned

No. 48.
Arms of Provence, Westminster Abbey.

No. 49.
Shield Couché.

four red pallets. In Seals, the suspended Shield is generally represented hanging by the sinister-chief angle, as in No. 49 ; and it hangs thus diagonally from below the helm. A Shield thus placed is said to be "couché." This arrangement is also occasionally adopted, when a Shield or an Achievement of arms is not placed upon a Seal.

The entire surface of every Shield is termed the "Field." The same term is also applied to every plain surface. A Shield is said to be "borne" by the personage to whom it belongs : and, in its turn, the Shield "bears" whatever figures and devices may be displayed upon it ; whence, all these figures and devices are entitled "Bearings" or "Armorial Bearings." All figures and devices are also styled "Charges," and they are said to be "charged" upon a Shield, Banner, or Surcoat, or upon one another. In any heraldic composition, unless some other arrangement be particularly specified, the principal figure or device is placed in the centre of the Shield, and the other charges are displayed over the entire field of the Shield. In blazoning, the field of the Shield is always first noticed and described : next follow the charges that rest upon the field of the Shield itself : then descriptions are given of the secondary bearings that are charged upon others of greater importance. As a general rule, of several charges which all alike rest immediately upon the field of the Shield the most important is the first to be blazoned ; so that the arrangement of blazoning is determined by the comparative dignity of the bearings, as well as by the degree in which charges are nearer to the field and further from beholders. In some cases, however, a bearing charged upon the field of a Shield and many times repeated on a small scale, is blazoned (for the sake of simplicity and clearness of expression) next to the field of the Shield itself :—thus, if a lion be charged on the field of a Shield, and a considerable number of crosses surround the lion, and, like him, are placed on the field of the Shield also—the field of the Shield is blazoned first, the crosses second, and the lion third ; and, if a crescent (or other bearing) be charged upon the lion's shoulder, it is the last in the blazon. In quartered Shields the blazoning commences afresh with each quartering. In blazoning armorial banners and horse-trappings, the latter often gorgeously enriched with heraldic blazonry, the dexter side of a flag is always next to the staff, and the head of a horse is supposed always to be looking towards the dexter.

CHAPTER V.

THE GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY.

SECTION II.

The Tinctures: Metals, Colours. Furs. Varied Fields. Law of Tinctures. Counterchanging. Diaper. Disposition. Blazoning in Tinctures.

“All the devices blazoned on the Shield
In their own tinct.”—ELAINE.

IN English Heraldry the TINCTURES comprise Two Metals, Five Colours, and Eight Furs. They are symbolised or indicated by dots and lines—a very convenient system, said to have been introduced, about the year 1630, by an Italian named Silvestre de Petrasancta. Some such symbolisation, however, may occasionally be found in anticipation of Petrasancta. The system now in use was not generally adopted till the commencement of the last century. The Metals, Colours, and Furs are named, their names are abbreviated, and they are severally indicated, as follows :—

TWO METALS.

	TITLES.	ABBREVIATIONS.	SYMBOLISATION.
1. Gold	Or	Or.	No. 50.
2. Silver	Argent	Arg.	No. 51.

FIVE COLOURS.

	TITLES.	ABBREVIATIONS.	SYMBOLISATION.
1. Blue	Azure	Az.	No. 52.
2. Red	Gules	Gu.	No. 53.
3. Black	Sable	Sa.	No. 54.
4. Green	Vert	Vert	No. 55.
5. Purple	Purple ...	Purp.	No. 56.

(In French Heraldry, Green is Sinople.)

No. 57.

No. 58.

No. 59.

No. 60.

No. 61.

No. 62.

No. 63.

No. 64.

No. 65.

EIGHT FURS (not abbreviated).

TITLES.

1. Ermine,—black spots on white No. 57.
2. Ermines,—white spots on black No. 58.
3. Erminois,—black spots on gold No. 59.
4. Pean,—gold spots on black No. 60.
5. Vair.....Nos. 61, 62.
6. Counter Vair No. 63.
7. Potent No. 64.
8. Counter Potent No. 65.

Two other Colours, or tints of Colour, sometimes used, are no longer retained in English Heraldry—Tenne, a tawny or orange colour, indicated by vertical lines crossing those of Purpure: and Murrey or Sanguine, a dark crimson red, indicated by diagonal lines from both dexter and sinister, crossing each other. The Furs, Nos. 58, 59, 60, 63, 64, and 65, are of comparatively rare occurrence, and do not appear in the best ages of Heraldry. Vair and Ermine are common. A good early form of Vair is shown in No. 62: and in No. 57A, I give a fine example of the treatment of Ermine, from the monument of EDWARD III.

No. 57A.

In blazon the Metals always take precedence of the Colours, unless the contrary be specified. In order to avoid repeating or referring to the word "Or," the word "Gold" is sometimes used. The Furs, Nos. 61, 62, 63, 64, and 65, are always argent and azure, unless some other metal and colour be named in the blazoning. Animated beings, and all objects that in Heraldry are represented in their natural aspect and colouring, are blazoned "proper," abbreviated ppr. Heraldic charges and compositions, when sketched in outline with pen and ink or with pencil, are said to be "tricked," or "in trick."

VARIED FIELDS.—It is not necessary that the Field of a Shield, or of any Bearing, should be of any one uniform tincture: but varied surfaces are always tintured of some one metal and some one colour alternating; and the patterns or devices thus produced are generally derived (the Furs, Nos. 61—65, which are good examples of varied surfaces, being the exceptions) from the forms of the original simple charges that are distinguished as Ordinaries and Subordinaries. And these varied surfaces or fields are always flat; the whole of their devices or patterns are level, their metal and colour lying in the same plane. It is evident that, in representing any examples of this class, no shading is to be introduced to denote relief.

Should the field of any charge be divided into a single row of small squares, alternately of a metal and a colour, as No. 66, it is Componée or Compony (sometimes written gobony) : if into two such rows, as in No. 67, it is Counter-Compony : but, if the field of a Shield, or the surface of any charge be divided into three, or more than three, such rows, it is Chequée or Checky; thus, the Arms of the Earl de WARENNE are Chequée or and az., No. 68 (H. 3 and E. 2).

No. 66.

No. 67.

THE LAW OF TINCTURES.—Every charge is supposed to rest upon the field of a Shield, or on the surface of some charge which supports it. It is a strict law, that a charge of a metal must rest upon a field that is of a colour; or, contrariwise, that a charge of a colour must rest on a field that is of a metal,—that is, that metal be not on metal, nor colour on colour. This rule is modified in the case of varied fields, upon which may be charged a bearing of either a metal or a colour: also, a partial relaxation of the rule is conceded when one bearing is charged upon another, should the conditions of any particular case require such a concession. This rule is not so rigidly enforced in Foreign Heraldry: but, in the Heraldry of England, the solitary intentional violation of it is the silver armorial Shield of the CRUSADER KINGS of JERUSALEM, No. 69, upon which five golden crosses are charged; the motive in this remarkable exception to an established rule being to cause this Shield to be unlike that of any other potentate. What may be termed the accessories of a charge are not included in this law of tinctures : thus, a silver lion having a red tongue may be charged on a blue shield, and the red tongue may rest on the blue field of the Shield.

COUNTERCHANGING is dividing the field of a Shield in such a manner that it is in part of a metal and in part of a colour, and then arranging the charges in such a manner that they shall be reciprocally of the same colour and metal :

No. 69.
Arms of Jerusalem.

No. 70.
Arms of Fenwick.

thus, the shield of John Fenwick, No. 70 (R. 2) is,—per fesse gu. and arg., six martlets, three, two, one, counterchanged ; that is, the field is red in chief and silver in base, and the birds or parts of the birds on the red field are silver, and those on the silver field are red.

DIAPERING.—This term denotes a system of decorating plain surfaces in various ways, which was in great favour with the early heraldic artists. In the use of Diaper, which is always desirable, care must be taken that the decorative designs and patterns do not in any way admit of their being mistaken for charges. This diaper may be executed in low relief, subordinated to the relief of the charges ; and it is not required to yield any obedience to the law of tinctures. In the Shield, No. 68 (the original, a very noble shield, is at Castle Acre Priory, Norfolk), which is simply chequée, the Diapering may be alternately azure and or on the squares that are alternately or and azure ; or the Diaper may be dark blue, or sable, or argent on the azure squares, and on the golden ones whatever the artist might consider would be most effective ; but the Diaper, in this and in all other examples, must always be subordinate to the area and tincture of the field. The finest known early example of heraldic Diaper in enamel, is the Shield of WILLIAM DE

No. 68.

Shield of Arms of Earl de Warrenne, Castle Acre Priory, Norfolk.

VALENCE, Earl of PEMBROKE, in Westminster Abbey, A.D. 1296. Very beautiful early examples of Diapering have been preserved in relics of heraldic stained glass.

DISPOSITION: BLAZONING.—By Disposition is understood the placing and arranging of charges. A single important charge, which has not a fixed position of its own, is placed in the centre of any composition: and minor charges are arranged in their most natural and consistent order and positions, any deviation from which must be specified. A single charge, many times repeated, and small in size, whether with or without any special orderly disposition, is said to be Semée—strewn, that is, or scattered over the field, as seed is sown by the hand; or, if the charges are very small or very numerous, the term poudrée or powdered may be used. The expression—"three, two, one," signifies that a charge is repeated six times, the Disposition being three in a horizontal row towards the chief of the Shield, then two in a similar row in the centre, and one in base. In the same manner, the expressions—"four, four, one," "four, three, two, one," "three and one," &c., are used as occasion may require. For other dispositions of charges other appropriate terms will present themselves to our notice, growing out of our subject as it advances.

Should a Tincture or a Number occur a second time in blazoning a single composition, it must be indicated, not by repeating the word already used, but by reference to it. Thus, if the tincture of the field should occur a second time, reference is made to it in the formula—"of the field:" or, if the tincture that is named second in order in the blazoning be repeated, it is indicated by the expression—"of the second," and so on. Again: should there be three fleurs de lys and also three crescents in one and the same composition, having specified the "three fleurs de lys," the number of the crescents would be set forth in the words—"as many crescents:" and so, in like manner, with any other numbers of these or of any other charges.

In descriptive Blazoning, Epithets, which follow their own Nouns, precede the Tinctures that are associated with those nouns: thus, a black rampant lion having golden claws is blazoned,—a lion rampnt. sa., armed or. In written and printed blazoning, the arrangement of the words and the placing the stops are alike matters of supreme importance. The sentences are to be short. A comma is to mark the end of each complete minor clause or division of a sentence: a colon, each more important clause. A point or period is to follow every abbreviated word, to mark the fact of the abbreviation, but without affecting the additional presence of a comma (as in the blazoning, "a lion rampant sa.,") or of a colon, as the case may be; but a second period is unnecessary. It is a very common error to overload heraldic blazoning with commas which, instead of aiding to simplify the sentences, obscure the meaning and perplex the reader. It is always correct to write—"three lion's heads," "six pilgrim's staves," &c.: and always incorrect to write—"three lions' heads," "six pilgrims' staves," &c. It appears desirable to print Blazoning in Italic type; but, as a general rule, not to print particular words in that type; and, where space will permit, Proper Names may be advantageously displayed in capitals.

BLAZONING IN TINCTURES.—On this head I must be content to offer to students only a few brief practical observations. The metal Gold may be rendered with gold prepared in small saucers, or (most advantageously) in minute slabs; this preparation is applied, like a common water-colour, by moistening the gold with water; and it is desirable previously to have washed the paper, card (or vellum) with diluted white of egg. Gold leaf may also be used, but the process is tedious, and requires both skill and experience to ensure complete success. Yellow paint, again, may be used to represent the metal, the best colours being cadmium yellow, or "aureolin" (Winsor and Newton) mixed with Chinese white. For shading, carmine, or crimson lake, mixed with gum. For Silver, aluminium may be used with excellent effect; or Chinese white; or the paper may be left white: for shading, grey (blue and Indian ink mixed) and gum. The Aluminium is prepared, like the gold, in minute slabs: it may be obtained, of great excellence, from Lechertier, Barbe, and Co., the Quadrant, Regent Street, W., by whom also a very pure preparation of gold is sold: I can also strongly recommend both the gold and the aluminium slabs that are sold by Messrs. Robinson, 99, Long Acre, W. These Metals may be diapered, as well as burnished, with an agate-burnisher.

For Azure:—French blue, freely mixed with Chinese white and a very little gum, the colour to be laid on thick:

shade with Prussian blue mixed with a larger proportion of gum. For Gules:—Orange vermillion either pure, or mixed with a very little cadmium yellow or Chinese white, and still less gum: (never use a brilliant but most treacherous preparation known as “pure scarlet:”) shade with carmine or crimson lake, and gum. For Vert:—emerald green, with Chinese white and a little gum: shade with dark green, made from mixing aureolin (or gamboge) with Prussian blue and gum. For Purple:—mix carmine and French blue, with a little gum: shade with a darker tint of the same. For Sable:—Very dark grey, made by mixing a little Chinese white and gum with black: shade with black and more gum. Outlines to be drawn with a fine steel-pen and “Indelible Brown Ink,” sold in small bottles (Robertson’s, or Winsor and Newton’s). “Prout’s Brown” is best when a deeper hue of brown is required in shading, but it is not suitable for outlines.

When the Metals are rendered by gold and aluminium, it is desirable that these tinctures should be applied, and that the diapering and burnishing of the Metals should also be completed with the burnisher, before the adjoining colours are laid on. The burnishing may be executed in two or three hours after the Metals have been applied to the paper; and the paper should be placed upon a piece of glass during the processes of burnishing and diapering.

CHAPTER VI.

THE GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY.

SECTION III.

The Ordinaries:—The Chief; Fesse; Bar; Pale; Cross, its heraldic varieties; Bend; Saltire; Chevron; and Pile.

“Marks of Hereditary Honour, given or authorised by some supreme Power.”

SCIENCE OF HERALDRY.

THE ORDINARIES.—These simple Charges of early Heraldry, which always have been held in the highest esteem, are nine in number:—The Chief, the Fesse, the Bar, the Pale, the Cross, the Bend, the Saltire, the Chevron, and the Pile. They may be considered to have been derived from various means that were adopted to strengthen Shields for use in combat, the Cross always having a definite symbolism of its own. These Ordinaries may be formed by any of the Border Lines, No. 38. Occasionally they are borne alone; but more generally they are associated with other bearings, or they have various figures and devices charged upon themselves. In some cases, presently to be specified, more than one Ordinary may appear in a single composition. The Chief, the Bar, the Pale, the Bend, and the Chevron have Diminutives. The Cross has many Varieties.

The CHIEF (H. 3), bounded by a horizontal line, contains the uppermost third (or somewhat less than the third) of the field of a Shield, as in No. 71. The Shield of LE BOTILER, No. 72, is—Or, a chief indented az. (H. 3). A

No. 71.

No. 72.—Le Botiler.

Chief may be borne with any other Ordinary except the Fesse; it may also be charged with any other figures or devices:—thus, for Sire BERNARD DE BRUS, No. 73,—Az., a chief and a saltire or: for Sire JOHAN DE CLINTONE, No. 74,—Arg., on a chief az. two fleurs de lys or: and for Sire JOHAN DE CLINTONE de Madestoke, No. 75,—Arg., on a

No. 73.—De Brus.

No. 74, No. 75.—De Clintone.

chief az. two mullets or (all E. 2). The Fillet is the Diminutive of the Chief, the lowermost fourth of which it always occupies. When any charge is set in the uppermost third of a Shield, or when several charges are disposed horizontally across the uppermost part of a Shield, they all are said to be “in Chief.”

The FESSE (H. 3), which crosses the centre of a Shield horizontally, when charged occupies about one-third (or rather less than one-third) of the field; but when without charges, it is narrower. The Shield of Lord CLIFFORD bears,—Chequée or and az., a fesse gu., No. 76. For ROBT. LE FITZ-WATER,—Or, a fesse between two chevrons gu.: for

JOHN DE PATESHULLE, No. 77,—Arg., a fesse sa., between three crescents gu. (all H. 3): for WILLIAM LE VAVASOUR, No. 78,—Or, a fesse dancette sa.: for DE HEMENHALE,

No. 76—De Clifford.

No. 77.—De Pateshulle.

No. 78.—Le Vavasour.

No. 79,—Or, on a fesse between two chevrons gu., three escallops arg.: and for DE DAGEWORTHE, No. 80,—Erm.,

No. 79.—De Hemenhale.

No. 80.—De Dageworthe.

a fesse gu. bezantée (all E. 2). When they are disposed horizontally across the centre of a Shield, Charges are “in fesse.”

The BAR (H. 3), which may be placed horizontally in any part of the field except in fesse or at the chief of the Shield, is about one-fifth of the field (or sometimes less) in depth. A single bar very rarely occurs in blazon. Examples:—Or, two bars gu.,—for DE HARECOURT, No. 81:

No. 81.—De Harecourt.

No. 82.—Wake.

Az., two bars dancettée or,—for DE RIVERES : Or, two bars gu., in chief three torteaux,—for WAKE, No. 82. The Diminutives of the Bar are the Closet and the Barrulet, severally one-half and one-fourth of its width. When they are disposed in couples, Barrulets are Bars Gemelles : thus, No. 83,—for DE HUNTERCUMBE,—Erm., two bars gemelles gu. (H. 3). A Fesse or Bar, when placed between two barrulets, is said to be cotised by them ; or, to be “doubly cotised,”

No. 83.—De Huntercumbe.

No. 84.—De la Mere.

when placed between two bars gemelles : thus, for DE LA MERE, No. 84,—Or, a fesse doubly cotised (or, between two bars gemelles) az. (E. 2). An even number of bars alternately of a metal (or a fur) and a colour form the varied field which is to be blazoned “barry,” the number of the bars in every case to be specified—as, “barry of six,” “barry of eight,” &c. If the number of bars exceeds ten (some writers say eight), it is “barrulée” or “barruly,” and in this case it is not necessary that the number of the bars should be specified, the word barrulée being used alone, or the expression “barrulée sans nombre,” to denote a considerable number, but not a fixed number of bars—the number, however, always to be even. It is to be observed that while the bars, whatever their number, if they are blazoned as bars, are to be treated as if they were executed in relief upon the field of a Shield ; a Shield that is barrulée has its field formed by bars which are all in the same plane. Examples :—Barry of six or and gu., for FITZ

ALAN of Bedale, No. 85 : Barry of six arg. and az., for DE GREY : Barry of eight or and az.,—for DE PENBRUGGE (all H. 3) : Barrulée arg. and az., an orle of martlets gu.,—for DE VALENCE, Earl of PEMBROKE, No. 86 ; in this example

No. 85 —Fitzalan of Bedale.

No. 86 —De Valence.

ten bars are represented, but in the noble enamelled shield of the first De Valence (A.D. 1296) preserved in Westminster Abbey, the bars are twenty-eight in number. Charges, not “in fesse” or “in chief,” that are disposed horizontally across the field are “bar-wise.”

The PALE.—Like the Fesse, this Ordinary occupies rather less than a central third of the field, but it is vertical in its position instead of horizontal. No. 87, for ERSKINE, is—Arg., a pale sa. This Ordinary is not common in blazon. Its Diminutives, the Pallet and the Endorse, severally one-half and one-fourth of its width, may be placed vertically in any part of the field. A Pale between two Endorses is “endorsed.” An even number of Pallets of a metal (or a fur) and a colour set alternately, form the varied field to be blazoned "paly," the number of the Pallets (which lie all in the same plane) always to be specified: thus—Paly of six arg. and az., on a bend gu. three eaglets displayed or, for GRANDISON, No. 88 (H. 3). Charges that are disposed one above another vertically are "in pale." This is the arrangement of the three golden lions of England.

No. 87 —Erskine.

No. 88.—Grandison.

The CROSS (H. 3), formed from a combination of a Fesse with a Pale, in its simplest form is set erect in the centre of the field, and it extends to the border-lines of the Shield. If at any time it may be necessary or apparently desirable specially to set forth in the blazoning of a Shield, that a Cross charged upon it does thus extend to the border-lines, such a Cross is blazoned as a "Cross through." No. 1, Arg., a Cross gu., the armorial ensign of ST. GEORGE, the special Patron Saint of England, may be blazoned as "A Cross of St. George." Of this Cross, the great symbol of the Christian Faith, Spenser says—

"And on his brest a bloodie Cross he bore,
The deare remembrance of his dying Lord . . .
Upon his Shield the like was also scored."

FAËRIE QUEEN I. 1. 2.

A Cross having a narrow border lying in the same plane

No. 89.—Cross fimbriated.

No. 90.—Cross pointed.

with itself, is "fimbriated," such a border being a "fimbriation:" thus, No. 89, Az., a cross gu., fimbriated arg., represents the Cross of St. George in our National "Union Jack." A Cross having its four extremities cut off square, so that it does not extend in any direction to the border-lines of the shield, is "couped" or "humettée." If the extremities of a Cross are cut off to points, it is "pointed," as in No. 90. If its central area is entirely removed, so that but little more than its outlines remain, it is "voided," or (H. 3) "a false Cross" ("faux crois"): when its four limbs are equal in length, it is a "Greek Cross," as No. 91: when the limbs are unequal, the lower limb or shaft being longer than the other three, as in No. 92, it is a "Latin Cross:" if it be formed of a shaft and two horizontal limbs only (like the letter T), as in No. 93, it is a "Tau Cross:" if a small square is pierced at the intersection of the limbs, it is "quarter-pierced:" but, it is "quarterly-pierced," if the entire central area be voided. A Latin Cross on steps, is "on Degrees," and it is distinguished as a "Calvary Cross." Charges having a cruciform arrangement are "in Cross."

No. 91. No. 92. No. 93.

The CROSS:—its HERALDIC VARIETIES. The Cross-symbol appears in English Heraldry under several varieties and modifications of form and condition, some of them of

No. 94.
Quadrate.

No. 95.
Patriarchal.

No. 96.
Fourchée.

great beauty. The following engraved representations of the various examples are so explicit, that descriptions of them are unnecessary. The Cross Quadrate, No. 94. The Cross Patriarchal, No. 95. The Cross Fourchée, No. 96,

The Cross Moline, represented charged upon the Shield attributed to the SAXON KINGS of ENGLAND, No. 23: this same shield—Az., a Cross moline or, is borne by DE MOLINES or MOLYNEUX, No. 97. The Cross Cercelée or

No. 97.—Cross Moline:
Arms of De Molines.

No. 98.—Cross Recercelée;
Arms of Bishop Anthony Bec.

No. 99.—Cross Patonce:
Arms of William de Vesci.

Recercelée (H. 3),—Gu., a Cross recercelée erm., No. 98, for ANTHONY BEC, Bishop of DURHAM. The Cross Patonce (H. 3),—Gu., a Cross patonce arg., No. 99, from the Seal of WM. DE VESCI, A.D. 1220. The Cross Fleurie, No. 100: this should be compared carefully with Nos. 97 and 99, the Crosses Moline and Patonce. The Cross Fleurettée,

No. 100.
Fleurie.

No. 101.
Fleurettée.

No. 102.
Pommée.

No. 101. The Cross Pommée, No. 102. The Cross Botonée or Treflée, No. 103. The Cross Crosslet, or Crosslet crossed, No. 104. The term "Crosslet" is strictly applicable to any Cross on a very small scale: but it is usually applied to denote a Cross that is crossed as in No. 104. Small Crosses Botonée are occasionally used as these "Crosses-Crosslets,"—as at Warwick in the arms of the BEAUCHAMPS, the Earls of WARWICK. Crosslets are frequently blazoned semée over the field of a Shield; and, in smaller numbers,

No. 103.
Botonée.

No. 104.
Crosslet.

No. 105.
Clechée.

they also are favourite Charges. No. 105 is the Cross Clechee or Urdee.

The Cross Patée or Formée is represented in No. 106. No. 107 is the "Cross of eight Points," or the Maltese Cross: this example is drawn from the portrait of PHILLIPPE DE VILLIERS DE L'ISLE-ADAM, elected forty-third Grand Master of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, A.D. 1521; this

No. 106.
Patée.

No. 108.
Potent.

No. 109.
Avellane.

No. 107.
Maltese.

No. 110.
Botonée Fitchée.

picture is in the possession of the Earl of Clarendon, K.G. The Cross Potent, No. 108. The Cross Avellane, No. 109. The Crossed-Crosslet, and the Crosses Patée, Botonée, and Potent, are also drawn having their shaft elongated and pointed at the base: in this form they are severally blazoned as a "Crossed-Crosslet Fitchée," a "Cross Patée Fitchée," &c.,—a Cross, that is, "fixable" in the ground: No. 110 is an example of a Cross Botonée Fitchée. Several of these varieties of the heraldic Cross occur but rarely; and there are other somewhat fanciful varieties so little in use, as to render any description of them unnecessary. The student of mediæval monumental antiquities will not fail to observe a certain degree of resemblance between some of the Crosses of Heraldry, and those that are incised and sculptured on sepulchral slabs.

The BEND (H. 3) resembles both the Fesse and the Pale in every condition, except that it crosses the field diagonally from the dexter chief to the sinister base. No. 111, the Shield of SCROPE, is—Az., a bend or: a celebrated contest for the right to bear this simple Shield took place, A.D. 1385—1390, between Sir RICHARD LE SCROPE and Sir ROBERT GROSVENOR, which was decided in favour of the former. No. 112, for RADCLYFFE, is—Arg., a bend engrailed

No. 112.—De Radclyffe.

No. 111.—Le Scrope.

No. 113.—Le Boteler.

sa. Two uncharged Bends may appear in one composition: thus, for LE BOTELER—Arg., two bends az., No. 113; and for FRERE—Gu., two bends or (both H. 3). The Diminutives of the Bend are the Bendlet and the Cotise, the one containing one-half and the other one-fourth of its area. A Cotise is sometimes borne couped at its extremities, when it is a Riband. A Bend between two Cotises is cotised; thus, No. 114, for DE BOHUN,—Az., a Bend arg., cotised or, between six lioncels rampant. gold; this Shield is engraved from the Seal of HUMPHREY DE BOHUN, fourth Earl of HEREFORD (A.D. 1298—1322); in it the cotised Bend is very narrow, evidently to give more space for the lioncels. Charges displayed on a Bend slope with it—that is, they would be erect, were the Bend to be set vertically and to become a Pale: thus, another DE BOHUN, Sir Gilbert, (H. 3), distinguishes his Shield by tincturing his Bend or,

No. 114.
Humphrey de Bohun, 4th Earl of Hereford.

No. 115.
Sir Gilbert de Bohun.

and charging upon it three escallops gules, as in No. 115. In No. 88, the eaglets also exemplify the disposition of charges upon a Bend. Charges set diagonally on the field of a Shield, or "in bend," are arranged in the same manner. A field divided into an even number of parts by lines drawn bendwise, is "bendy," the number of the divisions to be specified: as a matter of course, a field thus "bendy" becomes a "varied field," in which all the divisions lie in the same plane: thus, No. 116, for DE MONTFORD (H. 3 and E. 2)—Bendy of ten or and az. Bendlets are in relief, as in No. 117, for DE BRAY—Vairée, three Bendlets gu. If a

No. 116.—De Montford.

No. 117.—De Bray.

field be divided by lines drawn bendwise, and also by others drawn either vertically or horizontally, it is "paly

No. 118 —Paly Bendy.

No. 119.—Barry Bendy.

bendy," as No. 118, or "barry bendy," as No. 119. A Bend issuing from the sinister chief is a Bend Sinister.

The SALTIRE (H. 3), a combination of a Bend with a Bend Sinister, may also be regarded as a Diagonal Cross. Thus, the Crosses of St. ANDREW of SCOTLAND, and of St.

No. 120.—St. Andrew.

No. 122.—De Neville.

No. 121.—De Neville.

PATRICK of IRELAND are Saltires—the former, No. 120—Az., a Saltire arg.: the latter—Arg., a Saltire gu. The arms of the great family of NEVILLE reverse those of St. PATRICK, and are—Gu., a Saltire arg., No. 121: so Drayton has recorded that “Upon his surcoat valiant NEVILLE bore

A silver Saltire upon martial red.”

Barons' War, i. 22.

Charges set on a Saltire slope with its limbs, the central charge being erect; and the disposition of charges set “in saltire” is the same: a single charge set on a Saltire is blazoned erect on the central point of the Ordinary, as in No. 122, another Shield of NEVILLE, in which the “Silver Saltire” is charged with a rose gules. A Saltire may be borne with a Chief, as in No. 73.

The CHEVRON (H. 3), in form and proportions is rather more than the lower half of a Saltire. The Diminutive is a Chevronel, containing half a Chevron, or perhaps less: thus, for DE STAFFORD, (E. 2),—Or, a Chevron gu., No. 123: for the great family of DE CLARE, from whom so many other families derived their Chevrons and Chevronels—Gu., three Chevronels or, No. 124 (H. 3). Two Chevrons may be borne in one composition: or they may appear with a Fesse, as in No. 79: or with a Chief, as (H. 3), for DE CROMBE—Erm., a Chevron gu., and on a Chief of the last three escallops or; for ST. QUINTIN (H. 3)—Or, three Chevronels gu., a Chief vair. A field Chevronée is of rare occurrence : the three Chevronels of DE CLARE, however, No. 124, appear to have been derived from a field Chevronée : certainly, on his seal, "Strongbow" has the Chevronée Shield, No. 124A, about A.D. 1175. Charges set on a Chevron, or disposed "in Chevron," are placed in the same manner as those on a Saltire or "in Saltire:" thus, for Sir ROGER PEYVRE (E. 2)—Arg., on a Chevron az., three fleurs de lys or, No. 125.

No. 123.—De Stafford.

No. 124.—Shield of De Clare.

No. 124A.—Early Shield of De Clare.

No. 125.

The PILE (H. 3), resembling a wedge in form, is borne both single and in small groups. Unless some other disposition on the field be specified, this Ordinary issues from the chief of the Shield. Examples : Or, a Pile gu., between six and charged with three estoiles (or mullets) counter-

No. 126.—De Chandos.

No. 127.—De Brian

No. 128.—De Bassett.

changed,—for ROBERT DE CHANDOS, No. 126 : Or, three Piles az., No. 127—for Sir GUY DE BRIAN ; Or, three

Piles gu., a canton erm., No. 128, for DE BASSETT (all H. 3): and (E. 2), Arg., a Pile engrailed sa.—for Sir ROB. DE FORNEUS.

The probable structural origin of these Ordinaries is sufficiently apparent to render any further comment on that interesting circumstance superfluous.

CHAPTER VII.

THE GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY.

SECTION IV.

The Subordinaries:—The Canton or Quarter: The Inescutcheon: The Orle: The Tressure: The Bordure: Flanches: The Lozenge, Mascle, and Rustre: The Fusil: The Billet: The Gyron: The Frette. The Roundles.

“The second in a line of stars.”—IDYLLS OF THE KING.

THE SUBORDINARIES. This title has been assigned, but without any decisive authority, to another group of devices, second in rank to the Ordinaries. These Subordinaries are the Canton or Quarter, the Inescutcheon, the Orle, the Tressure, the Bordure, Flanches, the Lozenge, Mascle and Rustre, the Fusil, the Billet, the Gyron, and the Frette. The Canton, by the early Heralds commonly styled the “Quarter,” sometimes has been grouped with the Ordinaries. And it must here be observed that the Lozenge, Fusil, Billet, Gyron, and Frette were not used as single charges by the early Heralds; but by them the fields of Shields were divided lozengy and gyronny, or they were semée of Billets, or covered over with Frette-work, from which the single charges evidently were afterwards obtained.

The CANTON (H. 3), sometimes blazoned as a QUARTER, cut off by two lines, the one drawn in pale and the other bar-wise, or in fesse, is either the first quarter of the field of a Shield, or about three-fourths of that quarter, but smaller if not charged. A Canton ermine is of frequent occurrence, as in No. 128: but it is generally borne charged, and it always overlies the charges of the field of the Shield, as No. 129, for DE KYRKEBY (R. 2)—Arg., two bars gu. ; on

No. 129.—De Kyrkeby.

No. 130.—Blundell.

a canton of the last a cross moline or ; and, for BLUNDELL (H. 3)—Az., billettée, on a canton or a raven ppr., No. 130.

The INESCUTCHEON (H. 3) is a Shield borne as a charge, and displayed "in pretence" upon another Shield larger than itself. When one Inescutcheon is borne, it is placed on the fesse-point; but several Inescutcheons may appear in one composition. The well-known Shield of the MOR-

No. 132.—Darcy.

No. 131.—De Mortimer.

No. 133.—De Wyllers.

TIMERS supplies a good example, No. 131 (H. 3)—Barry of six or and az., an inescutcheon arg. ; on a chief gold, gyroned of the second, two pallets of the same: for DARCY—Arg., an inescutcheon sa., within an orle of roses gu., No. 132 (E. 2): Arg., three inescutcheons gu., for DE WYLLERS (E. 2), No. 133.

The ORLE (H. 3), blazoned by early Heralds as a "false escutcheon" ("faux escocheon"), or as an "inescutcheon voided,"

No. 134.
De Balliol.

is the border of a Shield or Escutcheon—a Shield, that is, voided of the central area of its field, and, like an Inescutcheon, charged on a Shield. The arms of BALLIOL, No. 134, are—Gu., an Orle arg. (H. 3). These arms are blazoned on many Scottish Seals of the greatest interest, and on the Seals of Balliol College, Oxford. Small charges are frequently disposed about the border of a Shield "in Orle," as in Nos. 86 and 132.

The TRESSURE (H. 3) may be regarded as a variety of the Orle; indeed, in its simplest form it is a very narrow Orle, which is generally set round with fleurs de lys. A Tressure thus enriched is represented in No. 135: in this

No. 135.
Single Tressure
Flory.

No. 137.
Double Tressure
flory counterflory.

No. 136.
Tressure flory counterflory.

example all the heads of the fleurs de lys point externally, and all their stalks internally, and this accordingly is blazoned as a "Tressure flory." In No. 136, which, like No. 135, is a single Tressure, the fleurs de lys are so disposed that the heads and stalks of the flowers point alternately in contrary directions: this is blazoned as a "Tressure flory counterflory." From this last example the Tressure that is so well known in the blazonry of the Royal Shield of SCOTLAND differs, in being "double." This, the double Tressure of Scotland, is a combination of two such single Tressures as No. 136, and it is produced from them in the manner following :—From one such single Tressure, as No. 136, all the alternate heads and stalks of the fleurs de lys that point internally are cut away and removed ; then a second similar Tressure, of rather smaller size, is denuded of all its external adornment, and in that condition it is placed within the former Tressure, leaving a narrow interval between the two. Each component half of this "double Tressure flory counterflory," accordingly, has its own independent series of demi-fleurs de lys, the stalks and heads of the flowers alternating, and the one alternate series pointing externally, while the other points internally. When in combination, these two series of demi-fleurs de lys may be so arranged that the heads of the flowers in one series correspond with their stalks in the other, as in No. 137. I am thus particular in describing the process of producing the Royal Tressure, because it is frequently to be seen incorrectly drawn. No. 138, the Royal Shield of SCOTLAND, now displayed in the second quarter of the Royal Arms of the UNITED KINGDOM, is thus blazoned—Or, within a double Tressure flory counterflory, a lion rampant. gu. It will be observed that a narrow strip of the golden field of this Shield intervenes between the two Tressures. There are many fine examples of this Shield in Scottish Seals ; in the Garter-plate, also, of JAMES V. of Scotland, K.G., at Windsor ; and on the Monuments in Westminster Abbey to MARY Queen of SCOTS (A.D. 1604), and to the Countess of LENNOX, the mother of Lord DARNLEY (A.D.

No. 138.—Scotland.

1577). Mr. Seton ("Scottish Heraldry," p. 447) states that the Tressure may be borne "triple;" and, after specifying the Scottish families upon whose Shields the same honourable bearing is blazoned, he adds:—"In the coat of the Marquess of HUNTLEY, the Tressure is flowered with fleurs de lys within, and adorned with crescents without; while in that of the Earl of ABERDEEN it is flowered and counter-flowered with thistles and fleurs de lys alternately."

The BORDURE (H. 3), as its name implies, forms a border to a Shield: it is borne both plain and charged. Thus, for DE WALTONE (E. 2)—Arg., a cross patée sa., within a Bordure indented gu., No. 139: for RICHARD, Earl of

No. 139.—De Waltone.

No. 140.—Richard, Earl of Cornwall.

CORNWALL, second son of King JOHN (H. 3),—Arg., within a Bordure sa. bezantée, a lion rampt. gu. crowned or, No. 140. The Bordure, and its important services in Heraldry, will be more fully considered hereafter. (See Chapters XII. and XIII.)

FLANCHES are always borne in pairs; but they are not of very early date, nor do they often appear in blazon. Flanches are formed by two curved lines issuing from the chief, one on each side of the Shield: they are shown, shaded for azure, in No. 141; and in No. 142 are their Diminutives, Flasques or Voiders, shaded for gules. There is a close resemblance between these charges and a peculiar dress worn by Ladies of rank in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries ; but it is not easy to determine whether the dress

No. 141.—Flanches.

No. 142.—Flasques.

suggested the Flanches on the Shield, or was derived from them. One thing, however, is certain—the dress must have possessed very decided good qualities, since it continued in favour for more than two centuries. It is remarkable that many of the ancient Greek Shields have pierced Flanches.

The LOZENGE (E. 2), MASCLE (H. 3), and RUSTRE. The Lozenge is a diamond-shaped figure, or a square set diagonally. The Mascle is a Lozenge voided of the field, No. 143 ; and the Rustre, No. 144, is a Lozenge pierced with a circular opening. In the early days of Heraldry the Lozenge and the Mascle were evidently held to be identical. The

No. 143.—Mascle.

No. 145.—De Burgh, Earl of Kent.

No. 144.—Rustre.

Shield of the famous HUBERT DE BURGH, Earl of KENT, in the early Rolls is blazoned as "masculée:" but his Seal proves it to have been, as in No. 145, lozengy vair and gu. The Lozenge, it will be remembered, is always set erect upon the field of a Shield.

The FUSIL is an elongated Lozenge. The Arms of MONTACUTE or MONTAGU (see No. 20) are—Arg., three Fusils conjoined in fesse gu., No. 20A: the Arms of PERCY are—Az., five fusils conjoined in fesse or. In early blazon, Fusils thus “conjoined in fesse” are commonly described as “a

No. 20A. - Montacute.

No. 146.—Deincourt.

Fesse engrailed” (the more appropriate term “indented” does not appear to have been introduced), the number of the points being specified.

The BILLET (H. 3) is a small elongated rectangular figure. Thus, for DEINCOURT, No. 146—Az., billettée, a fesse dancette or. The early Heralds blazoned a “Fesse Dancette” as simply a “Dancette” or “Danse.” See also No. 130.

The GYRON, a triangular figure, not known in English blazon as a separate charge, gives its title to the gyronny field, which is more commonly found in the Heraldry of the North than of the South. The field gyronny generally,

No. 147.
Campbell.

and more particularly in Scotland, is divided into eight pieces: but the divisions are sometimes six, ten, twelve, or even sixteen in number. A Roll of the time of HENRY III. has, for WARIN DE BASINGBORNE—“Gerony d’or et d’azur.” The Arms of CAMPBELL are—Gyronny or and sa., No. 147. Here, where there are eight pieces or divisions, it is not necessary to specify the number ;

but if they were either more or less than eight the blazon would be—gyronny of six, of ten, &c. From No. 147 it will be observed that in the series of gyronny divisions the tinctures commence in the lower triangular half of the first quarter of the Shield.

The FRETTE, in more recent Heraldry, has generally superseded the original field fretty. This interlaced design, whether borne as a distinct figure, as No. 148, or repeated

No. 148.—A Frette.

No. 149.—De Etchingham.

No. 150.—Trellis Clouée.

over the field of a Shield, as in No. 149, differs from a field lozengy or gyronny, in being a bearing charged upon the field of a Shield, and not a form of varied surface: No. 149, for DE ECHINGHAM (E. 2), is—Az., fretty arg. An early variety or modification of Frette is the Trellis or Treille, in which the pieces do not interlace, but all those in bend lie over all those in bend sinister, and they are fastened at the crossings with nails—“clouée,” as in No. 150. RICHARD DE TRUSSELL or TRESSSELL (H. 3) bears—Arg., a trellis gu., clouée or.

The ROUNDLIES, or ROUNDLIES. These simple figures, in constant use in every age of Heraldry, are divided into two groups, which correspond with the division of the Tinctures into “Metals” and “Colours.”

The first group contains the two Roundles of the Metals, which are flat discs: 1, The Bezant, or golden Roundle, No. 151, apparently has derived its name from the Byzantine coins that the Crusaders, when in the East, may sometimes have actually fixed upon their Shields for heraldic distinction. 2, The Silver Roundle, or Plate, is from the Spanish "Plata"—silver. When Bezants or Plates appear in considerable numbers, the field on which they are charged is said to be "bezantée" or "plattée." See No. 140.

The second group contains the five Roundles of the Colours, which are globular, and are to be shaded accord-

No. 151.—Bezant

No. 152.—Torteau.

No. 153.—Fountain.

ingly. The Torteau, No. 152, in the plural Torteaux, is gules: the Hurt is azure: the Pellet or Ogress is sable: the Pomme is vert: and the Golpe is purple. These distinctive titles, which are more calculated to perplex the student than to simplify his study, are of comparatively recent origin, the early Heralds having used the terms "Bezant," "Plate," and "Torteau," with the general designations "Roundle" and "Pellet," adding the tinctures. Examples: —Az., bezantée, for WM. DE LA ZOUCHE: Or, on a fesse gu. three plates, for ROGER DE HUNTINGFIELD: Arg., ten torteaux, four, three, two, one, for ALEX. GIFFARD (all H. 3). See also Nos. 80, 82.

A circular figure or Roundle that is barry wavy arg. and az., is blazoned as a "Fountain," No. 153. Examples:

No. 154.
Annulet.

—Arg., three fountains, for WELLES: Arg., a Chevron between three fountains, borne by a family named Sykes, an ancient term signifying a well or fountain. An Annulet, or a plain ring,

No. 154, was sometimes blazoned as a "false Roundle"—a Roundle, that is, pierced, and having its central area removed.

CHAPER VIII.

THE GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY.

SECTION V.

Miscellaneous Charges:—Human Beings — Animals — Birds — Fish — Reptiles and Insects — Imaginary Beings — Natural Objects — Various Artificial Figures and Devices. Appropriate Descriptive Epithets.

“The Formes of pure celestiaall bodies mixt with grosse terrestrials; earthly animals with watery; sauage beasts with tame; fowles of prey with home-bred; these again with riuier fowles; reptiles with things gressible; aery insecta with earthly; also things naturall with artificiaall.”

GUILLIM'S Display of Heraldry, A.D. 1611.

THUS, in his own quaint fashion, the enthusiastic old Herald of the seventeenth century indicates the number and variety of the Charges, which in process of time had been introduced into Armory even before his era. In earlier days the Charges of Heraldry were much less varied, comparatively few in their numbers, and generally of a simple character. It will readily be understood, however, that fresh figures and devices would continually appear in blazon; and also that these, in their turn, would lead the way for the introduction of further varieties and new modifications.

Human Beings are of very rare occurrence, except as Supporters. Parts of the human frame occasionally appear, but they are more generally borne as Crests upon helms than as charges on shields. “Moor’s heads” or “Saracen’s heads” appear in some coats, with arms, hands and legs: and a human heart is well known as a charge in the coat of the famous house of DOUGLAS, where it was placed to commemorate the duty entrusted by ROBERT BRUCE to the "good Sir JAMES DOUGLAS," that he should bear with him the heart of his Sovereign and friend to the Holy Land, and bury it there. Sir James fell, fighting with the Moors of Spain, A.D. 1330. This Shield of Douglas is a characteristic example of the gradual development of armorial composition. At first, the Douglas Shield appears with simply three silver stars upon a blue field. Then, about A.D. 1290, the Seal of WILLIAM, Lord DOUGLAS, displays his Shield, No. 155, bearing—Arg., on a chief az. three mullets of the field. Next, upon the field of the Shield of WILLIAM, first Earl DOUGLAS, A.D. 1355, there appears, in addition, a human heart gules, as in No. 156. And, finally, after the

No. 155.

No. 156.

No. 157.

Shields of Douglas.

accession of JAMES I. of Great Britain, in 1603, the heart is ensigned with a royal crown, as in No. 157.

The Shield of the ancient kingdom of the ISLE OF MAN, No. 158, still continues to be the heraldic ensign of that island: it is—Gu., three human legs in armour ppr., conjoined in the fesse-point at the upper part of the thighs, and flexed in triangle. This true curiosity of Heraldry leads Mr. Planché to remark, that "the arms of MAN are legs" ("Pursuivant of Arms," p. 112). The Shield represented in No. 158 is drawn from an original example of the age of EDWARD I. in the Heralds' College.

No. 158.
Isle of Man.

At later periods, the armour of the conjoined limbs is represented in conformity with the usages then prevalent, and golden spurs are added. The ancient symbol of the island of Sicily, in which the limbs are without either armour or clothing, has been represented in No. 10 : this device also appears in ancient examples with a human head at the junction of the limbs. Three human arms, united in the same manner, are borne on the shield of the mediæval family of TREMAINE.

Human figures, winged and vested, and designed to represent ANGELS, are occasionally introduced in English Heraldry, their office generally being to act as "Supporters" to armorial Shields. Fine examples, in admirable preservation, may be seen boldly sculptured in the noble timber-roof of Westminster Hall ; also in panels over the principal entrance to the Hall, and in various parts of the Abbey of Westminster. In the grand Abbey Church of St. Alban at St. Alban's, numerous other examples of great excellence yet remain, the works of Abbot John de Wheathamstede, about A.D. 1440. In No. 159 I give a representation of the Shield of Arms of the Abbey of ST. ALBAN—Az., a saltire or, supported by Angels, and the Shield ensigned by the Mitre of Abbot Thomas Dela Mere, as it is represented in his noble Brass in the Abbey Church. The Shield and the Angel Figures are the work of Abbot John. The Heads of the Figures, which are destroyed in the original, are restored from stained glass of the same period in the Abbey Church. Figures of Angels holding Shields of Arms—each figure having a shield in front of its breast, are frequently sculptured as corbels in Gothic churches.

No. 159.—Shield of St Alban's Abbey (partly restored).

In the earliest Rolls of Arms, the Lion is the only animal that is found in blazon, with the sole addition of Boar's heads. Deer, dogs, bulls, calves, rams, and a few other animals subsequently appear to share heraldic service and honours with the king of beasts. In modern Armory, however, almost every living creature has been required to discharge such duties as Heralds have been pleased to assign to them. The Lion of Heraldry I leave to be considered, with the Eagle, in the next Chapter. In comparatively early blazon, the Bear is borne by FITZ URSE: the Calf, by CALVELEY and DE VELE: the Ram, by RAMSEY and RAMRYGE: the Lamb, by LAMBERT and LAMBTON: the Otter (loutre, in French), by LUTTREL: the Hedgehog (Fr., herrison), by DE HERIZ, afterwards HARRIS: and so also, in like manner, some other animals appear as armes parlantes (See p. 15).

With the lordly Eagle a few other Birds are associated in early Heraldry: and, after a while, others join them, including the Falcon, Ostrich, Swan, Peacock or Pawne, and the Pelican borne both as a symbol of sacred significance, and also by the PELHAMS from being allusive to their name. Cocks, with the same allusive motive, were borne by COCKAYNE: Parrots, blazoned as "Popinjays," appear as early as HENRY III.: and in a Roll of EDWARD II., the Sire MOUNPYNZON has a Lion charged on the shoulder with a Chaffinch—in French a Pinson. The favourite bird, however, of the early Heralds is the Martlet, the heraldic Martin, a near relative of the Swallow or Hirondelle. The Martlet is always represented in profile, at rest, and with its wings closed. In some early examples the feet are shown, as in No. 160: but, in the Shield of Earl WM. DE VALENCE in Westminster Abbey, A.D. 1296, the Martlet appears feetless, as in No. 161; and at a later period this mode of representation was generally adopted. French Heralds deprive their Martlets of feet as well as beak.

No. 160.—Early Martlet.

No. 161.—Martlet.

“As the symbol of a name,” writes Mr. Moule, “almost all Fish have been used in Heraldry; and in many instances Fish have been assumed in Arms in reference to the produce of the estate, giving to the quaint device a twofold interest.” (“Heraldry of Fish,” p. 13.) The earliest examples are the Barbel, the Dolphin, the Luce (or Pike), the Herring, and the Roach, with the Escallop-Shell. The Barbel, so named from the barbs attached to its mouth to assist it in its search for food, was introduced into English Heraldry by JOHN, Count DE BARRE, whose elder brother married ALIANORE, eldest daughter of EDWARD I. At Carlaverock he displayed, as the chronicler has recorded, “a blue banner,

No. 162.
Banner of De Barre.

crusilly, with two Barbels of gold, and a red border engrailed," No. 162. The Dolphin, borne by GILES DE FISHBOURNE (H. 3), and afterwards introduced into several English Shields, is best known as the armorial ensign of the DAUPHIN, the eldest son and heir apparent of the Kings of France, who bore, marshalled with the arms of FRANCE—Or, a Dolphin az. This title of "Dauphin" was first assumed by CHARLES V., who succeeded to the Crown of France in 1364. In No. 8 I have shown after what manner the Dolphin was represented by an ancient Greek Artist: in the Middle Ages the heraldic Dolphin appeared as in No. 163. GIFFREY DE LUCY

No. 163.—Dolphin.

No. 164.—De Lucy.

No. 165.—Escallop.

(H. 3) bears—Gu., three Lucies or. On his marriage with the heiress of ANTHONY, Lord LUCY, in 1369, HENRY, fourth Lord PERCY of Alnwick, quartered these three fish, with his own lion (blue on a golden field) and his fusils (gold on a blue field), upon the well-known Shield of the Earls of NORTHUMBERLAND (Chap. XI.). Another Carlaverock Banneret, ROBERT DE SCALES, whom the chronicler declares to have been both "handsome and amiable" as well as gallant in action, had "six escallops of silver on a red banner." This beautiful charge, happy in its association with the pilgrims of the olden time, and always held in high esteem by Heralds, is generally drawn as in No. 165.

Reptiles and Insects occur but rarely in English Heraldry. Bees, Flies, Butterflies, and Snails are sometimes found, but they have no place in the earliest Rolls of Arms. Bees, as might be expected, appear in the Arms of Beeston. Azure, three Butterflies, are the Arms of MUSCHAMP, and they are carved twice in the vaulting of the cloisters at Canterbury. Upon a monumental brass in the Church of Wheathampstead, in Hertfordshire, the Shield of HUGO BOSTOCK (about A.D. 1435) bears,—Arg., three Bats, their wings displayed, sa.

Imaginary and Fabulous Beings, some of them the creations of heraldic fancy when in a strangely eccentric mood, frequently appear as Supporters; and, in some cases, they take a part in the blazonry of Shields, or they are borne independently as Badges. A very brief description (all that is necessary) of the greater number of these monsters of unnatural history will be given in the "Glossary of heraldic terms," in Chapter X.; consequently, it is enough here merely to refer to them as having a place in blazon. The Griffin or Gryphon, the most worthy of the group, is comparatively common. The Dragon and the Wivern or Wyvern, both of them winged monsters, differ in this respect, that the former has four legs, while the latter has two only. In early blazon this distinction is not always observed. The Cockatrice, always having two legs, is a Wyvern with a cock's head.

Natural Objects of all kinds are blazoned as Charges of Heraldry, and they will be found described and illustrated in their proper places in Chapter X. They include the Sun, the Moon, the Stars; also such terrestrial objects as Trees, Flowers, Fruits, Sheaves and Ears of Corn, Leaves, Chaplets, &c. And with these Charges I may group the always beautiful Fleurs de Lys, and the Trefoil, Quatrefoil, Cinquefoil, and Sixfoil.

Of the various Artificial Figures and Devices that Herald's have charged upon Shields of Arms, it will be unnecessary for me to give detailed descriptions, except when either the heraldic name may require explanation, or some special circumstances connected with any particular figure or device may impart to it peculiar claims for attention. Again I refer to the "Glossary" for notices and examples of all Charges of this class—Annulets, Buckles, Castles, Crowns, Cups, Horseshoes, Keys, Knots, Sickles, Stirrups, Trumpets, and many others.

In blazoning Charges of various classes, Herald's employ appropriate Epithets and descriptive Terms, of which the following are characteristic examples:—The Sun is "in glory" or "in splendour," or it is "eclipsed." The Moon, when full, is "in plenitude," or "in her complement:" she is a "Crescent" when she appears as in No. 166, A: she is

A

Crescent

B

Increscent
No. 166.

C

Decrescent.

"Increscent," or "in increment," when as in No. 166, B: and she is "Decrescent," or "in detriment," when as in No. 166, c. Animals and Birds of prey are said to be "armed" of their talons, teeth, and claws. All horned animals, also, except Stags, are "armed" of their horns; and a Cock is "armed" of his spurs. Animals are "hoofed" or "unguled" of their hoofs; and "langued" of their tongues. Fierce animals are "vorant" of their prey, when represented in the act of devouring it. Deer, when reposing, are "lodged," Nos. 25 and 26: when standing, and looking out from the Shield, No. 167, "at gaze:" when in easy motion, they are "tripping," No. 168: and when in rapid motion, they are

No. 167.—At Gaze

No. 169.—At Speed.

"at speed," No. 169. The male Stag is a "Hart," and the female a "Hind." The antlers of the Hart are "Attires," their branches are "Tynes," and they are said to be

No. 168.—Tripping.

No. 170.—Stag's Head Cabossed.

"attired" of their antlers. A Stag's head full-faced, as No. 170, is "cabossed."

Birds of prey with expanded wings are "displayed," other birds are "disclosed." Expanded wings are "overt," if elevated, but not expanded, wings are "erect," if drooping, they are "inverted" or "in lure." Birds about to take wing are "rising," when in flight, they are "volant," when flying aloft, "soaring," when at rest, they are "closed" or "trussed." A Bird also "trusses" its prey. A Peacock having its tail expanded is "in its pride," and this same expression is applicable to any other bird when in the same attitude. A Pelican, when feeding its young, is said to be "in its piety." A Swan, when blazoned "proper," is white with red legs and beak.

Fish, represented swimming in fesse, are "naiant;" if they are in pale, their heads to the chief, they are "hauriant," No. 164; but if their heads are to the base, "urinant;" if their bodies are bent, as the Dolphin is generally represented, they are "embowed," No. 163; and if with open mouth, "pané." Fish, also, are said to be "finned" of their fins. Insects are "volant." Reptiles are "gliding:" or, if they are twined into knots, "nowed." Trees of mature growth are "accrued;" when with leaves, "in foliage;" with fruit or seeds, "fructed" or "seeded;" if without leaves, "blasted;" and if their roots are exposed, "eradicated;" branches or leaves torn off are "slipped."

The terms which denote the attitudes of Lions, all of them described in the next chapter, are equally applicable to other animals. Some other descriptive terms, not noticed here, will be found in the "Glossary" in Chapter X.

CHAPTER IX.

THE GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY.

SECTION VI.

The Lion and the Eagle in Heraldry.

“The LION and a King of Beasts.”—SHAKESPEARE. Richard II.

“The EAGLE, ennobled by Nature in as high a degree of nobility as the chiefest of terrestrial animals, is the most honourable bearing of Birds.”

GWILLIM.—Edition of 1724.

THE regal dignity of the LION amongst the creatures that are quadrupeds, like himself, would naturally secure for him a position of corresponding eminence in Heraldry. From the dawn of the heraldic era, accordingly, the Lion is blazoned on the Shields of Sovereigns, Princes, and Nobles. And, after a while, still retaining his original rank, the lordly beast also condescended to accept service with men not of noble, but of gentle birth. The tressured Lion has been already noticed upon the Royal Shield of SCOTLAND, No. 138; and a crowned Lion has also appeared in the same attitude, borne by an English Prince, RICHARD, Earl of CORNWALL, No. 140. From the time that they first possessed any true armorial insignia, the Sovereigns of the Realm of ENGLAND have borne Lions upon their Royal Shield. A Lion was the Ensign of the Native Princes of WALES, as he was of the Kings of LEON, of NORWAY, and of DENMARK, and of the Counts of HOLLAND, HAINAULT, EU, &c. And, in like manner, the Lion was in high favour with the most noble and powerful Barons of England—the BOHUNS, LONGESPEES, FITZ-ALANS, LACIES. PERCIES, SEA-GRAVES, and such as they.

It was a necessary consequence of his great popularity that the Lion of Heraldry should be blazoned in various attitudes, and also variously tinctured, otherwise it would not be possible duly to distinguish the Lions of different Shields. Heraldry of all countries appear readily to have permitted their Lions to lay aside their natural tawny hue, and in its stead to assume the heraldic or, argent, azure, gules, and sable; but they were not generally disposed to recognise in their Lions any other attitude than the one which they held to be consistent with their Lion character, instincts, and habits—erect, that is, with one hind paw only on the ground, looking forward towards their prey, so as to show but one eye, and evidently in the act of preparing to spring. This undoubtedly most characteristic attitude is rampant, No. 171: and only when he was in this rampant attitude did the early Heraldry consider any Lion to be a Lion, and blazon him by his true name. A Lion walking and looking about him, the early Heraldry held to be acting the part of a leopard: consequently, when he was in any such attitude, they blazoned him as “a leopard.” The animal bearing that name bore it simply as an heraldic title, which distinguished a Lion in a particular attitude. These heraldic “leopards” were drawn in every respect as other heraldic “lions,” without spots or any leopardish distinction whatever. This explains the usage, retained till late in the fourteenth century, which assigned to the Lions of the Royal Shield of England the name of “leopards.” They were so called, not by the enemies of England for derision and insult, as some persons, in their ignorance of early Heraldry, have been pleased both to imagine and to assert; but the English Kings and Princes, who well knew their “Lions” to be Lions, in blazon styled them “leopards,” because they also knew that Lions in the attitude of their "Lions" were heraldic "leopards." When at length the necessity of varying the attitude of their Lions was admitted by all Heralds, in consequence of the greatly increased numbers of the bearers of Lions, some strict adherents to the original distinctive nomenclature blazoned any Lion that was not rampant by the compound term of a "lion-leopard," or a "lion-leopardè."

The following terms are now in use to denote the various attitudes of the Lion in Heraldry:—

Rampant: erect, one hind paw on the ground, the other three paws elevated, the animal looking forward and having

No. 171.
Rampant.

No. 176.
Statant Guardant.

No. 172.
Rampant Guardant.

his tail elevated, No. 171. Rampant Guardant: as before, but looking out from the Shield, No. 172. Rampant Reguardant: as before, but looking backwards.

Passant: walking, three paws on the ground, the dexter fore-paw being elevated, looking forward, the tail displayed over the back, No. 173. Passant Guardant: as before, but

No. 173.
Passant.

No. 175.
Statant.

No. 174.
Passant Guardant.

looking out from the Shield, No. 174. Passant Reguardant: as before, but looking backwards.

Statant: standing, his four paws on the ground, and looking before him, his tail drooping behind him, No. 175. Statant Guardant: as before, but looking out from the Shield, No. 176: in this example the Lion has his tail extended, but this would be specified in the blazon, since without such particular description this Lion's tail would be represented as in No. 175; in like manner, if the tail of a Lion in any other attitude be extended, there must be a statement to that effect.

Sejant: at rest, his fore legs stretched on the ground, but awake, and his head elevated, No. 177. Sejant Ram-

No. 177.
Sejant.

No. 178.
Sejant Rampant.

No. 179.
Couchant.

pant: seated, his fore legs being erect, No. 178. If in either of these cases he looks out from the Shield, the word Guardant is to be added.

Couchant or Dormant: asleep, his head resting on his fore paws, No. 179.

Salient: in the act to spring, the hind paws on the ground, both the fore paws elevated, No. 180.

No. 180.
Salient.

No. 182.
Coward.

No. 181.
Queue Fourchée.

Queue fourchée: having a double tail, or two tails, as No. 181, which is a Lion rampant queue fourchée.

Coward: passant reguardant, his tail between his legs, and showing other signs of alarm ; his movement, indeed, is more rapid than passant, No. 182.

Two Lions rampant, when face to face, are Counter rampant, or Combattant : when back to back, they are Addorsed : when passant or salient in contrary directions, they are Counter passant or Counter salient.

Lions, whatever their tincture, except it be red, or they are charged on a field of that tincture, are armed and langued gules ; but azure in the case of either of these exceptions, unless the contrary be specified in the blazon. When several Lions appear in one composition, or when they are drawn to a comparatively very small scale, they are blazoned as "Lioncels." This term "Lioncel," it must be added, when used alone, denotes a small Lion rampant.

A Lion's head is a Charge : it may be erased, as in No.

No. 183.—Lion's Head.

No. 185.—Lion's Jambe.

No. 184.—Lion's Face.

183 ; or cut off smooth, when it is couped. A Lion's face also is a Charge, No. 184 ; so is his jambe or paw, No. 185.

No. 186.—Demi-Lion Rampant.

No. 187.—England.

A demi-lion rampant is the upper half of his body and the extremity of his tufted tail, as in No. 186.

The LIONS OF ENGLAND are golden Lions leopardé, three in number, placed one above the other on a red Shield. They are blazoned—Gu., three Lions pass. guard., in pale, or, No. 187.

A Lion in this attitude, of this tincture, and on a field gules, may be blazoned as a “Lion of England.” These three Lions first appear upon the second Great Seal of RICHARD I., A.D. 1194, on the Shield of the King, No. 188. An earlier Seal, used by Prince JOHN before his brother’s accession, has a Shield charged with two Lions only, and they are passant, No. 189. The first Great Seal

No. 188.

No. 190.

No. 189.

Richard I. : 2nd Gt. Seal. Richard I. : 1st Gt. Seal. Prince John : Seal.

of the lion-hearted King has a Shield, bowed in its contour, and charged with a single Lion rampant facing to the sinister, or counter-rampant, No. 190; and it has been conjectured that, were the whole face of this Shield visible, a second Lion rampant facing to the dexter would appear, thus charging the Shield with two Lions combattant; this, however, is a conjecture which is not supported by the authority of many Shields of the same form. A red Shield charged with two golden Lions passant guardant in pale (No. 22), and therefore closely resembling No. 189, as I have already shown, has been assigned to WILLIAM I., and his two sons and his grandson, WILLIAM II., HENRY I., and STEPHEN. The Shield bearing the three Lions, No. 187, has been assigned to HENRY II., but it first makes its appearance on the Great Seal of his son. This same Shield has continued, from the time of RICHARD I., to display the ROYAL ARMS of the REALM OF ENGLAND: how, in the course of ages, these Arms became grouped with other insignia, I shall presently have to show.

The Lion passant is carefully distinguished in the earliest Rolls as a different Charge from the Lion passant guardant. Thus (H. 3), for HAMON LE STRANGE—Gu., two Lions passant arg., No. 191; and for JOHN GIFFARD—Gu., three

No. 191.—Le Strange.

No. 192.—Giffard.

No. 193.—Mowbray.

Lions pass. arg., No. 192: for Sir NICHOLAS CAREW (E. 2), —Or, three Lions pass. sa.

From the numerous early Shields which bear Lions rampant, I select the following examples, associated with names illustrious in English History. For ROGER DE MOWBRAY (H. 3)—Gu., a Lion rampt. arg., No. 193: this Coat is quartered by the present Duke of NORFOLK. For FITZ-

ALAN, Earl of ARUNDEL—

Gu., a Lion rampt. or (H. 3), No. 193. For DE LACI, Earl of LINCOLN—Or, a Lion rampt. purpure (E. 2), No. 194. For Sir JOHN DE SEGRAVE (E. 2)—Sa., a

No. 194.—De Lacy.

No. 195.
De Segrave.

Lion rampt. arg., crowned or, No. 195. For PERCY, Earl of NORTHUMBERLAND—Or, a Lion rampt. az., No. 196 : this Shield is drawn from the fine counter-seal of Sir HENRY DE PERCY, first Lord of Alnwick, who died A.D. 1315.

Two Shields of the DE BOHUNS, Nos. 114, 115, already described, exemplify the display of Lioncels as heraldic charges. An earlier Shield, charged with six Lioncels, but without any Ordinary, was borne by FAIR ROSAMOND'S son, WILLIAM LONGESPÉE, Earl of SALISBURY, A.D. 1226 : it is boldly sculptured with his noble effigy in Salisbury Cathedral, and it also appears upon his Seal—Az., six Lioncels

No. 196 - De Percy.

No. 197.—Longespée.

or, No. 197. The Roll of Edward II., confirmed by his Seal, gives for Sir WM. DE LEYBOURNE the same composition, with a difference in the tincturing—Az., six Lioncels arg. Other members of the same family change these tinctures for gules and or, gules and argent, and or and sable (E. 2). Examples of Shields which bear Lions or Lioncels with various other charges will be described and illustrated in succeeding Chapters.

Lions also fulfil important duties of high honour in English Heraldry as Crests and Supporters, and also as Badges. From the time of EDWARD III. a Crowned Lion, at the first standing on a Cap of Estate, and afterwards upon the Crown, has been the Royal Crest of ENGLAND; a Lion also has always been the Royal Crest of SCOTLAND (see Chapter XVIII.). The Princes of the Royal Houses of England, in like manner, have always borne the Royal Lion distinguished by some "Mark of Cadency" (see Chapter XII.): No. 198 is the Lion Crest of the BLACK PRINCE, from his Monument at Canterbury, the Lion differentiated with the Prince's silver label. The Lion also appears as the Crest of many noble and distinguished families, as

No. 199.—Crest of Richard II.

No. 198.—Crest of Black Prince.

the DE BOHUNS, the PERCIES, and the HOWARDS. The Lion Crest of RICHARD II., sculptured statant guardant upon his helm, with a chapeau and mantling, and with the Badge of two Ostrich feathers, in Westminster Hall, is without any crown: No. 199.

As a Royal Supporter of the Arms of England, the Lion appears in company with some other creature from the time of HENRY VI., EDWARD IV. sometimes having his Shield supported by two Lions. On the accession of JAMES I. of Great Britain, the Royal Lion Supporter formed that alliance with the Unicorn of Scotland which still continues, and will continue, it is to be hoped, throughout all time. Lions, as I shall point out more in detail in Chapter XVI., were frequently introduced into the composition of Seals before true heraldic Supporters were in use. In more recent Heraldry the Lion is a favourite Supporter: he now appears supporting the Shields of the Dukes of NORFOLK, ARGYLL, ATHOLE, BEDFORD, BUCKINGHAM, CLEVELAND, GRAFTON, NORTHUMBERLAND, PORTLAND, and WELLINGTON; also, with many others, those of the Marquesses of BATH, EXETER, HEADFORT, and SALISBURY; of the Earls of ALBEMARLE, BROWNLOW, CARLISLE, CARNARVON, CORK, ESSEX, and HARDWICK; of the Viscount HARDINGE; and of the Barons ARUNDEL, CAMOYS, DUNBOYNE, MONSON, PETRE, and SOUTHAMPTON. As a Supporter the Lion is represented rampant, rampant reguardant, and sejant rampant. Lions also, and Demi-Lions, are frequently borne as modern Crests.

In our own treatment of the Lions of Heraldry, whatever their attitude or tincture, whatever also the position they may occupy or the heraldic duty they may discharge, we are always to draw and to blazon them as true heraldic Lions, while, at the same time, in their expression and general characteristics they are to be genuine Lions.

In becoming fellowship with the Lion, the EAGLE appears in the earliest English Rolls and examples of Arms. The Royal bird, however, does not occur in English blazon so frequently as the Lion; and his appearance often denotes an alliance with German Princes. A Roll of Arms (printed in "Archæologia," XXX.) of the year 1275 commences with the Shields of the "EMPEROR OF GERMANY," and of the "KING OF GERMANY," which are severally blazoned as,—"Or, an Eagle displayed having two heads sa.," and, "Or, an Eagle displayed sable." In York Cathedral, in stained glass, there are Shields with both the double-headed and the single-headed Eagles, all of them German, which may be considered to have been executed before the year 1310. In the north choir-aisle at Westminster, the Shield (now mutilated) of the Emperor FREDE-RICK II. is boldly sculptured by an heraldic artist of the time of our HENRY III., No. 200; here the Eagle had one head only. The German Emperors naturally adopted the

No. 200.—In Westmminster Abbey.

Eagle for their heraldic Ensign, in support of their claim to be successors to the Roman Cæsars; and the Russian Czars, with the same motive, have also assumed the same ensign. The Eagle having two heads, which severally look

No. 201.—Imperial Eagle.

No. 202.—Royal Eagle.

to the dexter and the sinister, as in No. 201, typified a rule that claimed to extend over both the Eastern and the Western Empires; as the Eagle with a single head, No.
202, might be considered to have a less comprehensive signification. The Eagles of the Princes of Germany are frequently to be found, blazoned for them, in England.

RICHARD, the second son of King JOHN, in the year 1256 was elected King of Germany (he is generally styled "King of the Romans"), when he bore the Eagle of the Empire: but the only Seals of this Prince that are known to exist in England display the Shield of his English Earldom of Cornwall, No. 140. His Son EDMUND, who succeeded to his father's Earldom, on his Seals has represented an Eagle bearing in its beak his Shield of Cornwall, as in

No. 203.—Cornwall.

No. 204.—Seal of Euphemia Leslie.

No. 203: this is a peculiarly interesting example of an heraldic usage of striking significance, and it also illustrates the early existence of the sentiment which at a later period led to the adoption of "Supporters" to Shields of Arms. In the early Heraldry of Scotland, a single displayed Eagle is occasionally found supporting an armorial Shield; as in the Seals of ALEXANDER STEWARD, Earl of MENTEITH, A.D. 1296, and WILLIAM, Earl of DOUGLAS and MAR, A.D. 1378 (SETON'S "Scottish Heraldry," Plates VIII. and XII.): sometimes also, as Mr. Seton has observed, "the Eagle's breast is charged with more than one Shield, as in the case of the Seals of MARGARET STEWART, Countess of ANGUS (1366), and EUPHEMIA LESLIE, Countess of Ross (1381), on both of which three escutcheons make their appearance" ("Scottish Heraldry," p. 268, and Plate XII., No. 5): in No. 204 I give a woodcut of this interesting composition; the Shields are, to the dexter, LESLIE—Arg., on a bend az., three buckles or; in the centre, the Arms of the Earl of Ross—Gu., three Lions rampant arg., within a tressure; and, to the sinister, CUMMIN—Az., three garbs or. The Imperial Eagle is sometimes represented crowned; the heads also in some examples are encircled with a nimbus or glory, as in No. 212. I must add that in the Heraldry of the English Peerage the Imperial Eagle still supports the Shields of some few Peers of different ranks; as those of the Duke of MARLBOROUGH, the Earl of DENBIGH, and Baron METHUEN. The old Scottish usage in this respect is also still retained, as in the case of the Shield of Sir JAMES STUART MENTETH, of Closeburn, Baronet, which is charged upon the breast of an Eagle.

PIERS GAVESTON, who was created Earl of CORNWALL by EDWARD II., bore—Vert, six Eaglets or, No. 205, (E. 2 and York stained glass): on his Seal, however, the number of the Eaglets is reduced to three. Another early example is the Shield of that gallant and persevering knight, RALPH DE MONTHERMER—Or, an Eagle displayed vert,

No. 205.—Shield of Piers Gaveston.

No. 206, who became Earl of GLOUCESTER in right of his wife, JOAN, daughter of EDWARD I., and widow of GILBERT

DE CLARE, the "Red Earl:" this green Eagle of Monthermer long held a place of high distinction in the mediæval

No. 206.—Montacute and Monthermer.

Heraldry of England, marshalled on the Shields of the Earls of SALISBURY and WARWICK; in which, as in the example, No. 206, the Eagle of Monthermer is quartered with the coat of Montacute, No. 20A (page 70). The Eagle of early Heraldry was sometimes blazoned as an "Erne," and sometimes as an "Alerion." WILLIAM D'ERNFORD (H. 3) bears—Sa., an

Erne displayed arg.: and, at the same period WM. DE ERNFIELD bears a pair of Erne's or Eagle's Wings, called a "Vol," No. 207. From Shields of the fourteenth century which bear Eagles, and are blazoned in the Roll of Edward II., I select the following small group as good examples:—Sir WM. DE MONTGOMERIE—Or, an Eagle displayed az.: Sir NICHOLAS DE ETONE—Gu., a Chevron between three Eaglets arg. Sir JOHN DE CHARLESTONE—

No. 208.—De Charlestone.

No. 207.—A Vol.

No. 209.—De la Mere.

Arg., on a Chevron vert three Eaglets or, No. 208: Sir PHILIP DE VERLEY—Or, a Bend gu., between six Eaglets sa.: Sir JOHN DE LA MERE—Arg., on a Bend az. three Eaglets or, No. 209: a Shield bearing a Bend charged with three Eagles, but with different tinctures, No. 88, I have shown to have been the Arms of the Grandisons.

Eagles, under their name of "Alerions" (which some early Heralds represented without feet and beaks), are blazoned in the same disposition as in No. 209, in the Arms of the Duchy of LORRAINE,—Or, on a Bend gu. three alerions arg.: and this device the Dukes of Lorraine are said to have borne in commemoration of an exploit of their famous ancestor, GODFREY DE BOLOGNE, who is also said, when "shooting against David's tower in Jerusalem," to have "broched upon his arrow three footless birds called alerions." "It is impossible," remarks Mr. Planché upon this legend, "now to ascertain who broached this wonderful story; but it is perfectly evident that the narrator was the party who drew the long bow, and not the noble GODFREY." Mr. Planché adds, that the Alerions of Lorraine may indicate an alliance with the Imperial House; and he directs attention to "a similarity in sound between 'Alerion' and 'Lorraine,'" and also to a singular Anagram produced by the letters ALERION and LORRAINE, which are the same ("Pursuivant of Arms," p. 87). The Arms of Lorraine are still borne by the Emperor of AUSTRIA: and in England they were quartered by Queen MARGARET of Anjou.

The Roll of Edward II. gives also for Sir HUGH DE BILBESWORTH these arms—Az., three Eagles displayed or. A similar Shield, the tinctures changed to—Arg., three Eagles displayed gu., armed or, was borne by ROBERT DE EGLESFIELD, Confessor to PHILIPPA of Hainault, Queen of EDWARD III., who in the year 1340 founded Queen's College, Oxford: this Shield of the Founder is borne by the College. One of the Shields in the Chantry of Abbot RAMRYGE in St. Alban's Abbey Church bears the same charges—three eagles displayed, No. 210: the drawing of the eagle in this Shield is remarkable, and the form of the Shield itself is singularly characteristic of the close of the fifteenth century. Another Shield in the same monument bears a single Eagle, drawn in the same manner, and sculptured with extraordinary spirit. The heraldic Eagle is generally drawn in England after the manner of the Westminster example, No. 200, with slight modifications of that type. The German Heralds, and also their brethren of France, delight in exaggerations of what I may distinguish as the Westminster Eagle. The Austrian Eagle, besides having both its heads crowned, has a large Imperial Crown placed

No. 210.—Shield at St. Albans.

No. 211.—The Austrian Eagle.

between the two heads, and also above them, as in No. 211. The Prussian Eagle is treated after the same manner. The German Imperial Eagle sometimes has a nimbus or glory about each head, which dignified accessory is represented by a circular line, as in No. 212. I observe that in the last editions of Sir Bernard Burke's "Peerage," the German Eagles of the Duke of MARLBOROUGH and the Earl of DENBIGH have the nimbus drawn in such a manner as to have the appearance of a ring placed in each beak. In some examples of Eagles as well in our own Heraldry as in that of continental countries, the wings are represented as erect, and having the tips of all the principal feathers pointing upwards, as in No. 213. The Eagle now

No. 212.

German Imperial Eagle, with Nimbus.

No. 213.

German Eagle with Wings erect.

borne as the Ensign of Imperial FRANCE, sits, grasping a thunderbolt, in an attitude of vigilance, having its wings elevated, but with the tips of the feathers drooping, as they would be in the living bird; No. 214.

No. 214.—French Imperial Eagle.

EDWARD III., as a Second Crest, bore an Eagle. An Eagle also was borne for his Crest, as the imperial bird was displayed upon his Shield (No. 206), by Earl RALPH DE MONTHERMER.

In the more recent Heraldry of England, the Eagle is a Supporter to the Shields of the Earls of CLARENDON, COVENTRY, MALMESBURY; the Viscounts BOLINGBROKE and ST. VINCENT; and the Barons HEYTESBURY, OVERSTONE, RADSTOCK, WYNFORD, and others. Eagles also and Demi-Eagles are borne as Crests in the English Heraldry of our own day.

As small Lions in Heraldry are “Lioncels,” so small Eagles are “Eaglets.” In drawing our heraldic Eagles, we can scarcely improve upon some of the examples in which early English Heralds expressed their ideas of the king of birds.

CHAPTER X.

THE GRAMMAR OF HERALDRY: GLOSSARY OF TITLES, NAMES, AND TERMS.

"The several denominations given to these tokens of honour with the terms of art given to them."—RANDLE HOME; Academy of Armoury, A.D. 1683.

IN this Glossary, which obviously must be as concise as possible, I shall include no word that is ordinarily well understood, unless some special signification should be attached to it when it is in use in armorial blazon.

Abased. Said of a charge when placed lower than its customary position.

Abatement. A sign of degradation: also, differencing to denote illegitimacy. (See Chapter XII.)

Accollée. Placed side by side; also, entwined about the neck.

Accosted. Side by side.

Accrued. Grown to maturity.

Achievement, or Achievement of Arms. Any complete heraldic composition.

Addorsed. Back to back; pointing backwards.

Affrontée. So placed as to show the full face or front.

Alant, Aland. A mastiff with short ears.

Alerion. A name sometimes given by early Heralds to the heraldic Eagle, which, when blazoned under this title, was also sometimes drawn without legs or beak. (See p. 97.)

Ambulant. In the act of walking.

Annulet. A plain ring; sometimes blazoned as a "false roundle:" in modern cadency, the difference of the fifth son or brother: No. 154.

Annulettée. Ending in Annulets.

Antelope. Blazoned by early Heralds in a conventional manner, now generally rendered naturally.

Anthony, St. His cross is in the form of the letter T, No. 93.

Antique Crown. See Eastern Crown.

Appaumée. Said of a hand, when open, erect, and showing the palm: No. 215.

Arched, Archy. Bent, or bowed.

Archbishop. A prelate of the highest order in the English Church; his heraldic insignia are his Mitre, Crozier, and Pall. Next to the Royal Family, the Archbishop of Canterbury is the first subject in the realm; he is styled "Most Reverend Father in God," "by Divine Providence," and "Your Grace." The Archbishop of York is third in rank (the Lord Chancellor being second), and his style is the same, except that he is Archbishop "by Divine permission." Archbishops impale their own arms with those of their see, the latter being marshalled to the dexter.

No 215.
Badge of Ulster.

Argent. The metal silver.

Arm. A human arm. When a charge, crest, or badge, it must be blazoned with full particulars as to position, clothing, &c. If couped at the elbow, it is a cubit arm.

Armed. A term applied to animals and birds of prey, to denote their natural weapons of offence and defence: thus, a Lion is said to be "armed of his claws and teeth;" a Bull, to be "armed of his horns;" an Eagle, "of its beak and talons."

Armory. Heraldry. Also, a List of Names and Titles, with their respective Arms.

Arms, Armorial Bearings. Heraldic compositions, and the Figures and Devices which form them. (See Chapter I.)

Arms of Community. Borne by Corporate and other Bodies and Communities, as cities, colleges, &c.

Arms of Dominion. Borne by Sovereign Princes, being also the arms of the realms over which they rule.

Arms of Office. Borne, with the personal arms, to denote official rank.

Arms of Pretension. Borne to denote a claim, or a supposed right, to a sovereignty or other rank, without the actual possession of it.

Arms of Succession. Borne, with the personal arms, to denote the possession of various dignities and estates.

Armes Parlantes. Such as are allusive to the Name, Title, Office, or Property of those who bear them: thus, Leaves for Leveson, a Castle for Castile, a Cup for Butler, Fish for those who derive revenues from Fisheries, &c. (See Rebus: also page 15.)

Armoyée. Charged with an armorial shield.

Arrondie. Curved, rounded.

Arrow. Is armed of its head, and flighted of its feathers; a bundle of arrows is a sheaf; with a blunt head, it is a bird-bolt.

Ascendant. Issuing upwards, as a flower.

Aspect. Position.

Aspectant. Respecting (looking at) one another.

Aspersed. Scattered over—the same as semée.

At Gaze. A term applied to animals of the chase, to denote their standing still, and looking about them: No. 167.

Attires, Attired. The antlers of a Stag or “Hart:” having antlers. A Reindeer is represented in Heraldry with double attires, one pair erect, and the other drooping.

Augmentation. An honourable addition to a Coat of Arms, specially granted with a peculiar significance: thus, the “Union” Device of the British Empire, blazoned on an Escutcheon of Pretence, is the “Augmentation” specially granted to the great Duke of WELLINGTON, to be borne on the honour point of his paternal shield.

Augmented. Having an “Augmentation.”

Avellane. A variety of the heraldic Cross : No. 109.

Azure. The colour blue indicated by horizontal lines : No. 52.

Badge. A figure or device, distinct from a crest, and borne without any shield or other accessory, except sometimes a motto. Badges are of two kinds ; the one personal, and peculiarly significant of the bearer himself ; the other borne by all persons connected with and dependent on the owner, and used by him for all purposes of decoration. (See Chapter XV.)

Banded. Encircled with a band.

Banner. A square or narrow oblong flag, charged with the coat of arms of the owner, displayed over its entire surface. It was the ensign both of a Knight Banneret and of his followers. (See Chapter XVII.)

Banneret. A Knight who had been advanced by the King to that higher military rank which entitled him to display a banner.

Bar. One of the Ordinaries : Nos. 81, 82.

Bars Gemelles. Barrulets borne in pairs : Nos. 83, 84.

Barbed. Pointed, as an arrow. The term is also applied to the small green leaves about heraldic roses. (See Rose.)

Barbel. A Fish borne as an allusive device by the family of DE BARRE : No. 162.

Barded. Having horse-trappings.

Bardings. Horse-trappings, often enriched with armorial blazonry. On the Great Seal of EDWARD I. the Bardings of the King's charger for the first time appear adorned with the Royal blazonry. On both sides of the horse, the head is supposed to be to the dexter. A good example is represented in the Seal of ALEXANDER DE BALLIOL, in Chapter XIV.

Barnacles, Breys. An instrument used in breaking horses. A rebus of Sir REGINALD BRAY, architect of St. George's

No. 216.—Breys.

No. 217.—Baron's Coronet.

Chapel, Windsor, and repeatedly represented there :
No. 216.

Baron. The lowest rank in the British Peerage, corresponding with the Thane of the Saxons. A Baron is "Right Honourable," and is styled "My Lord." His coronet, first granted by Charles II., has on a golden circlet six large pearls, of which four appear in representations, as in No. 217. All a Baron's children are "honourable."

Baron. A husband, a wife in Heraldry being femme.

Baroness. The wife of a baron. She is "Right Honourable," is styled "My Lady," and her coronet is the same as her husband's.

Baronet. An hereditary rank, lower than the peerage, instituted in 1612 by JAMES I., who fixed the precedence of Baronets before all Knights, those of the Order of the Garter alone excepted. As originally created, all Baronets were "of Ulster," or "of Nova Scotia;" now all are "of the United Kingdom." The "Badge of Ulster," generally borne as an augmentation upon a small inescutcheon, is—Arg., a sinister hand, coupé at the wrist and appaumée, gu.—No. 215. The arms of Nova Scotia, borne also on a canton or inescutcheon, are—Arg., on a saltire az., the Royal arms of Scotland. (See No. 138.) By letters patent of JAMES I., the wives of Baronets have the titles of "Lady, Madam, and Dame," at their pleasure prefixed to their names.

Barrulet. The diminutive of a Bar.

Barrulée, Barruly. Barry of ten or more pieces.

Barry. Divided into an even number of Bars, which all lie in the same plane : Nos. 85, 86.

Barry Bendy. Having the field divided by lines drawn bar-wise, which are crossed by others drawn bend-wise : No. 119.

Bar-wise. Disposed after the manner of a Bar,—crossing the field, that is, horizontally.

Base. The lowest extremity : No. 27B.

Basilisk. A cockatrice having its tail ending in a dragon's head.

Basinet. A helm fitting close to the head.

Baton. A diminutive of the bend sinister, coupé at its extremities.

Battled. Having battlements, or bordered, as No. 38F.

Battled, Embattled. Having double battlements.

Beacon, or Fire Beacon. An iron case of burning combustibles set on a pole, against which a ladder is placed.

Beaked. Applied to birds, not of prey.

Bearer. In Scottish heraldry, a Supporter.

Bearing, Bearings. Armorial insignia, borne on shields.

Bell. Drawn, and generally blazoned as a church-bell.

Belled. Having bells attached.

Bend. One of the Ordinaries : Nos. 111—115.

Bendlet. The diminutive of a bend : No. 117.

Bend-wise, or In Bend. Arranged in the direction of a bend.

Bendy. Parted bend-wise into an even number of divisions : No. 116.

Bezant. A golden "Roundle" or disc, flat like a coin : No. 151, and No. 140.

Billet. An oblong figure of any tincture : Billetée—studded with “Billets :” Nos. 130, 146.

Bird. Many Birds appear in blazon, and they are represented both in heraldic tinctures and “proper”—in their natural aspect. (See Chapters VIII. and IX.)

Bird-bolt. An arrow with a blunt head.

Bishop. The Bishops are “by Divine permission,” and are styled “Right Reverend Father in God,” and “My Lord Bishop.” The Bishops of England and Wales are all “spiritual peers” of Parliament, except the prelate last consecrated. Their heraldic insignia are a mitre and pastoral staff; they impale their arms, as do the Archbishops ; and, like them also, they bear neither supporters nor crests, but they ensign their shields with a mitre.

Blasted. Leafless, withered.

Blazon. Heraldry : Armorial Compositions. “To blazon” is to describe or to represent any armorial Figure, Device, or Composition in an heraldic manner. Blazoning—Describing in heraldic language : also, representing in an heraldic manner. Blazonry—the representation of any heraldic Figure, Device, or Composition.

No. 218.—Water Bouget.

No. 219.—Bourchier Knot.

Boar. In Heraldry entitled Sanglier.

Bordure. A Subordinary : Nos. 139, 140. Also, an important “Difference.” (See Chapters XII. and XIII.)

Botonée, Botonée Fitchée. Varieties of the heraldic Cross : Nos. 103, 110. This Cross is also entitled Treflée.

Bouget, or Water Bouget. A charge, representing the vessels used by the Crusaders for carrying water. Fine early examples occur in the Temple Church, at Beverley Minster, and in a monument at Blyborough, Lincolnshire: No. 218.

Bourchier Knot. A badge represented in No. 219.

Bourdon. A palmer's or pilgrim's staff. (See Pilgrim's Staff.)

Bow. The archer's weapon, in all its varieties of form, is a charge.

Bowed. Having a convex contour: No. 39.

Bowen Knot. No. 220.

Braced, Brazed. Interlaced.

Breys. Barnacles.

Brizure. A difference or mark of cadency.

Brouchant. Placed over, as when one charge overlies another.

Buckle. See Fermaile.

Burgonet. A helm worn in the sixteenth century.

Cabossed. The head of a stag, or other animal, represented full-faced, so as to show the face only: No. 170.

No. 220.—Bowen Knot.

No. 221.—Caltrap.

Cadency. Figures and devices, introduced into armorial compositions, in order to distinguish the different members and branches of the same family. (See Difference, and Chapter XII.)

Cadet. A junior member or branch of a family.

Caltrap. An implement used in war to maim horses: No. 221.

Canting Heraldry. Armes Parlantes.

Canton, or Quarter. One of the Subordinaries : Nos. 129, 130.

Cantoned. Placed in the first quarter of a shield ; also, placed between four charges.

Carbuncle. The same as Escarbuncle.

Cartouche. No. 46.

Castle. Generally represented crowned with three turrets, as in the shield of Queen Alianore, of Castile : No. 222.

No. 222.—Castle.

No. 223.—Celestial Crown.

Celestial Crown. No. 223.

Centaur. Also blazoned as a sagittary, and supposed to be a badge of King Stephen.

Cerceleé, or Recerceleé. A variety of the heraldic Cross : No. 98.

No. 224.
Chapeau of Estate.

No. 225.—Arms of Saxony.

Chapeau. Also entitled a chapeau or cap of dignity, of maintenance, or of estate. An early symbol of high dignity, represented as supporting certain crests : No. 224.

Chaplet. A garland or entwined wreath of leaves and flowers, or of flowers alone. A chaplet of rue, sometimes called a crancelin, is blazoned bend-wise in the shield of Saxony—Barry of ten or and sa., over all a chaplet of rue vert: No. 225. (See Crancelin.)

Charge. Any heraldic figure or device. Charged—placed on a shield, banner, &c., as any heraldic figure or device may be.

Chequée, Checky. Having the field divided into three, or into more than three, contiguous rows of small squares, alternately of a metal (or fur) and a colour: No. 68.

Chess rook. A piece used in the game of Chess: borne by Rokewood and others: No. 226.

Chevron. One of the Ordinaries: Nos. 123, 125.

Chevronel. A diminutive of the Chevron: No. 124.

Chevronée, Chevrony. A field divided per Chevron: No. 124A.

Chief. One of the Ordinaries: Nos. 71—75. In Chief—arranged horizontally across the upper part of the field.

No. 226.
Chess Rook.

No. 227.
Cinque-foil.

No. 228.—Clarions.

Cinque-foil, Quint-foil. A flower or leaf of five foils: No. 227.

Civic Crown. A wreath of oak-leaves and acorns.

Clarenceux. See Herald.

Clarion. An ancient musical instrument, a badge, apparently, of the DE CLARES. By some this charge is supposed to represent a lance-rest, and is sometimes so blazoned: No 228, which shows two varieties of form.

Clechée, or Undée. A variety of the heraldic Cross: No. 105.

Close. With closed wings.

Closet. A Diminutive of the Bar, one half its width.

Clouée. Fastened with Nails, and showing the Nail-heads :
No. 150.

Coat Armour. True armorial or heraldic bearings, duly granted or inherited, and rightly borne : so entitled, from having been blazoned by knightly warriors of the Middle Ages upon their surcoats, worn by them over their armour.

Coat of Arms. A complete armorial composition, to be charged upon a Shield or Banner.

Cockatrice. A fabulous creature, represented in No. 229.

Collar. One of the insignia of Orders of Knighthood, worn about the neck. Also any ornament or distinction worn in the same manner. Knights occasionally wore collars charged with their own badge. In addition to their badges of the Red and White Rose, the adherents of the rival houses of York and Lancaster wore collars, the former

No. 229.
Cockatrice.

No. 230.—Collar of York.

No. 231.—Collar of Lancaster.

formed of alternate Suns and Roses, No. 230 ; and the latter, of the letter S continually repeated, No. 231. No certain origin has been discovered for the Lancastrian “Collar of S.,” but it is supposed to represent the word SOVERAYGNE, the motto of HENRY IV. No. 230 is from the Brass to HENRY BOURCHIER, K.G., Earl of Essex, at Little Easton, Suffolk, A.D. 1483; and No. 231 from the Brass to Lord CAMOYS, K.G., at Trotton, Sussex, A.D. 1424.

College of Arms, or Herald's College. (See Herald.)

Colour. See Chapter V., page 41. The term "Colours" is applied to Flags, particularly to those of infantry regiments, and to such as are displayed at sea. (See Chapter XVII.)

Combattant. Two lions, or other animals of prey, rampant and face to face.

Compartment. In Scottish Heraldry, "a kind of carved panel, of no fixed form, placed below the escutcheon, bearing the supporters, and usually inscribed with a motto or the name and designation of the owner."—Seton.

Componée, Compony, or Gobony. A single row of small squares alternately of two tinctures or furs: No. 66. (See Counter Componée.)

Complement. Applied to the moon when full.

Compound Quartering. The quartering of a quarter, or division of a quartered Coat-of-Arms. (See page 34.)

Compounded Arms. Arms formed from the combination of the bearings of two or more distinct coats, to produce a single compound coat.

Conjoined in lure. Two wings united, their tips in base.

Contoise. A flowing scarf, worn attached to the helm before 1350. Two examples occur in effigies in Exeter Cathedral, and another in Westminster Abbey.

Contournée. Facing to the sinister.

Cornish Chough. A bird like a crow, black, with red beak and legs.

Coronet. An ensign of Nobility worn upon the head, in use in England from about the middle of the fourteenth century, but without any distinctive tokens of gradations of rank until a later period. In modern times English Coronets have enclosed a velvet cap with a bullion tassel: at the present time, however, this cap, with better taste, is generally omitted. (See Prince, Duke, Marquess, Earl, Viscount, and Baron.)

Cotise. A diminutive of the Bend, being one-fourth of its width. Cotised. When a Bend is placed between two Cotises, or when a Fesse or Bar is placed between two Barrulets. Nos. 114, 115.

Couchant, or Dormant. In repose. No. 179.

Couchée. Said of a Shield when suspended from the sinister extremity of the chief, or when placed as if it were so suspended. No. 49.

Count, Countess. Count, in Latin "Comes," the same as Earl. Countess, the wife of an Earl: she is "Right Honourable," and styled "My Lady:" her coronet is the same as that of an Earl.

Counter. Reversed or opposite.

Counter-changing. See page 44, and Nos. 70, 126.

Counter Componée. Double Componée, or two conjoined rows of alternately tinctured squares. No. 67.

Counter-seal. Early seals were generally impressed on both sides; and the seals thus were produced from two dies or matrices. The two sides were severally called the seal and the counter-seal, the latter being the reverse of the compound composition. Every such double impression constituted a single seal. Both seal and counter-seal were sometimes used alone; and the counter-seal was regarded as a private seal, or secretum.

Couped. Cut off smoothly—the reverse of "erased."

Couple-close. Half a chevronel.

Courant. Running.

Courtesy, Titles of. Nominal degrees of rank, conceded to, and borne by the Eldest Sons of Dukes, Marquesses, and Earls.

Covert. Partly covered.

Coward, Cowed. An animal with its tail between its legs, and showing other signs of terror. No. 182.

Crampet. The decorated end of a sword-scabbard.

Crancelin. From the German kranzlein, "a small garland," applied to the chaplet that crosses the shield of Saxony, No. 225: this charge is also blazoned as a bend treflée vert, a bend archée coronettée, or a coronet extended in bend: it is said to be an augmentation conferred, with the Dukedom of Saxony, on BERNHARD of Ascania, by the Emperor BARBAROSSA. The Emperor took from his head his own chaplet of rue, and threw it across the shield of Duke Bernhard.

Crenellated. Embattled.

Crescent. No. 166. In modern cadency, the difference of the second son, or house.

Cresset. A beacon.

Crest. A figure or device originally worn upon a helm, and now generally represented above a Shield of arms. Crests at first were ensigns of high honour, and their use was restricted to a few persons of eminence: they were attached to a wreath, or orle, or to a coronet, which encircled the helm or basinet; and sometimes a crest stood upon a cap of estate. Crests are still represented standing upon either a coronet, a wreath, or a cap: but in our own Heraldry a crest-coronet must always be carefully distinguished from those coronets that are insignia of princely and noble rank. Crests are not borne by ladies, the Sovereign excepted. (See Panache, Rebus, and Chapter XIV.)

Crest-Coronet. A coronet to support a crest. No. 232.

Crest-Wreath, or Orle. In the Middle Ages, of rich materials and costly workmanship; now represented as being formed of two rolls of silk of the principal metal and colour in the arms, which are twisted to show the metal and colour alternately. The earliest examples

No. 232.—Crest-Coronet.

No. 233.—Crest-Wreath.

are about A.D. 1375. No. 233 shows three varieties of representation. (See Chapter XIV.)

Crined. Having a mane or hair.

Cross. One of the Ordinaries. Nos. 90—110.

Crown. The ensign of Royal and Imperial dignity; in Heraldry borne as a charge, and also used to denote the rank of a Sovereign Prince. The Crown that is generally borne as a charge is represented without arches, and resembling No. 232. Certain other crowns, each distinguished by an appropriate title, are also sometimes borne on shields, or introduced as heraldic accessories. (See Celestial, Eastern or Radiated, Mural, Naval, and Vallary Crowns.) The different forms assumed at different periods by the Royal Crown of England are faithfully exemplified in the seals and the coinage of the successive Sovereigns, and several fine examples are preserved in the Royal effigies. The adornment of the regal circlet was arbitrary before the fifteenth century; still, it always was enriched with gems and surmounted by golden foliage. HENRY V.

first arched his crown; and by HENRY VI. the circlet was first heightened with alternate crosses-patée and fleurs de lys. This arrangement has since been retained, the subsequent alterations being restricted to changes in the number and in the contour of the arches. The crown of Her Majesty the QUEEN has the circlet heightened with four crosses and as many fleurs de lys; from the crosses rise the arches, which are surmounted by a mound and a cross-patée. No. 234.

No. 234.

Crown of H. M. The Queen.

No. 235.

Dacre Knot and Badges.

Crozier. The cross-staff of an archbishop; distinguished by its form from the pastoral-staff with a crook-head, of bishops.

Crusilee, Crusily. Having the field semée of crosses-crosslets, or of other small crosses, their peculiar form (when not crosslets) being specified.

Cubit-arm. A human arm couped at the elbow.

Cup, Covered Cup. A vessel formed like a chalice, and having a raised cover; borne by the BOTILERS, BUTLERS, etc.

Cushion, Pillow, Oreiller. Unless described of another form, square or oblong, and with a tassel at each corner.

Dacre Knot. No. 235. (See Knot.)

Dancette. No. 38B. In early blazon, a fesse dancette, and sometimes a series of fusils conjoined in fesse, is styled simply "a dancette" or "a danse." Nos. 78, 146; and No. 20A, page 70.

Debased. Reversed.

Debruised. When an ordinary surmounts an animal or another ordinary.

Decrescent, In Detriment. A half-moon having its horns to the sinister. No. 166 c.

Deer. A stag, with antlers, is a Hart; the female is a Hind. (See Chapter VIII.)

Degreed, Degraded. Placed on steps.

Demembered, Dismembered. Cut into pieces, but without any alteration in the form of the original figure.

Demi. The half. The upper, front, or dexter half, unless the contrary be specified. No. 186.

Depressed. Surmounted.

Developed. Displayed, unfurled.

Dexter. The right side. No. 27 c.

Diaper, Diapering. Surface decoration. No. 68.

Difference, Differencing. An addition to, or some change in, a Coat-of-Arms, introduced for the purpose of distinguishing Coats which in their primary qualities are the same. Differencing is sometimes used in the same sense as Cadency; but, strictly, it is distinct, having reference to alliance and dependency, without blood-relationship, or to the system adopted for distinguishing similar Coats-of-Arms. (See Chapters XII. and XIII.)

Dimidiated. Cut in halves per pale, and one half removed: No. 250. (See Chapter XI.)

Disclosed. With expanded wings, in the case of birds that are not birds of prey. The contrary to Close.

Displayed. Birds of prey with expanded wings. No. 200.

Disposed, Disposition. Arranged, arrangement.

Dividing Lines. No. 38: also Nos. 27—37.

Dolphin. A favourite fish with Heralds. The heraldic Dolphin of antiquity is exemplified in No. 8 ; that of the middle ages in No. 163.

Dormant, or Couchant. Asleep, as in No. 179.

Doubling. The lining of a Mantle or Mantling.

Dove-tail. No. 381.

Dragon. A winged monster having four legs. No. 236.

Duke. The highest rank and title in the British Peerage ; first introduced by EDWARD III. in the year 1337, when he created the BLACK PRINCE the first English Duke (in Latin, "Dux"). A Duke is "Most Noble ;" he is styled "My Lord Duke," and "Your Grace ;" and all his sons are "Lords," and all his daughters "Ladies," with the prefix "Right Honourable." His eldest son bears, by royal concession and courtesy, his father's

No. 236.—Dragon.

No. 237.—Duke's Coronet.

"second title ;" and, accordingly, he generally bears the title of Marquess. Whatever his title, however, the rank of the eldest son of a Duke is always the same, and it assigns to him precedence between Marquesses and Earls. The Coronet of a Duke, arbitrary in its adornment until the sixteenth century was far advanced, is now a circlet, heightened with eight conventional strawberry-leaves, of which in representations three and two half-leaves are shown ; No. 237. The present ducal coronet is represented in the portrait of LUDOVICK STUART, K.G., Duke of RICHMOND and LENNOX, who died in 1624; the picture, the property of the Crown, is at Hampton Court.

Ducal Coronet. A term commonly, but always most improperly, applied to a Crest Coronet. No. 232.

Duchess. The wife of a Duke. She is "Most Noble," and is styled "Your Grace." Her coronet is the same as that of a Duke.

Eagle. See Chapter IX., page 92.

Eaglet. An Eagle on a small scale.

Earl. In Latin, "Comes;" in French, "Compte" or "Count." Before 1337, the highest, and now the third degree of rank and dignity in the British Peerage. An Earl is "Right Honourable;" he is styled "My Lord;" his eldest son bears his father's "second title," generally that of Viscount; his other sons are "Honourable," but all his daughters are "Ladies" and "Right Honourable." An Earl's Coronet has eight lofty rays of gold rising from the circlet, each of which supports

No. 238.—Earl's Coronet.

No. 239.—Eastern Crown.

a large pearl, while between each pair of these rays there is a golden strawberry-leaf. In representations five of the rays and pearls are shown; No. 238. Elevated clusters of pearls appear in an Earl's coronet—that of THOMAS FITZ ALAN, Earl of ARUNDEL—as early as 1445; but the present form of the coronet may be assigned to the second half of the following century.

Eastern, Radiated, or Antique Crown. No. 239.

Electoral Bonnet. A cap of crimson velvet guarded with ermine, borne over the inescutcheon of the arms of Hanover from 1801 till 1816. No. 240.

Embattled, Battled. No. 38F.

Embowed. Bent. An arm embowed has the elbow to the dexter.

Embrued. Stained with blood.

Endorse. A diminutive of the pale.

No. 240.—Electoral Bonnet.

No. 241—Shield of Byron.

Enfiled. Pierced with a sword.

Engrailed. The border-line, No. 38D. By the early Heralds this term was used to denote “fusils conjoined in fesse,” the number of their points being specified.

Enhanced. Raised towards the chief. Thus the arms of BYRON, No. 241, are—Arg., three bendlets enhanced gu.

Ensigned. Adorned; having some ensign of honour placed above—as a coronet above a shield.

Entire. Said of a charge when it extends to the border lines of a shield, coat, or banner; also of a shield, coat, or banner of arms, when borne without any difference or mark of cadency.

Entoïre, Entoyre. A bordure charged with a series of inanimate figures or devices, as crosslets, roundles, &c.; to a similar bordure of living figures the term Enaluron is applied.

Enveloped, Environed. Surrounded.

Equipped. Fully armed, caparisoned, or provided.

Eradicated. Torn up by the roots.

Erased. Torn off with a ragged edge; the contrary to Couped.

Ermine, Ermines, Erminois. Nos. 57—60 and 57A. The animal, the ermine, sometimes appears in blazon, and an ermine spot is borne as a charge.

Erne. An eagle. (See p. 96.)

Escarbuncle. No. 19.

Escroll. A ribbon charged with a motto; also a ribbon, coiled at its extremities, borne as a charge.

Escutcheon. An heraldic shield: Nos. 39-40: also No. 27. An Escutcheon is borne as a charge, when it is blazoned as an "Inescutcheon:" thus, the Arms of HAY are,—Arg., three inescutcheons gu.: see also Nos. 131, 133.

Escutcheon of Pretence. A shield charged upon the field of another shield of larger size, and bearing a distinct Coat-of-arms.

Escallop, or Escallop-Shell. A beautiful and favourite charge; No. 165.

Esquire.—A rank next below that of Knight. Besides those Esquires who are personal attendants of Knights of Orders of Knighthood, this title is held by all attendants on the person of the Sovereign, and all persons holding the Sovereign's commission being of military rank not below Captain; also, by general concession, by Barristers at Law, Masters of Arts, and Bachelors of Law and Physic.

Estate. Dignity and high rank.

Esteile. A star with wavy rays or points, which are six, eight, or sometimes even more in number: No. 242. (See Mullet.)

No. 242

Esteile.

False. Said of any charge when its central area is removed—thus, an Annulet is a "false roundle."

Fan, or Winnowing Fan, or Vane. The well-known implement of husbandry of that name, borne by the Kentish Family of De Sevans or Septvans—Az., three fans or (E. 2). This shield appears in the Brass to Sir R. DE SEVANS, A.D. 1305, at Chartham, in Kent, and in the cloisters at Canterbury.

Fan Crest. An early form of decoration for the knightly helm, exemplified in the 2nd Great Seal of RICHARD I., and in many other Seals, until about A.D. 1350. (See Chapter XIV.)

Feathers. Generally those of the ostrich, sometimes of the swan, the turkey, and a few other birds, borne generally as Crests and Badges, both singly and in plumes or groups. (See Ostrich Feather, Panache, and Chapter XIV.)

Femme. The Wife, as distinguished from the "Baron," the Husband.

Fer-de-Moline, or Mill-rind. The iron affixed to the centre

No. 243.—Fer-de-Moline.

No. 244.—Fermails.

No. 245.—Fetter-lock.

of a mill-stone; No. 243: a modification of the Cross-moline; No. 97.

Fermail (plural Fermaux). A buckle: No. 244. Several varieties of form appear in blazon.

Ferr. A horse-shoe.

Fesse. One of the Ordinaries: Nos. 76—80. Fesse-wise, In Fesse. Disposed in a horizontal line, side by side, across the centre of the field, and over the Fesse-Point of a shield: No. 27M.

Fetter-lock. A shackle and padlock—a Yorkist Badge : No. 245, from the Brass to Sir S. DE FELBRIGGE, K.G., at Felbrigg, Norfolk, A.D. 1414.

Field.—The entire surface of a Shield or Banner, of an Ordinary, or of any object.

File. A Label, from the Latin filum, a narrow ribbon.

Fillet. A diminutive of a Chief.

Fimbriated. Bordered—the border (which is narrow) lying in the same plane with the object bordered : No. 89.

Fish. Numerous Fish appear in blazon, and generally in their proper tinctures. They are borne as allusive charges, and also as types of some connection between those persons who bear them and the sea or lakes or rivers. Mr. Moule has published an admirable volume on the “Heraldry of Fish,” beautifully illustrated with examples drawn by his daughter. (See p. 77.)

Fitchée. Pointed at the base, as in No. 110.

Flanches, Flasques. Subordinaries : Nos. 141, 142.

Fleur de lys. The beautiful heraldic device so long identified with the history of France : No. 246 (from the monument of EDWARD III.). The fleur de lys, derived, it would seem, from the flower of a lily resembling the iris, was adopted by LOUIS

No. 246.
Fleur de lys.

VII. (A.D. 1137—1180) as his royal ensign, and in due time it was regularly charged upon a true Shield of Arms. Originally the Royal Shield of France was —Az., semée of fleurs de lys, or; the fleurs de lys scattered freely over the field, and the Shield itself having the appearance of having been cut out of a larger object, over the whole surface of which the flowers had been semée. This Shield of France is distinguished as “France Ancient :” No. 247. About A.D. 1365, CHARLES V. of France reduced the number of the fleurs de lys to three ; and this Shield is now known as “France Modern .”

No. 248. . In the year 1275, EDMUND, first Earl of Lancaster, the second son of HENRY III., married BLANCHE of Artois, when he differenced his shield of England with a

No. 247 — France Ancient.

No. 248. — France Modern.

label of France—a blue label charged on each point with three golden fleurs de lys : No. 249 ; thus, for the first time, did the armorial insignia of England and France appear together upon the same Shield. In 1299 EDWARD I. married his second Queen, MARGARET of France, and then this royal lady placed on one of her Seals a Shield

No. 249.
Edmund, Earl of Lancaster.

No. 250.
Margaret, Queen of Edward I.

of England and France dimidiated : No. 250. On another of her Seals, a very noble example of the Seal-engraver's art, Queen MARGARET displayed the Shield of King EDWARD I., her husband, surrounded, on the field of the Seal, with her father's fleurs de lys:

No. 251. On the Seals of ISABELLE of France, Queen of EDWARD II., the same dimidiated shield, and another shield quartering the arms of England with France Ancient and two other French coats (Navarre and Champagne) appear. Then Prince JOHN of ELTHAM charged a

No. 251.—Seal of Margaret, second Queen of Edward I.

“bordure of France” upon his shield, No. 24; thus applying the suggestion of the Seal of Queen MARGARET, No. 251, in such a manner as was consistent with the advanced condition of heraldic art. On his accession in 1327, EDWARD III. placed a fleur de lys on each side of the Shield of England upon his Great Seal: and in 1340, when he claimed the crown of France, EDWARD quartered France Ancient with his lions of England: No. 252. Shortly after his accession, perhaps in 1405, in order to conform to the altered blazonry of the French sovereigns, HENRY IV. quartered France Modern on his shield: No. 253. The position of the three fleurs de lys was more than once changed in the Royal

No. 253.

Shield of Henry IV., about A.D. 1405.

No. 252.

Shield of Edward III., A.D. 1340.

Shield of England (as I shall hereafter show more particularly) after the accession of the STUARTS; and they were not finally removed till the first year of this present century. The fleur de lys is also borne on many English Shields, disposed in various ways. In modern cadency the fleur de lys is the difference of the sixth son, or house.

Fleurettée, Florettée. Terminating in, or bordered with, fleurs de lys; also, semée de lys.

Fleurie. Ending as No. 100; also, semée de lys.

Flexed. Bowed, bent.

Flighted. Feathered, as arrows are.

Fly. The length, and also the side of a flag farthest from the staff.

Foliated. Crisped, or formed like a leaf.

Fountain. No. 153.

Fourchée, Queue Fourchée. Divided into two parts—said of a lion with a double tail: No. 181.

Frette. A subordinary: No. 148. Frettée, Fretty: covered with frette-work: No. 149.

Fructed. Bearing fruit or seeds.

Fumant. Having smoke issuing forth.

Furs. See p. 41 : Nos. 57—65.

Fusil. An elongated Lozenge : No. 20A, p. 70. Fusillée.

Covered with Fusils, all lying in the same plane.

Fylfot. A peculiar cruciform figure, supposed to have a mystic signification, found in military and ecclesiastical decorations in England, and on Eastern coins, &c. : Nos. 254, 255 ; the latter example is from the monument of Bishop BRONSCOMBE, in Exeter Cathedral.

No. 254.

No. 255.

Fylfot.

Gad, Gadlyng. A spike, knob, or other figure, projecting from the knuckles of gauntlets.

Galley. An ancient ship. (See Lymphad.)

Garb. A sheaf of wheat ; or of any other grain to be specified.

Garnished. Adorned in a becoming manner.

Garter, Order of the. See Chapter XIX.

Garter King-of-Arms. The chief of the official Heralds of England, and officer of arms of the Order of the Garter. (See Herald.)

Gemelles. See Bars Gemelles.

Gem-Ring. A ring for the finger, set with a jewel.

Genet. A spotted animal, somewhat like a martin : a badge of Queen JOANNA of Navarre.

George, Saint. The Patron Saint of England. The circumstances which led to his association with England are unknown, nor can the saint himself be identified as an historical personage. His Shield of arms, a red cross on a silver field, first appears in English Heraldry in the fourteenth century : No. 1.

George, The. A mounted figure of the Saint in the act of piercing the dragon with his lance, and worn as a pendant to the collar of the Order of the Garter; added to the insignia of the Order, with the Collar, by HENRY VII. The Lesser George has the same group on an enamelled field, and surrounded by the Garter of the Order, the whole forming a "jewel," generally oval in shape: it was introduced by HENRY VIII., and is now worn pendant from the dark-blue ribbon of the Order, the ribbon passing over the left shoulder and the jewel hanging on the right side of the wearer. Originally, this "Lesser George" was worn from either a gold chain or a black ribbon: by Queen ELIZABETH the colour of the ribbon was changed to sky-blue, and it assumed its present darker hue in the reign of either GEORGE I. or GEORGE II.—a modification said to have been adopted in order to distinguish the true knights from those who were created by the Pretender.

Gerattyng. Differencing by the introduction of small charges. It is an early term, now obsolete.

Gimmel-ring. Two, or sometimes three, annulets interlaced.

Girt, Girdled. Encircled, or bound round.

Gonfannon. A long flag, pointed or swallow-tailed at the fly, and displayed from a transverse bar attached to a staff.

Gorged. Encircled round the throat.

Gouttée, Guttée. Sprinkled over with drops either of gold—gouttée d'or; of silver—d'eau; of blue—d'azure, or de larmes (tears); of red—du sang (blood); or of black—de poix (pitch).

Gradient. Walking.

Grafted. Inserted and fixed.

Grand Quarters. The four primary divisions of a Shield, when it is divided quarterly: Nos. 30, 36, 37. The term "Grand Quarter" may be used to signify a primary quarter or division of a quartered Shield or Coat, and to distinguish such a quarter when it is quartered.

Greeces. Steps.

Guardant. Looking out from the field: Nos. 172, 174, 176, 187.

Guige. A Shield-belt, worn over the right shoulder, and frequently represented in heraldic compositions as if sustaining a Shield of arms: Nos. 48, 49.

Gules. Red: No. 53.

Gurges, or Gorges. A charge formed of a spiral line of blue on a white field, and supposed to represent a whirlpool: borne (H. 3) by R. DE GORGES: No. 256.

No. 256.

Shield of R. de Gorges.

Gyron. A Subordinary. Gyronny. A field divided into Gyrons: No. 147. (See page 70.)

Habited. Clothed.

Hames, Heames. Parts of horses' harness.

Hammer, or Martel. Represented in blazon much in the same shape as the implement in common use (H. 3).

Harp. A device and badge of Ireland. The Irish Harp of gold with silver strings on a blue field forms the third quarter of the Royal Arms.

Hart. A stag, with attires; the female is a Hind: page 81.

Hastilude. A tournament.

Hatchment. An achievement of arms in a lozenge-shaped frame, placed upon the front (generally over the principal entrance) of the residence of a person lately deceased. In the case of the decease of an unmarried person, or of a widower or widow, the whole of the field of the hatchment is painted black; but in the case of a married person, that part only of the field is black which adjoins the side of the achievement occupied by the armorial insignia of the individual deceased. Thus, if a husband be deceased, the dexter half of the field of the hatchment is black, and the sinister white ; and so, in like manner, if the wife be deceased, the sinister is black and the dexter white.

Hauriant. A fish in pale, its head in chief. See Uriant.

Hause. Height, indicating a charge enhanced.

Hawk's bells, jesses and lure. A falconer's decoy, formed of feathers with their tips in base, and joined by a cord

No. 257 —Hawk's Lure.

No. 258.—Hawk's Bells and Jesses.

and ring, No. 257 ; also bells with straps to be attached to hawks, No. 258.

Heightened. Raised ; placed above or higher.

Heights. Applied to plumes of feathers which are arranged in rows or sets, one rising above another. See Panache.

Helm, Helmet. Now placed as an accessory above a Shield of arms, and bearing its Crest after the fashion in which, in the Middle Ages, both Helm and Crest were actually worn. A modern usage distinguishes Helms as follows : —The Sovereign—Helm of gold, with six bars, set affrontée, No. 259 ; Princes and Noblemen—Helm of silver, garnished with gold, set in profile, and showing five bars, No. 260 ; Baronets and Knights—of steel, with silver ornaments, without bars, the vizor raised, set affrontée, No. 261; Esquires and Gentlemen—of steel, the vizor closed, and set in profile, Nos. 262, 263. The Helms that appear on early Seals and in other heraldic compositions till about A.D. 1600, are all set in profile,

No. 259.—The Sovereign.

HELMS OF

No. 260.—Princes and Nobles.

No. 261.
Baronets and Knights.

No. 262.
Esquires and Gentlemen.

No. 263.

and the shield generally hangs from them couchée, as in No. 49. In these early compositions, the shield is small in proportion to the helm and its accessories. In the Middle Ages, when engaged in actual combat, the knights wore a second helm, which rested on their shoulders, in addition to their close-fitting basinet. See Panache.

Hemp-brake, Hackle. An instrument having saw-teeth, used for bruising hemp.

Heneage Knot. No. 264.

Herald. An officer of arms. The Heralds of England were incorporated by RICHARD III.; and from Queen MARY, in 1555, they received a grant of Derby House, on the site of which, between St. Paul's Cathedral and the Thames, stands their present official residence, HERALDS' COLLEGE, or the COLLEGE OF ARMS. The college now consists of three KINGS-OF-ARMS—Garter, Clarenceux, and Norroy; six HERALDS, who have precedence by seniority of appointment—Windsor, Chester, Lancaster, Somerset, York, and Richmond; and four PURSUIVANTS—Rouge Croix, Rouge Dragon, Blue mantle, and Portcullis. The official habit is a Tabard, emblazoned with the Royal Arms, and a Collar of SS.

No. 264.—Heneage Knot.

No. 265.—Arms of the Heralds' College.

The Kings have a Crown, formed of a golden circlet, from which rise sixteen oak-leaves, nine of which appear in representations; and the circlet itself is charged with the words, Miserere mei Deus secundum magnam misericordiam tuam ("Have mercy on me, O God, according to thy great loving-kindness").

The supreme head of the English Heralds, under the SOVEREIGN, is the EARL MARSHAL, an office hereditary in the family of the DUKE OF NORFOLK. The Arms of the College are—Arg., a cross gu., between four doves their dexter wings expanded and inverted az. : No. 265; Crest—From a crest-coronet or, a dove rising az.; Supporters—Two lions ramp. guard. arg., ducally gorged or. Each of the Kings has his own official arms, which he impales with his paternal coat on the dexter side of the shield. The Arms of Garter are—Arg., a cross gu.; on a chief az., a ducal coronet encircled with a Garter of the Order, between a lion of England and a fleur de lys, all or. Clarenceux and Norroy have the same shield, but the former has a lion of England only, crowned, on a chief gules; and the latter, on a chief per pale az. and gu., has a similar lion between a fleur de lys and a key, all of gold.

There is also another Herald King styled “Bath,” who is specially attached to the Order of the Bath, and has jurisdiction in the principality of Wales; he is not a member of the College.

“Lord Lyon King-of-Arms” is the chief Herald of Scotland; and the establishment over which he presides is styled the “Lyon Office.” The Arms of the Office are—Arg., a lion sejant affronté gu., holding in his dexter paw a thistle slipped vert, and in the sinister an escutcheon of the second; on a chief az., a saltire of the first: No. 266.

No. 266.
Arms of Lyon Office.

Ireland is the heraldic province of “Ulster King-of-Arms.” His official armorial ensigns differ from those of Garter only in the charges of the chief, which are a lion of England between a golden harp and portcullis.

Herison. A hedgehog.

Hill, Hillock. A mound of earth.

Hirondelle. A swallow.

Hoist. The depth of a flag from chief to base. See Fly.

Honour Point. No. 27 L.

Humettée. Cut short at the extremities.

Hurst. A clump of trees.

Hurte. A blue roundle.

Illegitimacy, Difference or Abatement of. See Chapter XII.

Imbrued, Imbued. Stained with blood.

Impaled. Conjoined per pale.

Impalement. The act of uniting two (or more) distinct coats per pale, to form a single achievement.

Imperially Crowned. Ensigned with the Crown of England.

Incensed, Inflamed. On fire ; having fire issuing forth.

Increscent, in Increment. No. 166 B. See Decrescent.

Indented. No. 38 A.

Inescutcheon. An heraldic Shield borne as a charge. This term is sometimes used to denote an Escutcheon of Pretence.

In bend. Disposed bend-wise ; In Chevron, In Chief, In Cross, In Fesse, &c. Disposed after the manner of a chevron, or in the chief of the shield, or in the form of a cross, &c.

In Foliage. Bearing leaves.

In Glory, In Splendour. The sun irradiated.

In Lure. Wings conjoined, with their tips drooping.

In Pretence. Placed upon, and in front of.

In Pride. Having the tail displayed, as a peacock's.

In Quadrangle. When four charges are so disposed that one is in each quarter of the shield.

Irradiated. Surrounded by rays of light.

Issuant. Proceeding from, or out of.

Jambe, Gambe. The leg of a lion, or other beast of prey : No. 185.

Jesses. Straps for hawk's bells.

Jessant. Shooting forth, as plants growing out of the earth.

Jessant de lys.—A combination of a lion's face and a fleur-de-lys : No. 267.

Joust. A tournament.

Jupon. A short, sleeveless surcoat, worn over armour from about 1340 to about 1405. It is often charged with armorial insignia, and thus is a true "coat of arms."

Jowlopped. Having wattles and a comb, as a cock.

Key. When represented in early blazon, Keys have always

No. 207.
Jessant de lys.

Nos. 268, 269.—Heraldic Keys.

No. 270.
Hastings Badge.

elegant forms. No. 268 is from Peterborough Cathedral, and No 269 from Exeter.

King-of-Arms. See Herald.

Knighthood, Orders of: Knights. See Chapter XVI.

Knot. An intertwined cord, borne as a badge. The varieties of this device are—The Bourchier, No. 219; the Bowen, No. 220; the Harrington (the same as a Frette), No. 148; the Heneage, No. 264; the Lacy, No. 274; the Stafford, No. 304; and the Wake and Ormond, No. 313. Cords were sometimes intertwined about other figures and devices, and so formed what may be regarded as Compound Badges, which significantly declared the union of two houses: thus, the knot of EDWARD LORD HASTINGS unites the Hungerford sickle with the Pelham garbe: No. 270; and the Dacre knot is entwined about the Dacre escallop and the famous "ragged staff" of Beauchamp and Neville: No. 235.

Label. A narrow ribbon placed across the field of a shield near the chief, and having three, five, or sometimes other numbers of points depending from it, its object being to mark Cadency. In the early Labels the number of the points was arbitrary, the usual numbers being five and three; and, subsequently, three points were almost universally used; the object always was to render the Label conspicuous. In blazon a Label is supposed to have three points; but, if more, the number is to be specified; thus, No. 271 is simply "a Label," but No. 272 is "a Label of five points." Labels appear Labels.—No. 271.

No. 272.

No. 273.

early in the thirteenth century, and in the next century they are in constant use. Various charges may be placed on the "points" of Labels to extend their capacity for "differencing." Since the time of EDWARD the BLACK PRINCE the Label of the PRINCE OF WALES has been plain silver. The Label is almost exclusively (now without any exception) used in Royal Cadency; but, in modern Heraldry, in the case of all other persons it is the peculiar mark of the eldest son. The Label is borne as a charge. It has become a usage in the degenerate days of Heraldry to represent the Label as in No. 273, instead of the earlier and far preferable forms of Nos. 271, 272.

No. 274.—Lacy Knot.

Lacy Knot. No. 274.

Lambrequin. A mantling.

Langued. To denote the tincture of an animal's tongue.

Leaves. Their peculiarities are to be blazoned, as laurel leaves, oak leaves, &c.

Leopard, Leopardé. See page 84.

Letters of the Alphabet sometimes are Charges. Thus, the Arms of the Deanery of Canterbury are—Az., on a cross arg., the letter "x" surmounted by the letter "i" sable: the "x" is on the cross at the intersection of its limbs, and the "i" is above it.

Line, or Border Line. No. 38.

Lined. Having a cord attached: also, having a lining.

Lion. See page 83.

Lioncel. A lion drawn to a small scale, and generally rampant, Nos. 114, 115, 197.

Livery Colours. Of the PLANTAGENETS, as one family, white and scarlet; of the house of YORK, blue and crimson; of the house of LANCASTER, white and blue; of the house of TUDOR, white and green; of the house of STUART, gold and scarlet; of the house of HANOVER, in England, scarlet and blue. In the middle ages, all great families had their own livery colours.

Lodged. A term denoting animals of the chase when at rest or in repose, Nos. 25, 26.

Lozenge. A square figure set diagonally, No. 47 (also see page 69). The armorial insignia of ladies, with the sole exception of the Sovereign, are blazoned on a Lozenge instead of an Escutcheon.

Lozengy. A field divided lozengewise: No. 145.

Luce. The fish now called a pike. See page 77, and No. 164.

Lure. See In Lure.

Lymphad. An ancient galley, No. 275, the feudal ensign of the Scottish lordship of LORN, and as such quartered by the Duke of ARGYLL. A Lymphad sable, on waves of the sea, is also borne on a field argent by the PRINCE OF WALES, as "LORD OF THE ISLES."

Maintenance, Cap of. See Chapeau.

Manche, Maunche. A lady's sleeve with a long pendent

No. 275.—Lymphad.

No. 276.—Arms of Hastings.

lappet, worn in the time of HENRY I., and borne as an armorial charge by the family of HASTINGS, and by some others. HASTINGS (H. 3)—Or, a manche gu.: No. 276.

Mantle. A flowing robe worn over the armour, or over their ordinary costume, by personages of distinction of both sexes: the mantles of ladies were commonly decorated with armorial blazonry.

Mantling, or Lambrequin. A small mantle of some rich materials, attached to the knightly basinet or helm, and worn hanging down and ending in tassels. It is usually represented with jagged edges, to represent the cuts to which it would be exposed in actual battle: No. 199. (See Panache.) Mantlings blazoned with achievements of arms are sometimes adjusted in folds to form a background to the composition, and they are also occasionally differenced with various charges.

Marguess, Marquis. The second order of the British Peerage, in rank next to that of Duke. This rank and title were introduced into England in 1387, by RICHARD II., who then created his favourite, ROBERT DE VERE, Marquess of DUBLIN. The next creation was by HENRY VI. A Marquess is "Most Honourable;" he is styled "My Lord Marquess:" all his sons are "Lords," and his daughters "Ladies;" his eldest son bears his father's "second title." The Coronet, apparently contemporary in its present form with that of Dukes, has its golden circlet heightened with four strawberry leaves and as many pearls, arranged alternately: in representations two of the pearls, and one leaf and two half-leaves are shown, No. 277.

277.—Coronet of Marquess.

The wife of a Marquess is a "Marchioness;" her style corresponds with that of her husband, and her coronet is the same.

Marshalling. The disposition of more than one distinct coat of arms upon a shield, so forming a single composition; or the aggroupment of two or more distinct shields, so as to form a single composition; also the association of such accessories as the helm, mantling, crest, &c., and of knightly and other insignia with a shield of arms, thus again forming a single heraldic composition. See Chapter XI.

Martel. A hammer.

Martlet. The heraldic Martin, usually represented without feet: Nos. 160, 161, and 70 and 86.

Mascle. An elongated Lozenge: No. 143. Masculée. A field divided mascle-wise.

Masoned. Representing brickwork.

Membered. To denote the legs of a bird.

Merchant's mark. A device, adopted as early as 1400 by merchants, as a substitute for heraldic ensigns which were not conceded to them. They are the predecessors of the Trade-brands and Marks of after times.

Mermaid, Merman or Triton. The well-known fabulous creatures of the sea, borne occasionally as charges, but more frequently as badges or crests. A mermaid was the device of Sir WILLIAM DE BRIVERE, who died in 1226, and it is the badge of the BERKELEYS.

Metal. The Tinctures Or and Argent: Nos. 50, 51.

Mill-rind. See Fer-de-Moline.

Mitre. The ensign of archiepiscopal and episcopal rank, placed above the arms of prelates of the Church of England, sometimes borne as a charge, and adopted by the BERKELEYS as their crest. The contour of the mitre has varied considerably at different periods, the early examples being low and concave in their sides, the later lofty and convex. See No. 159.

Moline. A cross terminating like a Fer-de-moline, No. 97.

In modern cadency it is the difference of the eighth son.

Moon. No. 166, page 80.

Motto. A word, or very short sentence, placed generally below a shield, but sometimes above a crest, and probably derived from the "war-cries" of early times. A motto may be emblematical, or it may have some allusion to the person bearing it, or to his name and armorial insignia; or it may be the epigrammatic expression of some sentiment in special favour with the bearer of it. As a matter of course, allusive mottoes, like allusive arms, afford curious examples of mediæval puns. I give a few characteristic examples:—" Vero nil verius" (nothing truer than truth, or, no greater verity than in Vere)—VERE; "Fare, fac" (Speak—act; that is, a word and blow)—FAIRFAX; "Cave" (beware)—CAVE; "Cavendo tutus" (safe, by caution, or by Cavendish)—

CAVENDISH ; “Set on,” says SETON ; “Fight on,” quoth FITTON ; “Festina lente” (On slow—push forward, but be cautious, that is), adds ONSLOW. Again : JEFFERAY says, “Je feray ce que je diray” (I shall be true to my word) ; SCUDAMORE—Scutum amoris divini (the shield of Divine love) ; says JAMES—“J’aime jamais” (I love ever) ; says ESTWICK—“Est hic” (he is here) ; and POLE—“Pollet virtus” (valour prevails) ; and TEY—“Tais en temps” (be silent in time). The crest of CHARTERIS, an arm with the hand grasping a sword, has over it—“This our charter is.” In his arms the Marquess CHOLMONDELEY bears two helmets, and his motto is—“Cassis tutissima virtus” (valour is the safest helm) ; the crest of the MARTINS of Dorsetshire was an ape, with the significant motto—“He who looks at Martin’s ape, Martin’s ape shall look at him !” The motto of PERCEVAL is—“Perse valens” (strong in himself) ; but, “Do no yll,” quoth DOYLE. Some “lippes,” as Camden remarks, have a taste for “this kind of lettuce.”

Mound. A globe, encircled and arched over with rich bands, and surmounted by a cross-patée, the whole an ensign of the royal estate, which is placed upon the

No. 278.—Mullet.

No. 279.—Mullet, pierced.

intersecting arches of the crown of the SOVEREIGN ; and it also surmounts the single arch of the coronet of the PRINCE OF WALES : Nos. 234, 289.

Mount. A green hill represented in the base of a shield.

Mullet. A star, generally of five, but sometimes of six or more points (if more than five the number to be specified), always formed by right lines, as No. 278. A mullet is sometimes "pierced," as in No. 279, when the tincture of the field is generally apparent through the circular aperture. In modern cadency it is the difference of the third son. See Estoile.

Mural Crown. Represents masonry, and is embattled : No. 280.

Naissant. Swimming in fesse. See Hauriant.

Naissant. Issuant, but applied only to living creatures.

No. 280.—Mural Crown.

No. 281.—Naval Crown.

Naval Crown. Has its circlet heightened with figures of the stern and the hoisted sail of a ship alternating : No. 281.

Nebulée. No. 38H.

Nerved. Having fibres, as leaves.

Nimbus. A glory about the head of a figure of a sainted personage : sometimes used to denote sanctity in a symbolical device.

Nimbed. Having the head encircled with a Nimbus, usually represented by a circular line. See No. 212.

Norroy. See Herald.

Nova Scotia, Badge of. See Baronet.

Nowed. Coiled in a knot, as a snake.

Ogress. A Pellet, or black roundle.

Opinicus. A fabulous heraldic monster, a dragon before, and a lion behind with a camel's tail.

Oppressed. Debruised.

Or. The metal gold : No. 50.

Ordinary. An early principal charge of a simple character.

See Chapter VI., and Nos. 71—128: see also page 14.

Ordinary of arms. A list of armorial bearings, classified and arranged alphabetically, with the names of the bearers. See Armory.

Oreiller. A cushion or pillow, generally with tassels.

Orle. A Subordinary formed of a border of a Shield, which is charged upon another and a larger shield, as in No. 134. In Orle. Arranged after the manner of an Orle, forming a border to a Shield, as in No. 86.

Ostrich feathers. A Royal Badge: also a Device in a few instances charged by Royal and some other personages on an Armorial Shield. See Chapter XV.

Over all, or Sur tout. To denote some one charge being placed over all others.

Overt. With expanded wings.

Pale. One of the Ordinaries: No. 87. Pale-wise, or In Pale. Disposed after the manner of a Pale—that is, set vertically, or arranged vertically one above another, as are the Lions of England in No. 187, page 87.

Pall, Pallium. A vestment peculiar to Archbishops of the Roman Church: in Heraldry, as a charge, half only of the pall is shown, when it resembles the letter Y; it is borne in the arms of the Sees of CANTERBURY, ARMAGH, and DUBLIN.

Pallet. Half a Pale.

Palmer's Staff, Pilgrim's staff, or Bourdon. No. 282. JOHN BOURDON (H. 3) bears—Arg., three palmer's staves gu.

No. 282.
Bourdon.

Paly. Divided per pale into an even number of parts, which all lie in the same plane, as in No. 88. Paly Bendy. Divided evenly pale-wise, and also bend-wise, No. 118.

Panache. A plume of feathers, generally of the ostrich, set upright and borne as a crest. A panache sometimes consists of a single row of feathers; but more generally it has two or more rows or "heights" of feathers, rising one above the other. In the greater number of examples the tips of the feathers are erect; in others they wave, or slightly bend over. A panache may be charged with some device or figure, "for difference," as by the TYNDALLS, with an ermine circlet, a martlet, and a fleur de lys. In Nos. 283, 285, from the seals of EDWARD COURTENAY, and EDMUND MORTIMER

No. 283.
Edward Courtenay.

PANACHE CRESTS:
No. 284.
William le Latimer

No. 285.
Edmund Mortimer.

(A.D. 1400 and 1372) the "heights" both expand and rise in a curved pyramidal form. No. 284, from the seal of WILLIAM LE LATIMER (A.D. 1372), shows a remarkable variety of both panache and mantling. Waving plumes formed of distinct feathers first appear near the end of the fifteenth century, and are prevalent during the sixteenth century.

Party, Parted. Divided.

Pasquant. Grazing.

Passant. Walking and looking forward : No. 173. Passant Guardant, walking and looking out from the shield, No. 174 : Passant Reguardant, walking and looking back : Passant Repassant, walking in opposite directions.

Pastoral Staff. The official staff of a bishop or abbot, having a crooked head, and so distinguished from an archbishop's crozier.

Patée, or Formée.

Patonce.

Patriarchal.

} Varieties of the heraldic Cross, Nos.
106, 99, and 95.

Pean. The Fur, No. 60.

Peer. That general title, expressing their equality as members of a distinct "order" in the realm, which is applied to the Nobility of the United Kingdom.

Peerage. The rank of a Peer ; a list of the Peers.

Pegasus. A horse with wings—a classic as well as an heraldic imaginary creature.

No. 288.—A Portcullis.

No. 286.—A Pennon.

No. 287.—A Pheon.

Pelican. Blazoned "in her piety," when feeding her young with her own blood.

Pellet. A black roundle.

Pendent. Drooping.

Pennon. An armorial lance-flag, pointed or swallow-tailed at the fly, borne by knights. No. 286 is from the Brass to Sir JOHN D'AUBERNOUN, A.D. 1279; the arms are Az., a chevron or.

Per. By means of, or after the manner of.

Pheon. A pointed spear-head, borne with the point in base,
No. 287.

Phoenix. A fabulous eagle, always represented as issuant from flames.

Pile. One of the Ordinaries, in form like a wedge, Nos. 126, 127, 128. In Pile. Arranged after the form of a pile.

Planta Genista. The broom-plant badge of the Plantagenets,
No. 21.

Plate. A silver roundle.

Plenitude. The moon when full. See No. 166.

Plume. See Panache.

Points of Shield. No. 27. In Point is the same as In Pile.

Pomme. A green roundle.

Popinjay. A parrot (H. 3).

Port. A gateway, as the entrance to a castle: No. 222.

Portcullis. A defence for a gateway, No. 288: the badge of the Houses of BEAUFORT and TUDOR, borne by the former with the significant motto, "Altera securitas" (additional security).

Potent. A variety of the heraldic cross, No. 108; also a Fur
No. 64.

Powdered, Poudrée. The same as Semée.

Preying. When an animal devours its prey. See Trussing.

Prince, Princess. The rank and title of the members of the Royal Family. Their style is "Your Royal Highness." The coronet of the Prince of Wales differs from the crown of the Queen, only in having a single arch, instead of two intersecting arches: No. 289. The coronets of the Princes and Princesses, the sons and daughters of the Queen, are the same as the coronet of the Prince of Wales, but without any arch: No. 290. The coronets of the Princes and Princesses, the grandchildren of the Queen, differ in having the circlet heightened with two crosses patée, as many strawberry leaves, and four fleurs-de-lys, No. 291 ; and the coronets of the Royal cousins of the Queen have the circlet

CORONETS :

No. 289.
Prince of Wales.

No. 290.
Queen's Daughters and Younger Sons.

No. 291.—Queen's Grandchildren.

No. 292.—Queen's Cousins.

heightened with four crosses patée, and as many strawberry leaves. No. 292. For the arms of their Royal Highnesses, see Chapter XVIII.

Purfled. Lined and bordered with fur.

Purpure. A colour: No. 56.

Pursuivant. A Herald of the lowest rank. In the Middle Ages, these officers were attached to the households of personages of high rank, and bore titles generally taken from the armorial insignia of their lords.

Quadrate. A form of cross : No. 94.

Quarter. The first (from the dexter chief) of the divisions of a shield that is parted per cross, as in No. 30 ; also any other division of a shield, to be specified in blazoning. See No. 36, and Canton.

Quartering. Marshalling two or more coats of arms in the different quarters of the same shield. When two coats are thus quartered, the one in the first quarter is repeated in the fourth, and the one in the second in the third; when three are quartered, the first quartering is repeated in the fourth quarter. Any required number of coats may be quartered on the same principle. This same term is also applied to denote the dividing a shield "quarterly," as in No. 30, or into more than four divisions, as in No. 36.

Quarterly. A shield divided into four divisions, as in No. 30: each division to contain a complete coat of arms, or a distinct heraldic device or composition. Should the shield be divided into more than four sections, the number is to be specified: thus, No. 36 is "quarterly of eight," &c. See Nos. 252, 253.

Quarterly Quartering and Quartered. The quartering of a "quarter" of a shield that is divided "quarterly;" also distinguished as "Compound Quartering." See page 34.

Quatrefoil or Primrose. A flower or figure having four foils or conjoined leaves, No. 293. In modern cadency a Double Quatrefoil is the difference of the ninth son.

Queue Fourchée. Having a double tail, or two tails; No. 181.

Quilled. Used to blazon the quills of feathers: thus, a blue

No. 293.—Quatrefoil.

No. 294.—The Ragged Staff Badge.

feather having its quill golden is blazoned—A feather az., quilled or.

Radiant, Rayonnée. Encircled with rays.

Ragulée, Raguly. Serrated, as No. 38 G. A "ragged staff,"

No. 294, is a part of a stem from which the branches have been cut off roughly. This "ragged staff," or "staff ragulée," is the famous badge of the BEAUCHAMPS, and, derived from them, of the NEVILLES. No. 294 is from the monument of the great Earl, RICHARD DE BEAUCHAMP, K.G., who died in 1439, at Warwick.

Rampant, Rampant Guardant and Reguardant. Nos. 171, 172; when reguardant, the animal looks backward.

Rebated. Cut short, or broken off.

Rebus. An allusive charge or device. A cask, or tun, to represent the final syllable "ton" of many surnames is frequently found. I give a few examples of several varieties of Rebus:—JOHN OXNEY, Canterbury—An eagle (the emblem of St. John the Evangelist, to denote "John") standing on an ox, charged on its side with the letters N E. JOHN WHEATHAMSTEDE, St. Albans—An eagle and an Agnus Dei (the emblems of St. John the Evangelist and St. John the Baptist, to denote "John"), and clusters of ears of wheat. JOHN RAMRYGE, St. Albans—A ram, gorged with a collar inscribed with the letters R Y G E. WOODSTOCK—The stump or stock of a tree. Abbot ISLIP, Westminster—A man falling from a tree, exclaiming, "I slip!" and a human eye, and a slip (small branch of a tree). WALTER LYHART, Norwich—A hart (stag) lying down in water. An owl, with the letters D O M on a scroll in its beak, for Bishop OLDHAM, at Exeter. A church ("kirk") on a tun, with a pastoral staff and the initial R, for Abbot ROBERT KIRTON, No. 295; and a bird on a tun, and a tree growing out of a tun, for BURTON and ASHTON, all at Peterborough. At Wells, with an initial T, a fire-beacon planted in a tun, for Bishop THOMAS BECKYNGTON, No. 296; and at Lullinstone, Kent, in stained glass, the shield of Sir

JOHN PECHÉ, A.D. 1522—Az., a lion ramp. queue fourchée erm., crowned or—is encircled by peach-branches

No. 295.
Rebus of Abbot Kirton.

No. 296.
Rebus of Bishop Beckington.

No. 297.—Arms and Rebus of Sir John Peché.

fructed and in foliage, each peach being charged with the letter E, No. 297; the crest-wreath also is formed of a similar peach-branch.

Recerclée. A variety of the heraldic cross: No. 98.

Reflexed, Reflected. Curved and carried backwards.

Reguardant. Looking backwards: see No. 182.

Rein-deer. A hart with double antlers, one pair erect, the other drooping.

Removed. Out of its proper position.

Respecting. Face to face—applied to creatures not of a fierce nature.

Rest. See Clarion, No. 228.

Retorted. Intertwined.

Ribbon, Riband. A diminutive of a Bend.

Rising, Roussant. About to fly.

Rompu. Broken.

Rose. Represented in blazon as in Nos. 298, 299, and without leaves. The five small projecting leaves of the calyx, that radiate about the flower itself, are styled barbs, and when they are blazoned “proper” these

Nos. 298, 299.—Heraldic Roses.

No. 300.—Rose-en-Soleil.

barbs are green, as the “seeds” in the centre of the flower are golden. Both the “red rose” of LANCASTER and the “white rose” of YORK, but more especially the latter, are at times surrounded with rays, and each is termed a “rose-en-soleil,” No. 300. The rose, the emblem of ENGLAND, is generally drawn like the natural flower; or with natural stem, branches, leaves, and buds, but with heraldic rose-flowers. In modern cadency the heraldic rose is the difference of the seventh son.

Roundle. See page 72.

Rustre. A mascle pierced with a circular opening: No. 144.

Sable. The colour black: No. 54.

Sagittary. The fabulous centaur, half man and half horse, the badge (as it would seem) of King Stephen.

Salamander. An imaginary being, supposed to live in flames of fire; it is represented sometimes as a kind of lizard, and at other times (as in the crest of Earl DOUGLAS, A.D. 1483) as a quadruped somewhat like a dog, breathing flames.

Salient. Leaping or bounding.

Saltire. An ordinary, in form a diagonal cross: Nos. 120, 121, 122. Saltire-wise, or in saltire. Arranged after the form of a saltire.

Sanglier. A wild boar.

Sans. Without. "Sans nombre," without any number fixed or specified; differing from semée in not having parts of charges.

Sarcellee. Cut through the centre.

Savage-man, or Wood-man. A wild man, naked except large wreaths of leaves about his head and loins, and carrying a club.

Saw, or Frame-saw. Borne in the crest of HAMILTON, Duke of HAMILTON, which is thus blazoned—Out of a crest-coronet or, an oak-tree fructed and penetrated transversely in the main stem by a frame-saw ppr., the frame gold; above the crest the motto, "THROUGH!" This device is said to commemorate the escape into Scotland, in 1323, of Sir GILBERT HAMILTON, a reputed ancestor of the present ducal house. At the court of EDWARD II. Sir Gilbert had unadvisedly expressed admiration for ROBERT BRUCE, on which JOHN LE DESPENCER struck him. Despencer fell in single combat the next day, and Hamilton fled, hotly pursued, northward. Near the border the fugitive and a faithful esquire joined some wood-cutters, assumed their dress, and commenced working with them on an oak, when the pursuers passed by. Hamilton, saw in hand, observed his esquire anxiously watching their enemies as they passed, and at once recalled his attention to his woodman's duties by the word, "Through!"—thus, at the same time, appearing to consider the cutting down the oak to be far more important than the presence of the strangers. So they passed by, and Hamilton followed in safety. This crest does not appear in the Hamilton seals till long after the days of Bruce and his admirer, Sir Gilbert: No. 301.

No. 301.—Crest of Hamilton.

Scarpe, Escarpe. A diminutive of a Bend sinister.

Scintillant. Emitting sparks.

Seax. A Saxon sword.

Seeded. Having seeds or seed-vessels, as in the centre of an heraldic rose. See Nos. 298—300.

Segreant. A gryffin or wyvern rampant.

Sejant. Sitting.

Semée, or Aspersed. Sown broadcast or scattered, without any fixed number, over the field; parts of the charge thus semée appearing at the border-lines of the composition. See Nos. 247, 250, 252.

Seruse, Cerise. A Torteau.

Shake-fork. Resembles the letter Y, but does not extend to the margin of the shield, and is pointed at its extremities.

Shamrock. A trefoil plant or leaf, the badge of IRELAND.

Shield or Escutcheon. The Shield of Heraldry is fully described at page 32. See also Nos. 27, 39—49.

Ship. Sometimes blazoned as a modern vessel, but generally as an ancient galley. See Lymphad.

Shoveller. A species of duck.

Simple Quartering. Dividing a shield quarterly, with the quartering of any of the quarters. See Quartering.

Sinister. The left side. No. 27.

Sinople. The colour vert in French Heraldry.

Sixfoil. A flower of six leaves : No. 302.

Slipped. Pulled or torn off, as a leaf or branch : No. 309.

Spear. The spear or lance, the knightly weapon, is not of common occurrence in blazon; but it appears, with heraldic propriety, in the arms granted in 1596 to the father of the great poet, who also bore—Or, on a bend sa. a spear gold, the head arg.—the arms of SHAKESPEARE, No. 303. (In the woodcut the bend is accidentally shaded for gules, instead of sable.)

No. 303.
Arms of Shakespeare

Spur. Not common as an heraldic charge. Before about 1320 the knightly spur had a single point, and was known as the "pryck-spur;" about that time appeared a "rouelle-spur" of simple form; in the middle of the fifteenth century spurs of extravagant length were introduced.

No. 302.—Sixfoil.

No. 304.—Stafford Knot.

No. 305.—Staple Badge.

SS., Collar of. See Collar, and No. 231.

Stafford-knot. No. 304.

Stall-plate. A plate bearing the arms of a knight and placed in his stall. The stall-plates of the Knights of the GARTER and the BATH are severally placed in the Chapels of ST. GEORGE and of HENRY VII., at Windsor and Westminster. The earliest plates now in existence at Windsor, though many of them bear arms of an earlier date, were executed about 1430.

Standard. A long narrow flag, introduced, for the purpose of heraldic display, in the time of EDWARD III., but not in general use till a later period. Standards generally had the Cross of ST. GEORGE next the staff, to which succeeded the badge or badges and the motto of the owner. See Chapter XVII.

Staple. Borne by STAPLETON: No. 305 represents a badge formed of two staples.

Statant. Standing.

Star. See Estoile and Mullet; also a knightly decoration.

Stirrup. Borne, with appropriate straps and buckles, by SCUDAMORE, GIFFARD, and a few others.

Stock. The stump of a tree.

Stringed. As a harp; or, suspended by, or fastened with, a string.

Subverted. Reversed.

Sun. When represented shining and surrounded with rays, he has a representation of a human face upon his disc, and is blazoned "In splendour," or "In glory:" when "eclipsed," the representation is the same, but tinctured sable. Sunbeams, or Rays, are borne in blazon, and form an early charge. See Collar.

Supercharge. A charge that rests upon another.

Supporter. A figure of whatsoever kind that stands by a Shield of arms, as if supporting or guarding it. Single Supporters occasionally appear, but the general usage is to have a pair of Supporters—one on each side of the supported Shield. They came gradually into use in the course of the fourteenth century, but were not regularly established as accessories of Shields till about 1425, or rather later. At first they were generally alike, but subsequently the more prevalent custom was that the two Supporters should differ, as in the case of the Royal Supporters, the Lion and the Unicorn, famous in History as in Heraldry. See Bearer, Tenant, and also Chapter XVI.

Surcoat. Any garment worn over armour; but especially the long flowing garment worn by knights over their armour until about 1325, when its form was modified by cutting it short in front, and it was distinguished as a Cyclas. See Jupon.

Surmounted. Placed over another.

Sustained. Having a lower (and only a lower) narrow border.

Swan. When blazoned "proper," white with red beak and legs. It is the badge of the BOHUNS, and of their descendants the LANCASTRIAN PLANTAGENETS, the STAFFORDS, and some others. This Swan has his neck encircled with a coronet, from which a chain generally passes over his back. By HENRY V., the Swan badge of his mother, MARY DE BOHUN, was borne with the wings overt, or expanded.

Sword. When borne as a charge, straight in the blade, pointed, and with a cross-guard. All the appointments of the weapon are to be blazoned. It appears, as a spiritual emblem, in several episcopal coats of arms; in the arms of the CITY OF LONDON, No. 306, the first quarter of a Shield of ST. GEORGE (arg., a cross gu.) is charged with a sword erect gules, the emblem of ST. PAUL, the special patron of the English metropolitan city. The sword is also borne in blazon in its military capacity.

No. 306.
Arms of City of London.

Tabard. A short garment with sleeves, worn by knights of the Tudor era. It has the arms blazoned on the sleeves as well as on the front and back: No. 307, the

No. 307.
Tabard; A.D. 1444.

Tabard of WILLIAM FYNDERNE, Esquire, from his brass, A.D. 1444, at Childrey in Berkshire: the arms are—Arg., a chevron between three crosses patée sable, the ordinary being “for Difference.” A similar garment is the official habit of heralds.

Tau, Tau-Cross. A cross formed like the letter T, so called in Greek, No. 93; borne as a charge in the arms of DRURY, TAWKE, and some others: this charge is also called the Cross of ST. ANTHONY: it is sometimes borne on a badge, as in the Bishop's Palace at Exeter. See Chapter XV.

Templars, Knights. See Chapter XIX.

Tenant, Tenant. Used by French Heralds to distinguish human figures from animals, as supporters.

Tennée or Tawney. A deep orange-colour; in use in the Middle Ages as a livery-colour.

Thistle. The national Badge of SCOTLAND, represented after its national aspect, and tintured proper. JAMES I. of Great Britain, to symbolise the union of the two realms of England and Scotland, compounded a Badge from the Rose of one realm, and the Thistle of the other, united by impalement under a single crown: No. 308. The impaled rose and thistle is borne

No. 308.
Badge of James I.

by the Earl of KINNOULL, repeated eight times upon a bordure.

Timbre. In the early Heraldry of England, this term denotes the true heraldic crest: but, in the modern Heraldry of France, the “timbre” is the Helm in an armorial achievement. Timbred. Ensigned with a Helm; or, if referring to an early English achievement, with a Crest.

Tiercée, In tierce, Per tierce. Divided vertically into three equal parts: No. 35.

Tinctures. The two metals and the five colours of Heraldry: Nos. 50—56. See page 40. It was one of the puerile extravagancies of the Heralds of degenerate days to distinguish the Tinctures by the names of the Planets in blazoning the arms of Sovereign Princes, and by the names of Gems in blazoning the arms of Nobles.

Torse. A crest-wreath.

Torteau, plural torteaux. A red spherical Rundle: No. 152.

Tower, Turret. A small castle. Towered. Surmounted by towers, as No. 222, which is a “Castle triple towered.”

Transfluent. Flowing through. Transmuted. Counter-changed. Transposed. Reversed.

Traversed. Facing or inclining to the sinister.

Trefoil. A leaf of three conjoined foils, generally borne “slipped,” as in No. 309.

Treflée, or Botonée. A variety of the cross: No.

103. Treflée also implies semée of trefoils.

No. 309

Treille, Trellis. See page 71, and No. 150.

Trefoil Slipped.

Tressure. A subordinary. See pages 66, 67; and Nos. 135—138.

Tricked. Sketched with pen and ink in outline.

Tripping. In easy motion, as a stag. See page 81; and No. 168.

Triton. See Mermaid.

Trivet. A circular or triangular iron frame, with three feet, borne by the family of TRYVET.

Trumpet. In blazon a long straight tube, expanding at its extremity : No. 310, from the brass to Sir R. DE TRUMPINGTON, at Trumpingdon, near Cambridge ; A.D. 1272.

No. 310.
Trumpet.

Trussed. With closed wings. Trussing. Devouring—applied to birds of prey.

Tudor Rose. An heraldic rose, quarterly gu. and arg. ; or a white heraldic rose, charged upon a red one.

Tun. A cask ; the rebus of the final syllable T O N in many surnames. See Rebus.

Tynes. Branches of a stag's antlers. See Attires.

Ulster. See Baronet and Herald.

Undy, Undée. Wavy : No. 38 c.

Unguled. Hoofed.

Unicorn. A well-known fabulous animal, famous as the sinister supporter of the Royal Shield of England.

Union Jack. The National Ensign of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, fully described in Chapter XVII. It is borne on a Shield, charged in pretence upon the Escutcheon of the Duke of WELLINGTON.

Uriant. A fish when it swims in a vertical position, head downwards. The reverse of Hauriant.

Vair. A Fur : Nos. 61, 62, 63.

Vane. See Fan.

Verdy, Verdoy, Verdée. Semée of leaves or plants.

Vert. In French Heraldry, Sinople. The colour green : No. 55.

Vervels, Varvals. Small rings.

Vested. Clothed.

Vigilant. Watching for prey, as a beast or bird of prey.

Viscount. The fourth degree of rank and dignity in the British Peerage, in Latin Vice-Comes, introduced by HENRY VI., A.D. 1440. A Viscount is " Right Honourable," and is styled "My Lord." All his sons and daughters are "Honourable." His Coronet, granted by JAMES I., has a row of sixteen pearls, of comparatively small size set on the circlet; in representations nine are shown: No. 311. The wife of a Viscount is a Viscountess, who has the same rank, style, and coronet as her husband.

No. 311.
Viscount's Coronet.

Vivre. An early term, fallen into general disuse; but apparently denoting a Barrulet or Cotise Dancettée; as in No. 312, at St. Michael's Church, St. Alban's.

No. 312.
Shield at St. Michael's Church, St. Alban's.

Voided. Having the central area removed.

Voiders. Diminutives of Flanches.

Volant. Flying. Vorant. Devouring.

Vol. Two bird's wings conjoined, having the appearance of an eagle displayed without its body: No. 207.

Vulned. Wounded.

Wake Knot. No. 313.

Walled, Murallée. Made to represent brick or stone-work.

No. 313.—Wake Knot.

No. 315.—Wyvern.

No. 314.—Catherine Wheel

Water Bouget. No. 218.

Wattled. Having a comb and gills, as a cock.

Wavy, Undée. No. 38 c.

Wheat-sheaf. See Garbe.

Wheel, Catherine Wheel. Has curved spikes projecting from its rim: No. 314: from a shield upon a boss, about A.D. 1400, in the south choir-aisle of the church of Great Yarmouth.

Wreath, Orle, Crest-Wreath. See Crest-Wreath, and No. 233; also Chapter XIV.

Wreathed. Adorned with a wreath, chaplet, or garland; or twisted into the form of a wreath, &c.

Wyvern, Wivern. A fabulous creature, being a species of dragon with two legs, and represented having its tail nowed: No. 315.

CHAPTER XI.

MARSHALLING.

Aggrouppment—Combination—Quartering—Dimidiation—Impalement—Escutcheon of Pretence—Marshalling the Arms of Widowers, Widows and others ; Official Arms ; and, the Accessories of Shields.

“Marshalling is a conjoining of diverse Coats in one Shield.”—GUILLIM.

UPON this concise definition, Guillim, in another part of his work, adds the following comment:—“Marshalling is an orderly disposing of sundry Coat Armours pertaining to distinct Families, and their contingent ornaments, with their parts and appurtenances, in their proper places.” Hence it is apparent that this term, “Marshalling,” implies,—

1. First, the bringing together and the disposition of two or more distinct “Coats in one Shield :”
2. Secondly, the aggrouppment of two or more distinct Coats to form a single heraldic composition, the Shields being still kept distinct from one another : and,
3. Thirdly, the association of certain insignia with a Shield of arms, so as to produce a complete heraldic achievement.

The association of “Arms” with Names, Dignities, and Estates would necessarily require, at an early period in the history of Heraldry, the establishment of some regular and recognised system for the combination and aggrouppment of various distinct coats and insignia, whenever a single individual became the representative of more than one family, or was the hereditary possessor of several dignities and properties.

Again: it would be equally necessary that this system should extend to the becoming heraldic declaration and record of Alliances of every kind, including (a matter of no little importance in the Middle Ages) feudal dependence.

In another, and a secondary sense, this same term, Marshalling, is used by Heralds to denote the general arrangement and disposition of heraldic charges and insignia in blazon upon the field of a Shield.

In its simplest form, MARSHALLING is effected by Ag-groupment without Combination—by placing two or more Shields of arms, that is, in such positions as to form a connected group of distinct Shields, either with or without various accessories. Seals afford excellent examples of Marshalling of this order. These Seals may be classified in two groups,—one, in which an effigy appears; and a second, in which the composition does not include any effigy. Here I may observe that the same armorial blazonry that was displayed upon their military surcoats by Princes, Nobles, and Knights, was adopted by Ecclesiastics for the decoration of their official vestments, and also (towards the close of the thirteenth century) by Ladies of rank, as an appropriate style of ornamentation for their own costume: and many examples of the effigies of Ladies, with a few of Ecclesiastics, adorned in this manner with heraldic insignia, exist in Seals and in Monumental Memorials. In Beverley Minster there is a noble effigy of a priest, a member of the great family of PERCY (about A.D. 1330), the embroideries of whose vestments are elaborately enriched with numerous allied shields of arms. Upon his episcopal seal, LEWIS BEAUMONT, Bishop of Durham from 1317 to 1333, has his effigy standing between two Shields of Arms (to the dexter, England; to the sinister, a cross potent between four groups of small crosses patées, three crosses in each group), while his chasuble is semée de lys and also charged with a lion rampant—the arms of the house of Beaumont. The obverse of the Seal of MARGARET, daughter of PHILIP the Hardy, King of France, the second Queen of our EDWARD I., illustrates this usage in the instance of ladies : No. 316.

No. 316.—Seal of Margaret, Queen of Edward I.

Upon her tunic the Queen has emblazoned the three lions of her royal husband ; on her right side is a shield of France, the arms of her royal father ; and on the left side a corresponding shield is charged with a lion rampant. I have already shown the reverse of this fine Seal (No. 251), which in the original is one inch more in depth than it appears in these woodcuts.* Other characteristic examples are the Seals of AGNES DE PERCY, whose effigy, having the arms of Louvaine upon the tunic, holds two armorial shields, one in each hand : and of MARGARET, Countess of LINCOLN and PEMBROKE (about 1241), who blazons the old arms of DE LACI—quarterly or and gu., a bend sa., over all a label vert—upon the tunic of her effigy, and has the same arms on a Shield to the dexter, while another Shield to the sinister is charged with the lion rampant, borne by the DE LACIES as Earls of LINCOLN. The effigies of illustrious Ladies, which appear on Seals with allied Shields of arms, are not always represented in heraldic costume : good examples are the

No. 317.—Seal of Margaret, Lady de Ros. (Laing.)

Seals of ISABELLE of FRANCE, Queen of EDWARD II., and of ELIZABETH, daughter of EDWARD I., who was Countess, first of HOLLAND, and afterwards of HEREFORD : both are engraved in Sandford's "Genealogical History of England," page 121. The Seal of MARGARET BRUCE, of Skelton, Lady DE ROS, attached to a deed, dated 1280, has the effigy of the noble lady, wearing her ermine mantle, and supporting two Shields of arms—the Shield of DE ROS, gu., three water-bougets arg., to the dexter, and a Shield of BRUCE, a lion rampant: No. 317. I am indebted, for the use of the excellent woodcut of this very interesting seal, to Mr. Laing of Edinburgh, the talented author of the two noble volumes

* In No. 251 the initial A of the word AQVITANNIE has been omitted on the Early Seals of Scotland, which occupy a foremost position amongst the most valuable as well as the most beautiful heraldic works that have ever been published in Great Britain. (See page 11.) In the Monumental Brasses and also in the Sculptured Monumental Effigies of Ladies of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, heraldic costume is frequently represented, and the figures are constantly associated with groups of Shields of arms. As most characteristic examples I may specify the effigy of a Lady, about A.D. 1325, at Selby in Yorkshire; and the Brass in Westminster Abbey, A.D. 1399, to ALIANORE DE BOHUN, Duchess of GLOUCESTER.

The aggroupment of various armorial ensigns upon a Seal, without the presence of any effigy, is exemplified in the characteristic Seal of JOAN, daughter of HENRY Count DE BARRE, and of ALIANORE, daughter of EDWARD I., the widow of JOHN DE WARRENNE, Earl of SURREY, A.D. 1347. In this remarkable composition, No. 318, the arms, blazoned on lozenges, are, in the centre, Warrenne; in chief and base, England; and to the dexter and sinister, De Barre (No.

No. 318.—Seal of Joan, Countess of Surrey.

162): also, at the four angles of the group, the lion and castle of Leon and Castile, in direct allusion to the descent of the Countess from ALIANORE, first Queen of EDWARD I. In the original, this elaborate composition is only one and a half inches in diameter. Still smaller, measuring no more than one and a quarter inches in diameter, and yet no less rich in either its Heraldry or its Gothic traceries, is the beautiful little Counter-seal of MARY DE SAINT PAUL, wife of AYMER DE VALENCE, Earl of PEMBROKE, which is faithfully shown on an enlarged scale, in order to render the details more effectively, in No. 319. This illustrious lady, who founded Pembroke College, Cambridge, A.D. 1373, was the daughter of GUY DE CHASTILLON, Count of ST. PAUL, by his wife MARY, daughter of JOHN DE DREUX, Duke of BRITTANY, and of BEATRICE, sister of EDWARD I. On her Seal, accordingly, the Countess of Brittany marshals, in the centre, the arms of her husband (De Valence: No. 86), and those of her father (De Chastillon—gu., three pallets vair, on a chief or a label of three points az.), united upon a single shield by “Dimidiation”—a process presently to be described: to the dexter, the arms of her Royal relatives of England are blazoned in a circular compartment: to the sinister, in a similar compartment, are the fleurs de lys of France Ancient, No. 247, at that time so closely allied with the English lions: and, finally, in a third roundle, in the base of the composition, are the arms of De Dreux (chequée or and az., within a bordure gu. over all a canton of Brittany*, No. 15, borne by the maternal grandfather of the Countess: the legend is, + S. MARIE. DE. SEYN. POVL. COMITISSE. PEMPROCHIE. The original impression of this Seal, from which the woodcut, No.

* In No. 319 the bordure of De Dreux in the roundle in base is charged with Lions of England, as borne by JOHN DE DREUX; but the presence of these in the Seal of the Countess is uncertain. See No. 322.

319, was drawn, is appended to a charter, dated 1347, which is preserved amongst the muniments of Pembroke College. A very good example of the aggroupment of Shields upon a Seal, under conditions differing from those that now have been illustrated, I have already given in No. 204. Another beautiful and most interesting example, now unfortunately partially mutilated, is the Seal of MATILDA of LANCASTER, the wife, first, of WILLIAM DE BURGH, Earl of ULSTER (and by him mother of ELIZABETH, the wife of Prince LIONEL OF CLARENCE), and, secondly, of Sir

No. 319.

Seal of Mary, Countess of Pembroke.

No. 320.

Seal of Matilda of Lancaster.

RALPH DE UFFORD. This seal, of circular form, No. 320, displays to the dexter a shield of De Burgh—or, a cross gu.; to the sinister, a shield of Ufford—or, a cross engrailed sa., cantoning a fleur de lys, for difference: in base there is a lozenge of De Chaworth (the mother of the Countess was MATILDA DE CHAWORTH)—barrulée arg. and gu., an orle of martlets sa.; and in chief there remains part of another lozenge of Lancaster, to complete this remarkable heraldic group. Of the legend there remains only . . . ILLV MATILD' SE The introduction of Badges, with a Shield or Shields of arms, in the composition of a Seal, is another variety of this same system of Marshalling. No. 321, the Seal of OLIVER DE BOHUN, exemplifies this usage, having the white swan Badge of the noble house of BOHUN thrice repeated about the Shield. See No. 114. Also see, in the frontispiece, the Seal of Earl RICHARD DE BEAUCHAMP, No. 449, which is described in Section II. of Chapter XXII.

Marshalling by Aggroupment was practised under

No. 321.
Seal of Oliver de Bohun.

No. 322.
Shield of Earl John de Dreux.

another form by placing Shields of arms in the different panels of the same architectural monument.

MARSHALLING by Combination is effected by actually forming, for the blazonry of a single Shield, a composition which includes the principal charges of two or more allied Shields. The composition of the Shield borne by the house of DE DREUX, to which I have just referred in describing the Seal of the Countess of Pembroke, No. 319, is a most striking example of this variety of Marshalling: and this Shield was borne by JOHN DE DREUX, created Earl of RICHMOND by his uncle King EDWARD I., who lived and died in England, as it is represented in No. 322—the field.

chequée or and azure, being for De Dreux ; the canton ermine for Brittany ; and the bordure, gules charged with golden lions of England, representing the royal Shield of England, and showing the close connection existing between the Earl of Richmond and his Sovereign. The shield of Prince JOHN of ELTHAM (No. 24), England within a bordure of France, is another characteristic example of this Marshalling by Combination.

For many reasons, except in particular instances, these methods of Marshalling were not considered to be altogether satisfactory. Accordingly, a fresh arrangement was devised which would preserve intact the original integrity of each coat of arms, would imply a definite systematic method of arrangement, and would admit into a single composition any required number of distinct coats. This MARSHALLING by Quartering, naturally suggested by such simple bearings as Nos. 16 and 17, consists in dividing the Shield, as in No. 30, into four parts, and placing in each of these divisions or quarters one of the coats to be marshalled on a single Shield. If two coats only are thus to be "quartered," the most important of the two occupies the first quarter, and is repeated in the fourth ; and, the other coat is placed in the second quarter, and repeated in the third. The earliest example known in England is the quartered Shield of Castile and Leon—quarterly: first and fourth, gules, a castle triple-towered or; second and third, argent, a lion rampant gu., No. 323. This shield is sculptured upon the monument in Westminster Abbey to ALIANORE, daughter of FERDINAND III., King of CASTILE and LEON, and Queen of EDWARD I.: the date is 1290. This form of Marshalling began gradually to be adopted during the first half of the fourteenth century, and in the second half of that century it became generally adopted. Other examples of quartered shields I have already given in Nos. 252 and 253.

No. 323.
Shield of Castile and Leon.

Should there be three Coats to be quartered, they would severally occupy the first, second, and third quarters of the Shield, in due order, and the first quarter would be repeated in the fourth. In quartering four coats, no repetition would be necessary. If more than four coats would require to be quartered, the Shield would be divided into whatever number of sections might be necessary, as in No. 36, and the required arrangement would be made; should any repetition be necessary, the first quarter is to be repeated in the fourth. This process, whatever the number of the coats

No. 324.—Shield of Henry,
Earl of Northumberland.

thus marshalled (and their number sometimes is very great), is always entitled "quartering;" and each of these divisions of a Shield, for the purpose of Marshalling, is distinguished as a "Quarter." Occasionally a quartered coat would have to be marshalled with others. In the "grand quartering" which then takes place, the quartered coat is treated precisely as any other member of the group. See No. 37. For example, the shield, No. 324 (R. 2), of HENRY, first Earl of NORTHUMBERLAND, is—I. and IV. Grand Quarters,—first and fourth, or, a lion rampt. az., for Louvaine, or Percy modern: second and third, gu., three lucies haurient arg. (No. 164) for Lucy: II. and III. Grand Quarters,—az., five fusils conjoined in fesse or, for Percy ancient.

When a Shield to be quartered has a very numerous array of Quarterings, Grand Quartering is seldom adopted; but, in its stead, the new quarterings are marshalled in their proper succession, with the original quarterings of the Shield.

In this Marshalling the first quarter is occupied by the most important quartering, which is determined (without any fixed rule) by the original grant or licence: the other quarterings follow, in the order in which they may have been "brought in" to the composition. A quartered Shield becomes a permanent hereditary bearing, being a compound yet a single united Coat of Arms.

To denote and record ALLIANCE BY MARRIAGE, two distinct Coats were first marshalled upon a single Shield by Dimidiation. This process is accomplished in the following manner. The Shield to be charged with the two Coats in union is divided per pale, as in No. 28: on the dexter half the corresponding half, or generally somewhat more than that half, of the arms of the husband is marshalled: then, in like manner, the sinister half is charged with the corresponding portion of the arms of the wife. In the Shield, No. 250, from another Seal of Queen MARGARET, England dimidiates France ancient, Nos. 187 and 247. This Dimidiation in most cases produces a singular effect; as in No. 325, a Shield from the Seal of the Mayor of Winchelsea, one of the famous Sussex Cinque Ports, which bears England dimidiating azure, three hulls of ships, in pale, or: here the dimidiated lions and ships appear to unite for the purpose of forming the most extravagant of compound monsters. The Seal of the Borough of Great Yarmouth substitutes three herrings, in allusion to the staple fishery of the port, for the ships, and dimidiates them with the national lions. In the central Shield of the Seal, No. 319, I have shown De Valence

No. 325.—Shield of Mayor of Winchelsea.

dimidiating De Chastillon. In No. 326, from the monument of WILLIAM DE VALENCE, De Valence appears dimidiating the French Coat of Claremont Nesle—gu., semée of trefoils, two barbels haurient addorsed or: the Dimidiation here cuts off and removes one-half of the De Valence martlets and also one of the two barbels of Claremont.

No. 326.—De Valence, dimidiating Claremont Nesle.

The characteristic features of one or of both of the united Coats, as I have just shown, being commonly rendered indistinct and uncertain by Dimidiation, that form of marshalling was generally superseded by IMPALEMENT in the course of the third quarter of the fourteenth century. This process, at once simple and effectual, marshals the whole of the husband's arms on the dexter half of a Shield divided per pale, as No. 28; and the whole of the arms of the wife on the sinister half of it. Such an impaled Shield is borne by a husband and wife during their conjoint lives; also by the husband, if he should become a widower; but, should the wife become a widow, by her the impaled arms are borne during her widowhood charged upon a lozenge. The dexter half only—the husband's arms—of an impaled Shield is hereditary. Fine examples of Shields that are both impaled and quartered, are preserved in the monuments of EDWARD III. and his Queen PHILIPPA, in the Brass to ALIANORE DE BOHUN, and in the monument to MARGARET BEAUFORT, all in Westminster Abbey. Other fine examples occur on the monument of Earl RICHARD BEAUCHAMP, at Warwick. No. 327, from the Brass to THOMAS, LORD CAMOYS, K.G., and his wife, ELIZABETH MORTIMER (the widow of HENRY HOTSPUR), at Trotton, in Sussex, A.D. 1410, marshals Camoys—arg., on a chief gu. three plates, impaling Mortimer, No. 131. Again, at Warwick, the Brass to Earl THOMAS DE BEAUCHAMP and his Countess, MARGARET FERRERS of Groby, A.D. 1406, has a Shield of Beauchamp—gu., a fesse between six crosslets or, impaling Ferrers—gu., seven mascles, three three and one, or.

No. 327.—Camoys, impaling Mortimer.

No. 328.—D'Aubigny, impaling Scotland.

It is to be observed that Bordures and Tressures, which are not affected by Quartering, generally are dimidiated by Impalement,—that is, that side of both a Bordure and a Tressure which adjoins the line of Impalement is generally removed: thus, one of the small Shields sculptured upon the canopy of the monument of Queen MARY STUART, at Westminster, is charged with D'Aubigny impaling Scotland,—that is, az., three fleurs-de-lis or, within a bordure gu. charged with eight buckles gold, impaling No. 138. This Shield, represented in No. 328, has both the bordure on its dexter half, and the tressure on its sinister half, dimidiated by the impalement. There are other excellent examples of this partial dimidiating in the monuments of MARGARET TUDOR and MARGARET BEAUFORT, in the same chapel of Westminster Abbey.

The husband of an Heiress or a Co-heiress, instead of impaling the arms of his wife, marshals them upon his Shield charged as an Escutcheon of Pretence. This is the prevailing usage: in strict right, however, the Escutcheon of Pretence ought not to supersede Impalement until the husband of an heiress, having issue by her, has a good pretension to have her arms quartered hereafter with his own, by his and her sons, and their descendants. For, the son of an heiress, as heir to his maternal grandfather through his mother, as well as to his own father, quarters on his Shield, and transmits to his descendants, the arms of both his parents, his father's arms generally being in the first quarter. The Shield of RICHARD BEAUCHAMP, K.G., Earl of WARWICK (died in 1439), is a good example of the use of an Escutcheon of Pretence; it is represented in No. 329, drawn from the garter-plate of the Earl, in St. George's Chapel, Windsor. The Earl himself, as his hereditary coat, quarters Beauchamp with Newburgh—chequée or and az., a chevron erm.: upon this, for his Countess, ISABELLE, daughter and heiress of THOMAS LE DESPENCER, Earl of GLOUCESTER, he marshals an Escutcheon of Pretence charged with De Clare, No. 124, quartering Le Despencer—quarterly arg. and gu., in the second and third quarters a frette or, over all a bend sa. In the monument of this great Earl, at Warwick, upon the Escutcheon of Pretence the arms of Bohun are quartered with those of Clare and Despencer.

No. 329.—Shield of Earl Richard Beauchamp.

A few very simple diagrams will clearly elucidate the principle of Marshalling the arms of Husband and Wife.

No. 330.

No. 330.

No. 330.

Suppose B (Baron) to represent the Husband, and F (Femme) the Wife: then, No. 330 B may represent the arms of the Husband, and No. 330 F the arms of the Wife. If F be not an heiress, the arms of B and F, as husband and wife, are borne impaled, as in No. 330 B F; and their son bears No. 330 B only. If F be an heiress, the arms of B and F, as

No. 330.

No. 331.

No. 332.

husband and wife, are borne as in No. 331—the arms of the wife on an Escutcheon of Pretence; and, in this case, the son of B and F quarters the arms of both his parents, as

No. 332. Now, suppose this son, whose arms are No. 332, to marry a lady, not an heiress, whose arms are No. 330 FF, he would simply impale the arms of his wife, as in No. 333, and his son would bear No. 332 only, as his father bore that quartered shield before his marriage. But if the wife of the bearer of No. 332 were to be an heiress, he would charge the arms of his wife in pretence upon his own hereditary paternal Shield, as in No. 334 ; and his son, by this heiress, as before, would quarter the arms of both his parents, as in No. 335. It is obvious that Marshalling on this system (of which I here give the general outline) admits of a widely-extended application. Younger sons in all cases cover all the quarterings of their Shield with their own distinctive Mark of Cadency.

No. 333.

No. 334.

No. 335.

A Widower who marries again bears the arms of both his wives, in accordance with the system already laid down, with such modifications of adjustment as may be necessary or desirable in each particular instance.

An Unmarried Lady bears her paternal arms on a lozenge, without any Crest.

A Widow bears on a lozenge the arms borne by her husband and herself. Should she marry again, a Widow ceases to bear the arms of her former husband ; but if her former husband had been a Peer, she would continue to bear his and her own arms marshalled as before, but on a lozenge instead of a Shield, and on a separate Shield her present husband would marshal her arms with his own, and the Shield and the lozenge would be grouped together, the Shield having precedence.

A Peeress in her own right, if married to a Peer, has both her own arms and those of her husband fully blazoned, and the lozenge and the Shield, with all their accessories, are marshalled to form a single united group, the achievement of the higher rank having precedence. If married to a Commoner, a Peeress in her own right bears her own arms on a lozenge as before, and her husband marshals her arms ensigned with her coronet in pretence on his Shield: and this lozenge and Shield are grouped together, the lozenge yielding precedence.

Prelates bear the arms of their see impaling their own paternal and hereditary arms, the insignia of the see occupying the dexter half of the Shield, and this Shield is ensigned with a mitre only. A married Prelate bears also a second Shield, placed to the sinister of the other, on which are marshalled, in accordance with ordinary usage, his own personal arms with those of his wife.

The Herald Kings, in like manner, bear two Shields, disposed to form a single group: on the dexter Shield their official arms impale their personal; and on the sinister Shield their personal arms are marshalled with the arms of their wives.

Again, the same usage obtains in marshalling the arms of Knights of Orders of Knighthood who, when married, bear two Shields grouped together. On the dexter Shield are blazoned the arms of the Knight himself alone; and around this Shield are displayed the insignia of his Order, or Orders, of Knighthood: and on the sinister Shield the arms of the Knight and of his wife are marshalled, but without the knightly insignia. This second Shield is generally environed with decorative foliage. This usage, prevalent in England, is not accepted and adopted by foreign Heralds:

nor does it appear to be required by true heraldic principle, or to be strictly in accordance with it. The wife of a Knight shares his knightly title, and takes precedence from her husband's knightly rank; and a knight, with perfect heraldic consistency, might marshal his own knightly insignia about the Shield which is charged with his own arms and those of his wife, whether united by impalement, or when the latter are borne in pretence: and thus a single Shield would be borne, and there would cease to exist any motive for endeavouring to impart to a second Shield some general resemblance to its companion by wreaths or other unmeaning accessories.

Official Arms are not hereditary.

Royal Personages, when married, bear their own arms on a separate Shield to the dexter; and a second Shield, to the sinister, bears the arms of the husband and wife impaled, or sometimes (but not in conformity with heraldic rule) quartered.

The circumstances of every case must exercise a considerable influence in determining the Marshalling of the Accessories of any Shield, Lozenge, or Group. As a general rule, however, the Helm always rests on the chief of the Shield: Commoners, Knights, and Baronets place their Crest upon the Helm: Peers and Princes place their Coronet upon the Helm, and their Crest is placed, distinct, above it: and, in like manner, the SOVEREIGN places the Royal Crest above the Crown. The Mantling is displayed from the back of the Helm: it is most effective when simple in its form and adjustment, and when it droops behind the Shield. The Motto is placed below the Shield; but if it has special reference to the Crest, above the Crest: or, if Shield, Crest (or Badge), and Motto alone are blazoned, the Motto may be placed between the Shield and the Crest or Badge. Supporters are to be placed erect, as if in the act of really supporting the Shield: they ought to stand either on an appropriate ground, or on a Gothic basement to the entire Achievement. Badges, with all Official and Knightly Insignia, and all other Honourable Insignia of every kind, are rightly marshalled in an Achievement of Arms.

CHAPTER XII.

CADENCY.

Marks of Cadency are temporary or permanent. The Label. The Bordure. The Bendlet, Barrulet, and Canton. Change of Tincture. Secondary Charges. Single Small Charges. Differences of Illegitimacy. Cadency of Crests, Badges, &c. Modern Cadency.

“Merke ye wele theys questionys here, now folowyng !”

BOKE OF ST. ALBANS. A.D. 1486.

AMONGST his comrades in arms, or in the midst of a hostile array, the last object that a mediæval Knight would expect or desire to observe, on the morning of a battle or a joust, would be an exact counterpart of himself. Occasions, indeed, might sometimes arise, when it might be highly desirable that five or six counterfeit “Richmonds” should accompany one real one to “the field ;” or, when a “wild boar of Ardennes” might prefer to encounter the hunters, having about him the choice of his own “boar’s brood,” garnished at all points exactly after his own fashion. These, however, are rare and strictly exceptional cases. And the Knight, to whom distinction was as the breath of his nostrils, as he closed his vizor trusted confidently to his heraldic insignia to distinguish him, while, in the fore-front of the fray, with sword and lance and axe he would strive manfully to distinguish himself. This implies that Heraldry, besides assigning to different families their own distinct insignia, should possess the faculty of distinguishing the several members, and also the various branches of the same family, the one from the other. A faculty such as this Heraldry does possess, and that faculty is CADENCY.

In "marking Cadency"—that is, in distinguishing the armorial insignia of kinsmen, who are members of the very same family, or of some one of its various branches, it is a necessary condition of every system of "Differencing" that, while in itself clear and definite and significant, it should be secondary to the leading characteristics of the original Coat of Arms which denotes the senior branch of the Family, and also declares from what fountain-head all the kinsmen of all the branches have derived their common descent.

Various methods for thus marking Cadency were adopted, and accepted as satisfactory, in the early days of Heraldry. Of these I now shall describe and illustrate such as are most emphatic in themselves, and in their character most decidedly heraldic,—such also as most advantageously may be retained in use in our own Heraldry of the present time. It will be seen that the "Differences" which mark Cadency necessarily resolve themselves into two groups or classes: one, in which the "Difference" is temporary only in its significance and use,—as, when an eldest son, on the death of his father, succeeds to the position in the family which his father had held, he removes his Mark of Cadency as eldest son from his Shield, assumes the unmarked Shield as his father had borne it before him, and transfers to his own son the mark that previously had distinguished his Shield from that of his father. In the other group, the Marks of Cadency are permanent, and consequently they become integral elements of the heraldic composition in which they appear: thus, the mark of Cadency which distinguishes any particular branch of a family, is borne alike by all the members of that branch, and in that branch it is transmitted from generation to generation.

More than one Mark of Cadency may be introduced into the same Coat of Arms; and, for the purpose of some form of secondary distinction, it is good Heraldry to mark Marks of Cadency—to charge one variety of mark, that is, upon another.

The LABEL, Nos. 271, 272, is blazoned as a Mark of Cadency in the earliest Rolls of Arms, and it appears discharging this duty in the earliest examples. The Label is generally borne with three points, as in No. 271; frequently with five, as in No. 272; and occasionally with four or with more than five points. It is quite certain that no significance is, or has ever been, attached to the number of the points, the object in all cases being to make the Label distinctly visible, and to adjust the points to the general composition of the Shield. Labels are of various tinctures. EDWARD I., EDWARD II., and EDWARD III., each one during the lifetime of his father, bore the Shield of England, No. 187, differenced with an azure label, sometimes of three points, as in No. 336, and sometimes having five points. EDWARD the BLACK PRINCE marked the Royal Shield of EDWARD III. with a label argent, as in No. 337; and a silver label has since been the Mark of Cadency of every succeeding PRINCE OF WALES. The Label has been used in this manner by personages of all ranks who have borne arms, from the time of HENRY III.; and examples abound in all the early Rolls of Arms, in Monuments, and upon Seals.

No. 336.—Eldest Sons of Edward I. and II.

No. 337.—Black Prince.

The LABEL, borne as a Mark of Cadency, is commonly charged with other figures and devices, as differences of a secondary rank. Or, when it is thus charged, the charges upon a Label may be considered to be elements of the Label itself, in its capacity of a Mark of Cadency. EDMOND, the first Earl of LANCASTER, as I have already shown, No. 249, differenced his father's Arms of England with a Label of France, No. 338—an azure label, that is, charged with golden fleurs de lys, to denote his French alliance; and thus by the same process he was Marshalling and Marking Cadency. JOHN OF GHENT, Duke of LANCASTER, differenced with an ermine Label, No. 339, derived from the ermine shield of Brittany (No. 15): and the Plantagenet Dukes of YORK charged each point of their silver Label with three torteaux, No. 340, which may be considered to have been derived from the shield of Wake (No. 82). In order to show them on a larger scale, the Labels in Nos. 338—343 are represented without the Shields on which they were charged. All these Shields would be repetitions of the same blazonry of France and England quarterly: Nos. 252 and 253.

No. 338.—Lancaster.

No. 339.—Brittany.

No. 340.—York.

The Label, with various Differences, has generally been the Royal Mark of Cadency; and now differenced silver Labels are borne, to mark Cadency, by every member of our Royal Family.

Like the points of Labels, the Charges blazoned on those points had no fixed or determinate numbers. That both the Labels and their Charges should be distinct and conspicuous, was the special object with which they were blazoned. Accordingly, in different examples of the same Label the number of the repetitions of the Charges sometimes is found to differ. At the same time, in the earliest examples of charged Labels, the repetitions of the Charges, while devoid of any special differencing aim or meaning, may be considered to have been suggested by the sources from which the Charges themselves were derived. For example: the Label of Lancaster, No. 338, of Earl EDMOND, derived directly from the Shield of France ancient, No. 247, with its field semée de lys, has three fleurs de lys upon each point, so that this Label has the appearance of being also semée de lys. Had it been derived from the Shield of France modern, No. 248, charged with three fleurs de lys only, a single fleur de lys in all probability would have been blazoned on each of the three points of this same Label. Upon this principle the Label of Prince LIONEL, Duke of CLARENCE, second son of EDWARD III., which is differenced with cantons gules, has a single canton on each point, as in No. 341, evidently because only a single canton can be blazoned on a Shield. The figures and devices that are charged for secondary difference upon Labels vary widely in their character; but, however difficult it now may be in very many instances to trace these differencing charges to their sources, and so to determine the motive which led to their adoption, there can be no doubt that originally they were chosen and adopted for the express purpose of denoting and recording some alliance or dependency. Some early Labels are of a compound character ; that is, they are charged with two distinct groups of devices, which are at once divided and conjoined by impalement. Such a Label was borne by Prince HENRY, son of JOHN of GHENT, between the time of his father's death and his own accession as HENRY IV. (Feb. 3 to Sept. 30, 1399) : it was a Label of five points per pale of Brittany and Lancaster, No. 342, being his father's Label impaling his own. The second son of this Prince, THOMAS Duke of CLARENCE, instead of adopting impalement, charged a red canton upon each point of an ermine Label, as in No. 343 : while his brother, JOHN Duke of BEDFORD, bore their father's Label, No. 342.

The BORDURE, both plain and charged, is a Mark of Cadency borne by Princes and by personages of various ranks. EDMOND, youngest son of EDWARD I., differenced England with a plain silver bordure, as in No. 344 : the HOLLANDS, Earls of KENT, did the same : and the same silver bordure also was borne by THOMAS, youngest son of EDWARD III., about the quartered shield of France ancient and England ; and about the quartered shield of France modern and England by HUMPHREY, youngest son of HENRY IV. Prince JOHN of ELTHAM, as I have already shown, and after him the HOLLANDS, Dukes of EXETER, differenced England with a Bordure of France : No. 24. Though not so numerous as Labels, Bordures employed to mark Cadency exist in very many early examples, and a variety of devices appear charged upon them for secondary Difference. See No. 140. In the Royal Heraldry of our own times the Bordure is not used as a Royal Difference; but its use is retained for differencing Shields of less exalted rank.

No. 344.—Holland, of Kent.

In some few early Examples a BENDLET is charged upon the paternal shield as a mark of Cadency: and a BARRULET is found to have been also used for the same purpose. Thus, HENRY, second son of

No. 345.
Henry of Lancaster.

EDMOND the first Earl of LANCASTER, during the lifetime of his elder brother, differenced England with an azure Bendlet, as in No. 345: and, in the Seal of HENRY DE PERCY, son and heir of HENRY the third Baron, the lion is debriused, for Difference, by a Barrulet which crosses the Shield in the honour-point. Possibly, this Barrulet may be a Label without points. A CANTON, plain, or more frequently charged, and in many examples of ermine, is also added to Shields to mark Cadency. See Nos. 128, 129, 130.

To mark Cadency by a change of Tinctures was a simple expedient, and such a one as would naturally be practised at an early period. It was effected, first, in the case of the Field: thus (H. 3), the brothers DE LA ZOUCHE severally bear—Gu., bezantée, and, Az., bezantée: and the brothers FURNIVAL (H. 3) bear—Arg., a bend between six martlets gu., and, Or, a bend between six martlets gu. Secondly, the change is effected in the Charges: thus, two William BARDOLES (H. 3 and E. 2) severally bear—Az., three cinquefoils or, and, Az., three cinquefoils arg. Thirdly, the tinctures are reversed: for example, for two Sir JOHN HARCOURTS (E. 2)—Gu., two bars or, and, Or, two bars gu. Fourthly, there is a complete change in all the tinctures: and so, while Sir ANDREW LOTEREL (E. 2) bears—Or, a bend between six martlets sa., Sir GEFREY LOTEREL (E. 2) bears—Az., a bend between six martlets argent. Finally, this system of marking Cadency admits various modifications of the changes already described: thus, in the Arms of Mortimer, No. 131, gules is substituted for azure; and, again, in the same Shield an inescutcheon ermine takes the place of the inescutcheon argent.

Another and a favourite method of marking Cadency, calculated to exercise a great and decided influence in the development of heraldic blazon, is the addition of secondary Charges of small size (not on a Label or a Bordure, but) semée over the field of a Shield, or charged upon an Ordinary, or disposed in orle. In the greater number of examples, these small charges are found to have been gradually reduced to six or three, in order to admit of their

No. 346.—Beauchamp of Elmely.

No. 347.—Beauchamp at Carlaverock being blazoned on a somewhat larger scale, and consequently made more distinct. Again: while the number and the tinctures of the secondary differencing charges remain the same, in order to carry out the Cadency still farther the secondary charges themselves are varied: and, once more, in other cases the identity of the original secondary charges is retained, but their number is increased or diminished. I must be content to illustrate these various forms of Cadency with a few examples only. First, a group of shields of the BEAUCHAMPS:—Beauchamp of Elmely (H. 3)—Gu., a fesse or, No. 346: Beauchamp at Carlaverock—Gu., crusilée and a fesse or, No. 347: Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick—Gu., a fesse between six crosses crosslets or, No. 348: and Beauchamp of Bletshoe—Gu., a fesse between six martlets or, No. 349. Second, a corresponding group of shields of the BERKELEYS:—Maurice de Barkele (or Berkeley)—Gu., a chevron arg. (H. 3): and then for other Berkeleys—Gu., a chevron between ten crosses pattées, six and four, arg.; and the same Ordinary, with either ten cinquefoils of silver, or the same number of white roses. Three CORBETS bear severally (E. 2)—Or, a raven sa.; Or, two ravens sa.; and Or, three ravens sa. And, once more, their original Shield—Gu., a chevron or, is differenced by the

No. 348.—Beauchamp of Warwick

No. 349.—Beauchamp of Bletshoe.

COBHAMS by charging the Ordinary with three lioncels, three eaglets, three crosslets, three mullets, three estoiles, three crescents, or three fleurs de lys, all of them sable. The particular devices and figures selected thus to mark Cadency, like those charged upon Labels or Bordures, must be considered to have a special significance of their own, though this significance may frequently fail to be discerned in consequence of our being no longer able to trace out their association with the sources from which they were obtained. The alliances and the incidents that give these various Marks of Cadency, when it is possible to ascertain what they may have been, illustrate in a striking manner the motives by which the early Heralds were influenced when they differenced the Arms of Kinsmen.

Official Insignia sometimes become Marks of Cadency. Thus, JOHN DE GRANDISON, Bishop of Exeter (A.D. 1327—1369), on the bend in his paternal arms, No. 89, substitutes a golden mitre for the central eaglet, as in No. 350. WILLIAM COURTENAY, Archbishop of Canterbury (A.D. 1381—1396), adopts a different course, and charges three golden mitres upon each point of the Label of Courtenay—Or, three torteaux, over all a label of three points az. charged on each point with as many mitres gold. And again, HENRY LE DESPENCER, Bishop of Norwich (A.D. 1370—1406), places about his paternal shield an azure bordure charged with eight golden mitres (see the largest shield in No. 351). On his official seal the canopied effigy of the Bishop stands between this, his personal Shield, and the Shield of his see—az., three mitres or. but his Secretum, or private seal, is much more interesting, as an heraldic image of the man himself. Haughty, fierce, cruel, and pugnacious, his career not less inglorious as a military commander than as a churchman, this HENRY LE DESPENCER, a grandson of the unhappy favourite of the no less hapless EDWARD II., was one of the war-loving prelates who occasionally appear sustaining a strange, and yet as it would seem a characteristic, part in the romantic drama of mediæval History. His Secretum, No. 351, displays his Shield of Despencer, differenced with his bordure of mitres, couché from a large mantled helm, surmounted by a mitre, in place of a crest-coronet, which supports the Despencer crest, a silver griffin's head of ample size; on either side are the Shields of the see of Norwich, and of Ferrers (the Bishop's mother was Anne, daughter of WILLIAM Lord FERRERS of Groby) — Or, seven mascles, three three and one, gu.; the legend is, S . HENRICI . DESPENCER . NORWICENSIS . EPISCOPI.

No. 350.—Bishop Grandison.

No. 351.—Secretum of Bishop le Despencer.

At an early period, Cadency was marked by adding a single small charge to the blazon of a Shield, or by charging some secondary device or figure upon any accessory of a Shield of arms. Such a Mark of Cadency as this, obtained from some allied Shield, and charged upon an ordinary or principal bearing, or occupying a conspicuous position in the general composition, was in high favour with the Heralds of both the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. From the early examples, which exist in great numbers and in as great variety, it will be sufficient for me to adduce only a few specimens—a single example, indeed, illustrates the system. The Shield of Ufford, in the Seal of MATILDA of LANCASTER, which I have already described (No. 320), is thus differenced with a single fleur de lys in the first quarter. Precisely in the same manner Sir FULK FITZ WARIN differences the Shield of the head of his house, No. 17, by charging a mullet sable upon the first quarter, as in No. 352. THOMAS LE SCROPE, on the other hand, for Cadency marks the golden bend upon his azure Shield, No. 111, with an annulet sable, as in No. 353. Two members of the family of Beauchamp charge their golden fesse (see Nos. 346—349), the one with a crescent sable, and the other with a pierced mullet of the same tincture: Nos. 354, 355. In like manner, in addition to various labels, the NEVILLES charge no less than eight different small figures upon their silver saltire, No. 121, to distinguish different members and branches of their powerful race: I give one of these Shields in No. 356, which was borne by GEORGE NEVILLE, Lord LATIMER, from the monument to Earl RICHARD DE BEAUCHAMP at Warwick—Gu., on a saltire arg. a gimmel-ring az.: another

No. 352.
Sir Fulk Fitz Warin.

No. 354.

No 353.—Thomas le Scrope.

No. 355.

No. 356.—Lord Latimer.

No. 358.—Sir William de Brewys.

No 357.—Neville.

different shield of Neville, No. 357, has a cinquefoil charged on the saltire: a third example from this group I have already given, No. 122, differenced with a rose: this shield, No. 122, is now borne by the Earl of ABERGAVENNY. Once more: Sir WILLIAM DE BREWYS (E. 2) bears—Az., crusilée and a lion rampt. or, No. 358, which coat another

Sir WILLIAM DE BREWYS differences, to distinguish himself from his kinsman, while at the same time declaring their near relationship, by simply charging a red fleur de lys upon his lion's shoulder.

Differences of Illegitimacy, which rightly and indeed necessarily are included under the general head of "Cadency," do not appear at any time to have assumed a definite or decided character, and yet they bring before the student of Heraldry much curious matter for inquiry and investigation. Early in the true heraldic era illegitimate sons are found to have differenced their paternal arms, as other sons lawfully born might have done: and it does not appear that any peculiar methods of differencing were adopted, palpably for the purpose of denoting illegitimacy of birth, before the fourteenth century had drawn near to its close. And even then, if any express heraldic rule on this point ever was framed, which is very doubtful, it certainly was never observed with any care or regularity.

The earliest known example of the arms of a man of illegitimate birth is the fine Shield of WILLIAM LONGESPÉE, Earl of SALISBURY, son of HENRY II. and FAIR ROSAMOND, No. 197. This Shield is supposed to have been assumed and borne by the Earl on his marriage with the daughter and heiress of D'EUREUX, when in right of his wife he succeeded to the Earldom of Salisbury: but this theory does not rest upon any solid foundation, since it would be very difficult to show that the Shield with the six lioncels was certainly borne, on his armorial ensign, by the father-in-law of Earl William. Also, if a Shield charged with an escarbuncle and many lioncels, which has been assigned to GEOFFREY Count of ANJOU, was really borne by the Founder of the House of PLANTAGENET, Earl WILLIAM LONGESPÉE may have derived his own Shield from his paternal grandfather. Upon his Counterseal the Earl displays his own "long sword" as his proper device. In like manner, certain other personages, also illegitimate, appear to have borne arms which were either expressly assigned to themselves by the Sovereign, or such as they assumed in right of their mothers or wives. In all such cases as these, the Arms were not the paternal coat in any way differenced, but what now would be designated "fresh grants." Towards the beginning of the fifteenth century, however, a peculiar kind of Differencing for Illegitimacy gradually prevailed throughout Europe: thus, illegitimate children either altered the position of the charges in their paternal Shield; or they marshalled the entire paternal arms upon a bend or a fesse; or they composed for themselves a fresh Shield, either using their father's badges and the actual charges of his Shield, or adopting devices evidently derived from the paternal bearings; or they bore the paternal Shield differenced in a peculiarly conspicuous manner, with certain marks by which they might be readily and certainly distinguished.

No. 359.
Henry, Earl Worcester.

When the composition of the paternal Shield would admit of such an arrangement, the field not being argent, an illegitimate son sometimes bore his father's arms marshalled fesse-wise, so as to leave both the chief and the base of his Shield plain white. HENRY, Earl of WORCESTER, whose father was an illegitimate son of HENRY BEAUFORT, third Duke of SOMERSET, bore the arms of Beaufort couped in this manner in chief and in base, as if they were charged upon a very broad fesse on a silver field: No. 359.

JOHN DE BEAUFORT (great-grandfather of HENRY, Earl of WORCESTER), eldest illegitimate son of Prince JOHN of GHENT, before the Act for his legitimation was passed in the year 1397, bore his father's hereditary arms of Lancaster—England with a label of France, No. 249—on a broad bend, the field being per pale arg. and az., the Lancastrian livery colours : No. 360. After their legitimation act had become a law, this same JOHN DE BEAUFORT, with his brothers, sons,

No. 360.—Beaufort before 1397.

No. 361.—Beaufort after 1397.

and grandsons, bore the Royal quartered shield of France and England, No. 361, differenced, not with labels, but with a bordure componée arg. and az. (the Lancastrian colours) : the different members of the Beaufort family slightly varied the bordure, but by the head of their house it was borne as in No. 361. It will be seen that this is the coat that HENRY, Earl of WORCESTER (himself the legitimate son of an illegitimate son), bore fesse-wise, as in No. 359. The father of this Earl HENRY, CHARLES SOMERSET, Earl of WORCESTER (illegitimate son of the third Duke of SOMERSET), differenced Beaufort, No. 361, with a silver bendlet sinister, as in No. 362, the bendlet covering the quarterings, but being included within the bordure.

No. 362.—Charles, Earl of Worcester.

Since the fifteenth century, in English Heraldry, a narrow bendlet or baton sinister, coupé at its extremities, either plain or charged, has differenced the illegitimate descendants of the Royal Family. It was borne by ARTHUR PLANTAGENET, Viscount LISLE, son of EDWARD IV. : by HENRY FITZ ROY, Duke of RICHMOND, son of HENRY VIII., and, variously differenced, by all the illegitimate descendants of CHARLES I.—that is, it is borne at the present day, argent, by the Duke of BUCCLEUCH ; ermine, by the Duke of CLEVELAND ; componée arg. and az., by the Duke of GRAFTON ; and, gules charged with three white roses, by the Duke of ST. ALBANS.

Sir ROGER DE CLARENDON, illegitimate son of the

No. 363.—Sir Roger de Clarendon.

No. 364.—Radulphus de Arundel.

BLACK PRINCE, bore on a sable bend the three Ostrich Feathers of his illustrious father's "Shield of Peace," the field of his Shield being golden, as in No. 363. Here the "Difference for Illegitimacy" is very emphatically marked in a singularly felicitous and beautiful Shield.

The paternal arms of illegitimate children have also sometimes been carried by them charged on a canton, either dexter or sinister, the rest of the Shield being left blank, or perhaps in some cases displaying the maternal arms ; of this usage I am not able to give any good example, in English Heraldry, of certain authority : one other variety of these singular Shields, however, I must add to my small group of examples, which was first noticed by Mr. MONTAGU ("Guide to the Study of Heraldry," p. 44). This is the Shield, No. 364, of RADULPHUS DE ARUNDEL; and it bears the quartered arms of the Earls of ARUNDEL—Fitz Alan and Warrenne (gu. a lion ramp. or. and No. 68), "flanchéd,"—that is, blazoned only upon the flanches (see No. 141) of the Shield, the central area being blank.

In the more recent Heraldry of our own country, the bendlet or baton sinister is generally regarded as the most appropriate and decided Difference of Illegitimacy. Still, now, as in earlier times, there exists no fixed and universally recognised system of treating this peculiar application of Cadency: and, consequently, the Marks of Illegitimacy in use (whenever they are used) at the present time are both arbitrary in their character, and uncertain (or, at least, questionable) in their signification. The associations of the baton sinister, when borne "over all," may be considered to assign to it the exclusive duty of marking the Cadency now under our consideration: but there certainly is no other variety of Differencing, nor is there any other charge, of which it can be affirmed that its use or presence necessarily denotes this particular circumstance. Modern Heralds may difference for Illegitimacy in various ways, as it may seem to them to be most desirable; and their Differencing may or may not be understood; and, perhaps, after all, this very ambiguity may not be the least satisfactory element of the existing practice. The feeling might be different, were this Cadency to be marked upon the Shields of the fathers of illegitimate children.

In treating of this subject, some writers have maintained that the bordure componée is, in its heraldic nature, the most decided and unquestionable Difference of Illegitimacy: and this opinion these writers have derived from the singularly contradictory fact, that the BEAUFORTS differenced with a bordure componée when they became legally legitimate. A bordure componée may, indeed, be used with such an intention, as it is used by the Duke of RICHMOND, who bears the arms of CHARLES II. within a bordure componée arg. and gu., charged with eight roses of the last; while by the BEAUFORTS it was used with an intention exactly the reverse of this. Very recently, a bordure engrailed has been employed to discharge this particular duty: but this application of the bordure engrailed does not abate the honour of that bearing, or disqualify it for use under perfectly different conditions. In fact, the bordure, whatever its aspect or modification of treatment, remains still, as it was of old, an honourable Difference, until some abatement of honour has been associated with its presence under special circumstances. And precisely the same words may be applied to any other charge that has been employed, or may be required to mark Cadency.

In the case of the illegitimate issue of Kings, the baton sinister or other decided Difference must continue to be borne from generation to generation, since the Royal Arms cannot be assumed by any subject without "due Difference:" and it is highly probable that the remote (or the comparatively remote) descendants of the illegitimate sons of Kings may regard with happy complacency their hereditary Shield, with the associations of high honour that, in the course of time, may have gathered around it, the original baton sinister notwithstanding. But, in all other cases, true Heraldry cannot require the sustained presence of so marked a Difference as a baton sinister, and more particularly if with its presence painful memories should be associated. All that can be either desirable or necessary is, that such Differences in every instance should be maintained and transmitted, as may preserve becoming distinctions, and at the same time may be consistent with both historical veracity and heraldic propriety.

Marks of Cadency, as they are borne on Shields of Arms, are also charged on Badges, Crests, Supporters, and Mantlings. As a matter of course, they appear on Armorial Banners and Standards under the same conditions that they are blazoned upon Shields and Surcoats. Such examples as may be necessary to illustrate heraldic usage in these cases, I propose to describe in the following Chapters.

It cannot be necessary for me to adduce any arguments in order to impress upon Students of Heraldry the importance of investigating early Cadency, or to assure them that a special interest is inseparable from this inquiry: I may suggest, however, that it is most desirable that Students should arrange groups of allied Shields, and should carefully blazon them in full both in writing and in colour, with their various "Marks of Cadency," being careful also to record their authorities for every example.

MODERN CADENCY is marked by the Label and by single small Charges, which take precedence in the following order:—

1. The Label, No. 271.
2. The Crescent, No. 166A.
3. The Mullet, No. 278.
4. The Martlet, No. 161.
5. The Annulet, No. 154.
6. The Fleur de lys, No. 245.
7. The Rose, No. 298.
8. The Cross Moline, No. 99.
9. The Octofoil, or Double Quatrefoil.

At the present time, these Marks of Cadency are rarely used to denote the contemporary brothers of the same family; but almost invariably they distinguish different branches of the same family, and thus they become perma-ment Charges borne “for difference.” When they are adopted, Marks of Cadency now are generally placed upon the Honour Point of the Shield, or in some other conspicuous position: one of these Marks also may be charged upon another, if desired,—as a Martlet may be charged upon a Label, to denote the fourth son of an eldest son; and so in other cases.

The Seal of WILLIAM FRASER, No. 365, from Mr. Laing’s Collection, exemplifies in a singular and interesting manner the early use of a differenced Label. Here the Label appears, without any Shield, borne as if it were a Badge: and it is charged, on each of its three points, with two devices that have the appearance of mullets of six points, but which really may be fraises—strawberry-leaves, the rebus-device of Fraser (see pp. 102—185).

No. 365.
Seal of William Fraser: appended to Homage Deed, A.D. 1295, preserved in H.M. Record Office.

CHAPTER XIII.

DIFFERENCING.

Differencing to denote Feudal Alliance or Dependency : Differencing without any Alliance. Augmentation. Abatement.

“Differencing, which comprises in truth the growth and ramification of Coat-Armour, and the whole system of its early development, has been strangely lost sight of in the numerous treatises on Armory that have satisfied recent generations of Englishmen.”

HERALD AND GENEALOGIST, II., 32.

DIFFERENCING, as distinct from CADENCY, implies, first, the treatment of Coats of Arms and other armorial insignia, that denote and are based upon Feudal Alliance or Dependency, but without blood-relationship ; and, secondly, it also implies a comprehensive system of distinguishing similar Arms, when they are borne by individuals or families between whom no kind of alliance is known to have existed. It is evident, on the one hand, that a feudal influence would naturally lead to some degree of assimilation to the Coat Armour of the feudal Chief, in the Arms of all allies and dependents : and, on the other hand, it will readily be understood that, even in the early days of its career, Heraldry would see the necessity for providing for the constantly increasing demands upon its resources ; and, consequently, that it would organise a system which would enable the same Ordinaries and the same principal Charges to appear in distinct Shields, without either confusion or misapprehension.

It is highly probable, and indeed it may be assumed to be certain, that what I have called a "feudal influence," in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries in no slight degree affected the general composition of Coats of Arms. In very many instances the working of this influence is still palpable; and it is always interesting to the student of Heraldry, as it must always be eminently useful to the student of History, to detect its presence and to explore its method of action. Like Cadency, feudal Differencing is expressed by various means, all of them indicating, in a greater or a less degree, the motive which suggested their adoption. I proceed at once to examples, which illustrate and explain the system so clearly and so fully, that prolonged introductory remarks are altogether superfluous.

Upon his Seal, RANULPH DE BLONDEVILLE, Earl of CHESTER (died in 1232) bears three garbs or wheat-sheaves; and Rolls of Arms of the time of HENRY III. blazon the Shield of the Earl of CHESTER as—Az., three

No. 366.—Earl of Chester.

garbs or, No. 366. This Shield has been borne by the Earls of CHESTER to this day, and for his Earldom of CHESTER it now is borne by the PRINCE OF WALES: and, in token of feudal alliance, from the middle of the thirteenth century, "one or more garbs," in the words of Mr. PLANCHÉ, "are seen in the majority of Coats belonging to the nobility and gentry of the County Palatine of Chester." Thus, since the year 1390, the arms of GROSVENOR have been—az., a garb or.

A cinquefoil, said to have been borne by him on a red Shield, was the device of ROBERT FITZ-PARNEL, Earl of LEICESTER, who died in 1204. Accordingly, the cinquefoil, derived from him, as early as the thirteenth century, appears in token of feudal connection on the Shields of many families of Leicestershire. As I have already shown, (page 188) a BERKELEY, who was of Leicestershire, substituted ten cinquefoils for the ten crosses patée of the Berkeley Shield; and thus he combined feudal Differencing with Cadency.

Many a red chevron or chevronel, with other devices, charged upon a golden field, or a gold chevron on a red field, is a sign of feudal alliance with the great house of DE CLARE, whose Shield was—or, three chevronels gu., No.

No. 367.—Fitz Ralph.

124. For example, the FITZ-RALPHS, near neighbours of the De Clares at Clare in Suffolk, differenced the Shield of the Earls by charging silver fleurs de lys on each chevronel, as in No. 367 (E. 2); and, for secondary difference, they sometimes added a bordure azure, as in the fine early Brass at Pebmarsh, near Clare. Again: by a change of tinctures, without affecting the charges of the Shield, the Arms of L'ERCEDECKNE (now Archdeacon) are—Arg., three chevronels sa.

At Carlaverock, EDMOND DE HASTINGS, brother of the Earl, bore—Or, a maunche gu., with a label of five points sa., the Earl himself bearing simply—Or, a maunche gu., No. 276. And, close by the side of EDMOND DE HASTINGS was his friend and companion, the feudal ally, without doubt, of his house, JOHN PAIGNEL, a very proper comrade, as the chronicler testifies—“Un bachelor jolif et comté, who differenced Hastings by change of tinctures, and bore—Vert, a maunche or.

The Shield of the noble house of DE LUTERELL, or LOTEREL, I have blazoned with changed tinctures for two near kinsmen bearing that name (page 186), thus showing in what manner they marked their Cadency. This same shield, No. 368—Or, a bend between six martlets sa., was also differenced by other families to mark their feudal alliance with the house of Luterell. Thus, the DE FURNIVALS, themselves a powerful and distinguished family, who held their lands by feudal tenure under the Luterells, in token of this alliance bore the Shield of De Luterell with a fresh change of tinctures; and, accordingly, the arms of the De Furnivals are well known as—Arg., a bend between six martlets gu. Then, while the FURNIVALS, for Cadency, differenced these arms amongst themselves, their feudal allies and dependents, the ECCLESALLS or EKELESHALES, the MOUNTENEYS, the WADESLES or WADSLEYS, and the WORTELES or WORT-

No. 368.—De Luterell.

LEYS, all united in declaring their connection with their chief by assuming arms founded upon the Furnival Coat. These very interesting and characteristic examples of feudal Differencing are well blazoned, as follows, in the Roll of EDWARD II. For DE ECCLESALL—Sa., a bend between six martlets or: for DE MOUNTENEY—Gu., a bend between six martlets or:

No. 369.—De Wadsley.

for DE WADSLEY—Arg., on a bend between six martlets gu., three escallops or, No. 369: and for DE WORTLEY—Arg., on a bend between six martlets gu., three bezants, No. 370.

The MOUNTENEYS further difference their common arms, for Cadency, after this manner. Instead of gules, Sir ERNAUF DE MOUNTENEY has the field of his shield azure, his bend and martlets being golden: Sir JOHN bears these same arms, but charges his bend with a mullet gules, No. 371: Sir T. DE MOUNTENEY bears Sir John's arms, but with a field gules: and another Sir JOHN cotises his bend thus—Gu., a bend cotised between six martlets or, No. 372.

North of the Tweed, also, the same principle is found to be exemplified in Scottish Heraldry. "In Annandale," writes Mr. SETON, "the chief and saltire of the Bruces are carried (of different tinctures and with additional figures) by

No. 370.
De Wortley.

No. 371.
Sir John de Mounteney.

No. 372.
Sir John de Mounteney.

the Jardines, Kirkpatricks, Johnstons, and other families." The arms of BRUCE are—Or, a saltire and a chief gu., No. 73: those of JARDINE are—Arg., a saltire and a chief gu., the latter charged with three mullets of the field, pierced of the second: and the arms of KIRKPATRICK are—Arg., a saltire and chief az., the latter charged with three oreillers or. This coat of Kirkpatrick is also borne by the JOHNSTONS, the tinctures differenced thus—Arg., a saltire sa., and on a chief gu. three oreillers or.

Once more, returning to the southern side of the Scottish border, of RICHARD DE NEVILLE, the renowned "King-maker," we find it to be recorded that, so great was his popularity at Calais, of which city he was governor, that his Badges were universally adopted,—“no man esteeming himself gallant whose head was not adorned with his silver ragged staff, No. 294; nor was any door frequented, that had not his white cross (silver saltire, No. 121) painted thereon.” This was an extravagant application of the earlier usage in denoting feudal alliance, such as was in keeping with the heraldic sentiment of the second half of the fourteenth century. Those good citizens of Calais, however, who were Neville-worshippers four hundred years ago, were not singular in exhibiting an armorial ensign at the entrance to their houses. Numerous, indeed, are the doorways in various parts of England, and particularly in the counties of Surrey, Sussex, and Norfolk, which in the “sign of the chequers” still display the insignia (chequée or and az., No. 68) of the once mighty Earls of WARRENNE and SURREY; and thus show that relics of the old feudal influence are endowed with a tenacious vitality, which prolongs their existence for ages after the feudal system itself has passed away.

Differencing adopted, so far as now is apparent, simply for the sake of distinction, lays open before the student of Heraldry a wide and a diversified field of inquiry. All the miscellaneous charges that are associated in blazon with the Ordinaries, and also with the Subordinaries, thus are brought under consideration; and, without a doubt, it was for the express purpose of Differencing that many of these charges were introduced into English Heraldry. How far some remote degree of relationship, or some subordinate feudal motive now lost to sight and forgotten, may originally have affected the choice of Charges “for difference,” it is not possible now to determine; nor can we always follow the rebus-loving search for a “Difference,” that might speak through that allusive quality which is a primary element of the Herald’s science. We do know that the act of bearing the same arms by different families, without some heraldic Difference, was of very rare occurrence ; and that, when it did occur, it was regarded with marked surprise, and on more than one occasion led to a memorable controversy : and, further, we find great numbers of early differenced Shields, which illustrate in a very effective manner the growth and development of English Heraldry. Shields of this order have strong claims on our attention. The examples that I am able here to place before students are to be regarded simply as specimens, few in number, and yet sufficient to show some of the varied forms under which early Differencing was effected.

The proceedings in the High Court of Chivalry in the suit between Sir RICHARD LE SCROPE and Sir ROBERT GROSVENOR, relative to the right to the Arms—Azure, a bend or, No. 111, commenced on the 17th of August, 1385, and the final judgment of the King himself upon the appeal of the defendant against the finding of the Court, was not pronounced till the 27th of May, 1390. On the 15th of May, 1389, the judgment of the Court assigned the arms—azure, a bend or—to Sir RICHARD LE SCROPE ; and to Sir ROBERT GROSVENOR, these arms—az., a bend or, within a plain bordure argent. Thus the Court confirmed to Sir Richard le Scrope the right to bear the Ordinary in its severe simplicity, without any other charge and without any Difference : and, at the same time, it was decided that these arms of Scrope should be differenced, in order that they might become the arms of Grosvenor, and the “Difference” was to be a plain silver bordure. The whole of the proceedings in this remarkable case are preserved, and have been published ; and they derive a peculiar interest from the circumstance, that amongst the witnesses who gave evidence was the father of English Poetry, GEOFFREY CHAUCER. Appeal having been made to the Sovereign, RICHARD II. determined that a "plain bordure argent" was a Mark of Cadency, good and right, and perfectly sufficient as a Difference "between Cousin and Cousin in blood;" but that it was "not a sufficient Difference in Arms between two strangers in blood in one kingdom." The King, therefore, cancelled and annulled the sentence of the Court of Chivalry; and in so doing he gave a very clear definition of the distinction to be observed in Heraldry between "Cadency" and "Differencing." Then it was that the shield, azure, a garb or, was adopted as the arms of Grosvenor. We may assume, that the judgment of the Court would have been confirmed by the King, had Sir Robert Grosvenor been commanded to blazon his golden bend between two garbs, or charged with one or more garbs, or with three garbs on a chief, or with any other decided Difference which would be palpably distinct from a Mark of Cadency.

The examples of Differenced Shields which follow I have selected from the Roll of EDWARD II. It will be seen that in each small group of these examples some primary feature of the composition is common to every Shield, so that the distinction between the Shields in each group is effected either by a simple change of tinctures, or by the introduction of various secondary charges.

CHIEFS.—SIR JOHN DE ARDERNE—Gu., crusilée and a chief or. SIR THOMAS LE ROUS—Erm., on a chief indented gu. two escallops arg. SIR JOHN DE CLINTONE—Arg., on a chief az. two fleurs de lys or, No. 74. SIR JOHN DE CLINTONE, of Maxtoke—Arg., on a chief az. two mullets or, No. 75: here the Difference denotes Cadency as well as a distinct individuality.

BENDS.—SIR ROBERT POUTREL—Or, on a bend az. three fleurs de lys arg. SIR WALTER DE BERMINGHAM—Arg., on a bend gu., cotised az., three escallops or. OLIVER DE BOHUN —Az., on a bend, cotised and between six lioncels or, three escallops gu., No. 321.

FESSES AND BARS.—Sir JOHN DE DAGEWORTH—Erm., a fesse gu. bezantée, No. 80. Sir G. DE WACHESHAM—Arg., a fesse and in chief three crescents gu. Sir R. DE COLEVILLE—Or, a fesse gu., and in chief three torteaux. Sir J. DE GEYTONE—Arg., a fesse between six fleurs de lys gu. Sir G. DE OUSFLET—Arg., on a fesse az. three fleurs de lys or. Sir R. DE LOMELYE (Lumley)—Gu., on a fesse between three popinjays arg., as many mullets sa. Sir B. BADLESMERE—Arg., a fesse between bars gemelles gu. Sir G. DE LA MERE—Or, a fesse between bars gemelles az., No. 84. Sir J. DE PREIERES—Gu., a fesse between bars gemelles arg. Sir J. WAKE—Or, two bars gu., in chief three torteaux, No. 82. Sir B. PYCOT—Az., two bars or, in chief three bezants. Sir R. DE WEDONE—Arg., two bars gu., in chief three martlets sa. Sir R. BORDET—Az., two bars or, on the uppermost three martlets gu. Sir R. DE ROYINGE—Arg., three bars and an orle of martlets gu. Sir N. DE ESTOTEVILLE—Barry arg. and gu., three lioncels sa. Sir R. DE YNGELFELD—Bar-rulée arg. and gu., on a chief or a lion pass. az. Sir W. DE MONECASTRE—Barrulée arg. and gu., on a bend sa. three escallops or. Sir T. DE PONINGE—Barry or and vert, on a bend gu. three mullets arg.

CROSSES.—Sir N. DE WEYLANDE—Arg., on a cross gu. five escallops or. Sir R. BYGOD—Or, on a cross gu. five escallops arg. Sir WM. KIRKETOT—Az., on a cross arg. five escallops gu. Sir WM. DE BERHAM—Sa., a cross between four crescents arg. Sir R. DE BANNEBURY—Arg., a cross patée between four mullets gu. Sir J. RANDOLF—Gu., on a cross arg. five mullets sa. Sir G. DE DUREM—Arg., on a cross gu. five fleurs de lys or. Sir P. DE GEYTONE—Arg., crusillée and three fleurs de lys az. Sir R. DE HOFTOT—Az., a cross patée erm. between four roses erm.

CHEVRONS.—Sir G. Rossel—Or, a chevron az., between three roses gu. Sir J. de Cretinge—Arg., a chevron between three mullets gu. Sir R. Malet—Sa., a chevron between three buckles arg. Sir T. de Anvers—Gu., a chevron between three mullets or. Sir Wm. de Berkeroles—Az., a chevron between three crescents or. Sir W. Bluet—Or, a chevron between three eagles vert. Sir R. de Caple—Arg., a chevron gu. between three torteaux. Sir T. Malet—Sa., a chevron between three buckles arg. Sir R. de Peyvre—Arg., on a chevron az. three fleurs de lys or, No. 125. Sir R. de Boterels—Chequée or and gu., on a chevron az. three horse-shoes arg.

LIONS.—The Earl of Lincoln—Or, a lion rampt. purp., No. 194. The Earl of Arundel—Gu., a lion rampt. or. Sir Henry de Percy—Or, a lion rampt. az., No. 196. Sir John Mowbray—Gu., a lion rampt. arg., No. 193. Sir R. de Sottone (Sutton)—Or, a lion rampt. vert. Sir J. de Nortone—Vert. a lion rampt. or. Sir W. Fauconberg—Arg., a lion rampt. az. Sir G. de Hautville—Sa., crusilée, a lion rampt. arg. Sir — de Mountfort—Arg., crusilée gu., a lion rampt. az. Sir Wm. Maufee—Arg., semée of escallops gu., a lion rampt. sa. Sir J. de Creppinge—Gu., bilietée or, a lion rampt. arg. Sir R. de Asscheby—Arg., a lion rampt. sa. bilietée or. Sir J. de Deyville—Gu., semée de lys, a lion rampt. arg. Arg., within a bordure gu. bezantée, a lion rampt. sa., for Sir T. de Pickering; and, Arg., within an orle of roses gu., a lion rampt. sa., for Sir R. Pirepound, both apparently founded on the shield of the Earl of Cornwall, No. 140, which also is blazoned in this Roll. Sir J. Le Strange—Gu., two lions pass. arg., No. 191. Sir J. de Someri—Or, two lions pass. az. Sir R. de St. Waly—Or, two lions pass. gu. Sir N. Carru (Carew)—Or, three lions pass. sa. Sir J. Giffard—Gu., three lions pass. arg., No. 192. Sir R. le Fitz Payn—Gu., three lions pass. arg., over all a bendlet az. Sir G. de Canvyle—Az., three lions pass arg. In the beautiful chantry of Abbot Thomas Ramryge, at St. Albans, one of the large sculptured Shields is charged with a lion rampant within what may be considered to be an orle of roses—the arms, as I have just shown, assigned in the Roll of Edward II. to Sir R. Pierpound. This Shield, carefully drawn by the engraver himself from the original in the Abbey Church of St. Alban, is represented in No. 373.

No. 373.—At St. Albans.

AUGMENTATION, or AUGMENTATION OF HONOUR, is a term employed to denote an addition to a Shield of arms, specially granted by the Sovereign to commemorate some worthy or illustrious deed, and forming an integral element of the Shield as an hereditary bearing. Such additions may be marshalled as Escutcheons of Pretence, as Cantons, or as Quarterings; or they may assume the character of additional charges. Also, this same term denotes similar additions of Crests, Badges, or any other accessories of Shields.

The Augmentation displayed upon the Ducal Shield of WELLINGTON, a most honourable exception to the prevailing degenerate heraldic feeling of the period in which it was granted to the Great Duke, in characteristic and expressive qualities is second to no other example of its own class and order. This true Augmentation of Honour is the National Device of the British Empire, as it is blazoned in the "Union Jack," charged upon an escutcheon of pretence, and displayed upon the honour point of the Duke's paternal Shield.

An equally significant Augmentation of an earlier date is

No. 374.—Howard, after Flodden.

No. 374A.—The Howard Augmentation.

borne in the shield of the DUKE OF NORFOLK. The Arms of HOWARD before the battle of Flodden were—Gu., a bend between six crosses crosslets fitchée arg. To commemorate the great victory won by him at Flodden Field, Sept. 9, 1513, when JAMES IV. of Scotland was defeated and slain, HENRY VIII. granted to THOMAS HOWARD, Duke of Norfolk, and to his descendants, as an Augmentation of Honour, the Royal Shield of Scotland (No. 138), having a demi-lion only, which is pierced through the mouth with an arrow, to be charged upon the silver bend of his Shield. This Shield is represented in No. 374; and in No. 374A the augmentation is shown on a larger scale.

A small group of additional examples will be sufficient to illustrate this most interesting class of historical Arms, and at the same time will not fail to excite in students a desire very considerably to extend the series through their own inquiries and researches. In memory of the devoted courage and all-important services of JANE LANE, after the disastrous battle of Worcester, CHARLES II. granted as an Augmentation a Canton of England (No. 187 marshalled on a canton), to be added to the hereditary Coat of Lane, which is—per fesse or and az., a chevron gu. between three mullets counterchanged. The Crest of the family of DE LA BERE was conferred by the BLACK PRINCE upon Sir RICHARD DE LA BERE, as a memorial of the good service rendered by that gallant knight on the memorable field of Cressi. This Crest is—out of a crest-coronet a plume of five ostrich feathers per pale arg. and az., the Plantagenet colours—the device (as Mr. LOWER observes) being evidently derived from the Prince's own Badge, and also forming a variety of the "panache," the Crest then held in such high estimation. The heart charged upon the shield of DOUGLAS (see Nos. 156, 157, p. 74) is another remarkable Augmentation. So also is the adoption of the armorial insignia of the CONFESSOR, No. 2, by RICHARD II., and his marshalling it upon his own Royal Shield, impaled to the dexter with the quartered arms of France and England.

English Heraldry has been required to recognise another and a perfectly distinct class of "Augmentations," which consist of additions to the blazonry of a Shield or of additional quarterings or accessories, granted as tokens of Royal favour, for heraldic display, but without any particular "merit" in the receiver, or any special historical significance in themselves. Augmentations of this order may be considered to have been first introduced by RICHARD II., when he granted, "out of his mere grace," to his favourite, ROBERT DE VERE, Earl of OXFORD, Marquess of DUBLIN and Duke of IRELAND, a differenced Coat of St. EDMUND (No. 3)—Az., three crowns or, within a bordure argent, to be quartered with the DE VERE arms as the arms of IRELAND. In the same spirit, RICHARD II. granted, as similar Augmentations, the arms of the CONFESSOR to be marshalled, with Differences, on their Shields by THOMAS and JOHN HOLLAND, Dukes of SURREY and EXETER, and by THOMAS MOWBRAY, Duke of NORFOLK. It will be remembered that it was one of the capital charges against a lineal descendant of this THOMAS MOWBRAY, the Duke of Norfolk, in 1546, that he had assumed, without the special licence of HENRY VIII., the same arms of the CONFESSOR as an augmentation.

By EDWARD IV. similar augmentations, "by grace" and not "for merit," were granted; and by HENRY VIII. the system was carried to excess in the grants made to augment the armorial blazonry of ANNE BOLEYN, and of his English consorts, her successors.

ABATEMENT is a term which was unknown until it made its appearance in certain heraldic writings of the sixteenth century, when it was used to denote such marks or devices as, by the writers in question, were held to be the reverse of honourable Augmentation—Augmentations of dishonour indeed, and tokens of degradation. True Heraldry refuses to recognise all such pretended abatements, for the simple reason that, if they could exist at all, they would be in direct antagonism to its nature, its principles, and its entire course of action. Honourable itself, Heraldry can give expression only to what conveys honour, and it records and commemorates only what is to be honoured and held in esteem. All the devices of true Heraldry, accordingly, in their various degrees, are "Tokens of Honour;" and "Arms," if they attest anything whatever, "are the testimony of some noble action."

The very idea of an heraldic Abatement implies, if not a complete ignorance, certainly a thorough misconception of the character and the office of Heraldry. Even if Heraldry were to attempt to stigmatise what is, and what ought to be esteemed, dishonourable, who would voluntarily accept insignia of disgrace, and charge and display them upon his Shield, and transmit them to his descendants? And the believers in Abatement must hold that Heraldry can exert no compulsory legislative power, which might command a man to blazon his own disgrace, and force him to exhibit and to retain, and also to bequeath, any such blazonry. A belief in heraldic Abatement, however, is by no means singular or rare. A curious example of its existence was recently brought under my notice, in connection with one of the most renowned of the historical devices of English Heraldry. The bear, the badge of the BEAUCHAMPS, Earls of WARWICK, which appears at the feet of the effigy of Earl RICHARD in the Beauchamp chapel at Warwick, in accordance with a special provision to that effect, is "muzzled;" and, wearing a muzzle has this bear been borne, as their Badge, by the successors of the BEAUCHAMPS in the Warwick Earldom, the Earls of the houses of NEVILLE, DUDLEY, RICH, and GREVILLE. But, it would seem that a legend has found credence at Warwick Castle itself, which would associate the muzzle of the bear with some dishonourable action of an Earl of the olden time; and, consequently, it was proposed that at length this Abatement should be removed from the bears still at Warwick! Earl RICHARD DE BEAUCHAMP was not exactly the man to have displayed upon his bear any ensign of dishonour; nor were his son-in-law, the "King-maker," and Queen ELIZABETH's ROBERT DUDLEY, at all more probable subjects for any similar display ; still, it is quite certain that they bore the muzzled bear, as he appears on the seal of the great Earl, No. 448.* That muzzle, doubtless, has its becoming heraldic significance, without in the slightest degree partaking in the assumed character of an Abatement. I hope eventually to be able to trace out conclusively what the muzzle may really imply, and I commend the research to other inquirers : meanwhile, neither at Warwick nor elsewhere is there any such thing as “ Abatement ” in English Heraldry.

* See Frontispiece.

CHAPTER XIV.

CRESTS.

“ On high their glittering crests they toss.”—LORD OF THE ISLES.

“ Then he bound
Her token on his helmet.”—ELAINE.

THE idea of a CREST, of some accessory specially designed to form its crowning adornment, appears inseparable from the existence and use of a Helm. The Warriors and Warrior Divinities of classic antiquity are represented to us, wearing head-pieces richly crested: and, in the Middle Ages, had no other Heraldry ever been devised, assuredly heraldic Crests would have been placed on helms and basinets, and these insignia would have been held in high esteem and honour.

No. 375. — Richard I. No. 376.—Henry de Perci. No. 377.—Henry de Laci.

Accordingly, about the time that Coat-Armour became hereditary, having been reduced to a system and accepted as an independent science, heraldic Crests began to be worn as honourable distinctions of the most exalted dignity by the mediæval chivalry.

Upon the Second Great Seal of RICHARD I. the cylindrical helm of the King appears surmounted by a kind of cap charged with a lion passant, the whole being arched over by a radiated ornament somewhat resembling a displayed fan, as in No. 375. Similar Crests, somewhat modified in their details, are represented in other seals of the same era, and with them the flowing Contoise or Scarf is sometimes associated, as in No. 376, from the seal of

No. 378.—Seal of Alexander de Balliol, A.D. 1292.

Baron HENRY DE PERCI, A.D. 1300. Similar Crests were also placed by the knights of those ages upon the heads of their chargers. The seal of HENRY DE LACI, Earl of LINCOLN, A.D. 1272, shows the Fan-Crest both upon the helm of the Earl, No. 377, and the head of his war-horse. Another equally characteristic example is the Seal of ALEXANDER DE BALLIOL, No. 378, appended to the "General Release" given by JOHN BALLIOL to EDWARD I., 2nd January, 1292: it will be observed that this knight displays the arms of his house, No. 134, upon his Shield, and also, in addition to the Fan-Crest, upon the barding of his charger. Again I am indebted to the kindness and liberality of Mr. Laing for the use of his admirable woodcut of this fine and interesting seal.

The flowing Contoise continued to be attached to helms till about the middle of the fourteenth century; unless, indeed, some veritable "lady's favour" were worn in its stead by knights favoured as was Sir LAUNCELOT, who, on a memorable day—

"Wore, against his wont, upon his helm
A sleeve of scarlet, brodered with great pearls,
Some gentle maiden's gift."

The seal of THOMAS, second Earl of LANCASTER, about A.D. 1320, gives an excellent example both of such figures as were beginning at that early time to supersede the Fan-Crests, and also of the Contoise; No. 379. About this same period the fashion was introduced of fixing two tall spikes, one on each side of the Crest, upon the helm, probably intended in the first instance to display the contoise. These singular spikes may have been derived by the English Heralds from their brethren of Germany, who delighted, as they still delight, in placing upon helms as Crests, or as the accessories of Crests, small banners displayed from staves set erect and surmounted by spear-heads. In German Heraldry also Crests are very frequently placed between tall upright horns or trumpets : and, sometimes, upon a German helm the Crest stands between two elephant's trunks, placed in the same erect position, and, like the trumpets, so adjusted as to have the general aspect of the curved outline of a classic lyre. The

No. 379.—Helm of Thomas, second Earl of Lancaster.

No. 380.—Helm and Crest of Sir
Geoffrey Luterell : A.D. 1345.

No. 381.—Seal of Sir Robert de Marny : A.D. 1366.

helm of Sir GEOFFREY LUTERELL, A.D. 1345, No. 380, drawn from a celebrated illumination, between the tall spikes has a late example of the Fan-Crest ; and it exemplifies the practice sometimes adopted of charging armorial insignia upon Crests of this fan form. The Arms of Luterell—Or, a bend and six martlets sa.—were borne by Sir GEOFFREY thus differenced (E. 2)—Az., a bend and six martlets arg. A pair of lofty upright wings were held in much esteem in the Heraldry of both England and Scotland, to form the accessories of Crests. The Seal of Sir ROBERT DE MARNY, A.D. 1366, No. 381, shows his armorial shield—Gu., a lion rampant guardant arg., suspended from a tree, between two crested helms, the crest in both cases being a winged chapeau, having the wings very tall and very slender.

From the earliest times, Crests have occasionally been identical with the principal charge in the Shield of Arms, or they have repeated the principal charge with some slight modification of attitude or accessory: but, more generally, Crests have been altogether distinct. The Dragon and the Wyvern, the latter well exemplified in No. 315, are amongst the earliest figures that were borne as Crests in England. Other early Figure-Crests are the Lion, crowned and assumed for the first time by an English Sovereign by EDWARD III.; and the Eagle, borne by the same Prince. Various devices and figures are found gradually to have been added to these earliest Crests. The graceful and peculiarly appropriate Panache soon joined them, with the heads of various animals and other creatures: and, as the fourteenth century advances, the Crest Coronet, No. 232, the Crest-Wreath, No. 233, and the Chapeau, No. 224, assume their places in connection with Crests; and the Mantling falls in rich folds from them, covering the back of the Helm. In the succeeding century, with Helms less dignified in form, but more elaborately enriched, and with strangely fantastic Mantlings, Crests become considerably larger in their proportions; and they often are extravagant in their character, devices constantly being assumed and borne as Crests, which are no less inconsistent with true heraldic feeling, than with the peculiar conditions and the proper qualities of true heraldic Crests. The Crest of the Duke of HAMILTON, No. 301, is far from being one of the most inconsistent devices that were intended to be worn upon helms. And, as it is scarcely necessary for me to add, every really consistent Crest must be such a figure or device as might be actually worn upon his helm, by a mediæval knight, with dignity and with a happy effect.

Early examples of Panache-Crests exist in considerable numbers, and they show much variety of treatment. No. 285, already given at page 143, shows a Panache of several heights of feathers, the general outline having an oval contour. In No. 283, from the Seal of EDWARD DE COURTENAY, Earl of DEVON, A.D. 1372, there are three heights of feathers, and the outline has a square form. Again, the

No. 382.—Seal of William de Wyndesor.

Seal of WILLIAM LE LATIMER, A.D. 1415, gives the peculiar Panache, with the no less peculiar variety of mantling, shown in No. 284. A Panache of ample proportions, and of exceedingly graceful form, is represented in the Seal of WILLIAM DE WYNDESOR, A.D. 1381. The comparatively small size of the armorial Shield, as it generally appears when introduced into the composition of Seals in the fourteenth century, is shown in a striking manner in this same example, No. 382, which in the woodcut is slightly enlarged, in order to show the device more clearly: the arms are—gu., a saltire or. Other fine examples of Panache-Crests may be seen in the effigies of Sir RICHARD DE PEMBRIDGE.

K.G., A.D. 1375, in Hereford Cathedral ; of Sir ROBERT DE MARMION, A.D. 1400, at Tanfield, Yorkshire ; and of Sir THOMAS ARDERNE, about the same date, at Elford, in Staffordshire. The very fine effigy of Sir EDWARD DE THORPE, A.D. 1418, at Ashwelthorpe, in Norfolk, has a helm of rare beauty of form, with a rich mantling, and a most graceful Panache of peacock's feathers : and peacock's feathers also form the Panache of Lord FERRERS of CHARTLEY, in his Brass, A.D. 1425, at Merevale, in Warwickshire. And, once more, upon the Seal of THOMAS DE HATFIELD, Bishop of Durham, A.D. 1345, the Panache rises from the episcopal mitre, after the same manner as it does in No. 383 from a Coronet.

No. 383.—Crest of Sir Richard Grey, K.G. ; A.D. 1420.

Another episcopal Seal, that of Bishop HENRY LE DESPENCER, No. 351, shows a Shield of small size when compared with the helm and crest, the latter being the favourite device of a gryphon's head between two tall upright wings. The Seals of the FITZALANS, Earls of Arundel, and the Seal of JOHN TIPTOFT, Earl of Worcester, may be specified as displaying fine examples of the same Crest. With them may be grouped the Crest of Sir RICHARD GREY, K.G., Lord Grey of Codnor, A.D. 1420—a peacock's head and neck, between two wings erect, the feathers az., and their pens (quills) arg., No. 383, from the Garter-Plate at Windsor. This Crest rises from such a Crest-Coronet as was borne on their helms by noblemen in the time of HENRY V.

The use of the Chapeau, or Cap of Estate, instead of a Crest-Coronet, to support a Crest upon a helm, I have already illustrated with Nos. 198 and 199, severally the Lion-Crests of the BLACK PRINCE and of his son

RICHARD II. Like No. 199, No. 384 is from one of the unrivalled series of helms sculptured in Westminster Hall, with the Crest and Ostrich-feather Badge of King RICHARD II. In both of these examples the adjustment of the Mantling is shown. Two famous Lion-Crests are those borne by the great families of HOWARD and PERCY, severally Dukes of Norfolk and Northumberland. The HOWARD lion, originally granted by RICHARD II. to THOMAS MOWBRAY, Earl Marshal, and now borne by the Duke of NORFOLK, as his representative, is a lion statant guardant, his tail extended or, and ducally gorged arg.: the PERCY lion is statant, his tail extended or: each lion stands upon a chapeau. The Lion-Crest of the BLACK PRINCE, being charged with the silver Label (which he may be said to wear after the fashion of a collar), exemplifies the prevailing practice of differencing Crests with marks of Cadency. Crests admit

No. 384.
Helm, Crest, Mantling, and Badge of Richard II., from Westminster Hall.

every variety of Difference: and Mantlings also are frequently differenced with small charges, or with badges; as in the Garter-plate of Sir JOHN BEAUMONT, K.G., and in the Brass at Little Easton, Essex, to Sir HENRY BOURCHIER, K.G., Earl of ESSEX.

The Crest-Wreath first appears about the middle of the fourteenth century. The earliest example to which I can refer is represented in the Brass to Sir HUGH HASTINGS, at Elsyng, in Norfolk, A.D. 1347. In this most remarkable engraven memorial, the finial of the principal canopy is surmounted by a helm with mantling, wreath, and the crest of HASTINGS—a bull's head sable; No. 385. In the effigy of Sir R. DE PEMBRIDGE, K.G., already noticed, the date of which is 1375, the crest is united to the great helm that supports the head of the knight by a wreath formed of a band of four-leaved flowers. A little later, A.D. 1384, at Southacre, in Norfolk, the Brass of Sir JOHN HARSYCK has a Crest-Wreath formed of two rolls, probably of silk, twisted as in No. 386. In the second half of the next century, amongst many good examples of Crest-Wreaths I select as typical specimens those which appear in the Brasses to Sir WILLIAM VERNON, A.D. 1467, at Tong, in Shropshire, No.

No. 385.—Crested Helm of Sir Hugh Hastings; A.D. 1347.—

No. 386, 387, and 388.—Crest-Wreaths.

386; and to Sir ROBERT HARCOURT, K.G., No. 387, at Staunton Harcourt, Oxfordshire.

The Crest-Wreath in the form shown in the last examples, and now almost universally used in representations of such Crests as are without the Crest-Coronet and the Chapeau, may fairly be considered to have been derived from the rich ornamentation, generally, as it would seem, formed of costly textile fabrics, if not executed in jewelled or enamelled goldsmith's work, that was frequently wreathed about knightly basinets. These wreath-like ornaments are represented in numerous effigies both sculptured and engraven; and they are shown to have been worn either flat, as in No. 388, or wrought to high relief, as in No. 389. These two examples are severally from the effigies of a knight in Tewkesbury Abbey Church, about A.D. 1365, and of Sir HUMPHREY STAFFORD, A.D. 1450, at Bromsgrove, in Worcestershire. The enamelled effigy of Earl WILLIAM DE VALENCE, A.D. 1296, at Westminster, has a wreath of delicate workmanship in relief, which once was set with real or imitative jewels.

For many years after their first appearance, heraldic Crests were regarded as insignia of great dignity and exalted estate; and it was not till a considerably later period that the right to bear a Crest was considered to be identified with the right to bear arms. Still later, when they were granted with Coat Armour to corporate bodies, communities, and institutions, Crests altogether lost their original significance; and they became Badges in everything except the habit of placing them, with their accessories of Wreath or Crest-Coronet, of Chapeau and Mantling, upon representations of helms. In our own times, unless they have been inherited from the old Crest-wearing days, or are now borne by personages at the lowest of knightly rank, Crests might generally be superseded by Badges, or borne as Badges by the simple omission of their distinctive accessories, with decided advantage to our Heraldry.

No. 389.—Basinet with Crest-Wreath, Effigy of Sir Humphrey Stafford, A.D. 1450.

When they were actually worn, Crests were undoubtedly constructed of some very light materials. It is probable that cuir bouilli (boiled leather), the decorative capabilities of which were so well understood by mediæval artists, was generally employed.

It has been sometimes held that Crests are personal bearings only; and, therefore, not hereditary, though capable of being bequeathed or granted by their possessors. This theory is not sustained by early or general usage; and, accordingly, Crests must be pronounced to be hereditary, precisely on the same conditions as Coat Armour.

It is evident that, as one person may inherit, and therefore may quarter two or more Coats of Arms, so the same person may claim to bear two or more Crests by a similar right of inheritance. When Crests were worn, such a personage might have chosen any one of his Crests, or worn them all on different occasions, it being obviously impossible for him to wear more than one Crest upon his helm at one and the same time. At the present day, several Crests, each with its own helm and mantling, are occasionally represented above a quartered Shield of arms: but, in England, by strict heraldic rule, two (or more than two) Crests can be borne by one individual, only when he has obtained the Royal licence to bear and use the Surname and Arms of another family in addition to those of his own family, or, by a special grant from the Crown.

CHAPTER XV

BADGES.

“Might I but know thee by thy household Badge.”

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VI., Part 2.

A BADGE, like a Coat of Arms, is an armorial ensign that is complete in itself, and possesses a definite signification of its own. In use with a decided heraldic significance long before the adoption of a systematic Heraldry, Badges have always held a conspicuous position in the estimation of Heralds. A Badge resembles any single charge in Heraldry, in being a figure or device that is assumed as the distinctive cognisance of a particular individual or family: but, unlike a charge, it is borne by itself, without any Shield, and also without any accompanying accessory, with the exception, in some instances, of a Motto (See “Motto,” p. 139). It will be evident that a Badge may be the very same figure or device as a Crest; but, it must be remembered that a Badge always differs from a Crest, in being altogether without crest-wreath or coronet, in consequence of having no connection whatever with the knightly helm.

After the establishment of a true Heraldry, Badges were generally used to commemorate remarkable exploits, or in reference either to some family or feudal alliance, or to indicate some territorial rights or pretensions. Very many Badges are allusive, and consequently they are Rebuses (see "Rebus," p. 148). Some are taken from the charges of the bearer's Shield, or they have a more or less direct reference to those charges. Some trace of Marshalling or of feudal Difference may constantly be observed in Badges ; and even where the motive for the selection of certain devices has not been discovered, it may fairly be assumed that a good heraldic motive still exists, although it has become obscured or been forgotten. It was not uncommon for the same personage or family to use more than one Badge ; and, on the other hand, two or more Badges were often borne in combination, to form a single compound device, as in Nos. 235 and 270. The ragged staff, in like manner, No. 294, and the bear, both of them Badges of the BEAUCHAMPS, Earls of WARWICK, were sometimes united to form a single Badge, and by the successors of that great family the "bear and ragged staff" were generally borne as a single device. (See No. 448, and p. 321.)

Two distinct classes of Badges were in general use in the fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth centuries. Those of the first class, well known as the insignia of certain eminent personages and powerful houses, were borne by all the followers, retainers, dependants, and partisans of those personages and houses : and they were so borne by them, and they were used by their owners for every variety of decorative purpose, because they were known and understood ; and, consequently, because the presence of these Badges would cause all persons and objects bearing them to be readily and certainly distinguished. By means of these most useful devices a wide and comprehensive range was given to the action and the influence of true Heraldry, without infringing in the slightest degree upon the lofty and almost sacred exclusiveness of the Coat Armour of a noble or a gentle house. In the words which SHAKESPEARE teaches CLIFFORD to address to WARWICK, " Might I but know thee by thy household badge!" it is implied that all the followers of Warwick were well known by his "household Badge," which was displayed by them all, while some other insignia were worn by the great Earl upon his own person. Had it pleased him so to do, the "King-Maker," with all honourable consistency, might have worn his own "household badge," in common with the members of his own household; but his "arms," or such a Badge as he might elect to assume as his own personal device, might be borne by none beside himself.

Mr. Lower has remarked ("Curiosities of Heraldry," p. 145) that "something analogous to the fashion" of embroidering the household Badges of their lords "upon the sleeves or breasts" of the dependants of great families in the olden times, "is retained in the Crest which adorns the buttons of our domestic servants." The accomplished writer might have added that, in thus employing Crests to discharge Badge-duties, we are content to indulge a love for heraldic display without observing becoming heraldic distinctions. Crested livery buttons are heraldic anomalies under all circumstances—even the head of a house himself, if he were a Herald, would not display his Crest, as a Crest, upon buttons to be used exclusively by himself. Crests are to be borne on helms, or represented as being borne on helms: Badges are decorative insignia, and fulfil with consistent significance their own distinct and appropriate functions.

Badges of the second class were devices that were borne exclusively by the exalted personages who were pleased to assume them, often for temporary use only, and generally with some subtle or latent significance, which had been studiously rendered difficult to be detected, and dubious in its application.

These Badges, thus displayed rather to effect disguise or to excite curiosity than to secure recognition, must be regarded for the most part as the expressions of heraldic revelry—as the fantasies and eccentricities of an age, which loved to combine quaint conceits and symbolical allusions with the display of gorgeous magnificence. Accordingly, Badges of this order are found generally to have been assumed on the occasion of the jousts or Hastiludes, the masques, and other pageants that in feudal times were celebrated with so much of elaborate and brilliant splendour.

The adoption of Badges of this peculiar character is exactly in keeping with the sentiment which prompted men of exalted rank and eminent distinction to appear in public, on occasions of high festivity, bearing the arms of some friend, kinsman, or ally, instead of their own. A mark of especial favour and of peculiar distinction would be conferred, when a Sovereign or a Prince thus would display upon his own person the armoury of some honoured subject or comrade. EDWARD III. delighted thus to honour the most distinguished cavaliers of his chivalrous Court. For example, in or about the year 1347, royal Hastiludes were celebrated at Lichfield with great splendour, the jousts consisting of the KING and seventeen Knights, and the Earl of LANCASTER and thirteen Knights. A conspicuous part was taken in these festivities by the King's daughter ISABELLE, afterwards Countess of BEDFORD, and by six Ladies of high rank, with twenty-one other Ladies, who all wore blue dresses and white hoods of the same materials as well as the same colours as the robes of the Knights, together with various masks or vizors. On this occasion, the KING himself over his armour wore a surcoat with the Arms of Sir THOMAS DE BRADESTONE. These Arms in a Roll of EDWARD III. are blazoned as—arg., on a canton gu. a rose or (see Archæologia, xxxi., pp. 40 and 118). On another occasion, during Hastiludes at Canterbury, EDWARD III. "is said to have given eight harnesses, worked with the arms of Sir STEPHEN DE COSYNTON (az., three roses arg.), to the PRINCE OF WALES, the Earl of LANCASTER, and six other Knights." In the same spirit, RICHARD DE BEAUCHAMP, Earl of WARWICK, at a great festival of arms held at Calais under his presidency, on the first day entered the lists decorated with the arms of his ancestor the Lord TONEY: on the second day, he wore the arms of Hanslap: and, on the third day, "he appeared as the Earl of WARWICK, quartering Beauchamp, Guy, Hanslap, and Toney, on his trappings; his vizor open, and the chaplet on his helm enriched with pearls and precious stones." In such times, Badges of curious device and occult signification could not fail to enjoy a popularity, not the less decided because of the restricted use and exclusive character of the Badges themselves.

EXAMPLES OF BADGES, such as are distinctive, and consequently of the class that I have first described. The Badges of PERCY are a silver crescent and a double manacle: of HOWARD, a white lion: PELHAM, a buckle: DOUGLAS, a red heart: SCROPE, a Cornish chough: CLINTON, a golden mullet: TALBOT, a hound: BOHUN, a white swan: HUNGERFORD, a sickle: PEVEREL, a garb. The various "Knots," described and illustrated in Chapter X., Nos. 219, 235, 263, 270, 274, 304, and 313, are Badges. The bear and ragged staff of the BEAUCHAMPS, and, after them, of the NEVILLES and DUDLEYS, I have already noticed. Seals frequently have Badges introduced upon them, in very early times, by themselves, the Badge in each case constituting the device of the Seal (see p. 199). The Secretum or private Seal of ROBERT BRUCE, Earl of CARRICK, the father of the King, appended to the homage-deed extorted by EDWARD I. from the Scottish nobles, is a good example,

No. 390: this is another of Mr. Laing's beautiful woodcuts. Badges also constantly appear upon Seals in association with Shields of arms. Thus, a Seal of one of the BERKELEYS, A.D. 1430, has a mermaid on each side of an armorial shield. Two other examples of this kind I have already given: No. 318, the Seal of JOAN DE BARRE, which is charged with the castle and lion of Castile and Leon, as Badges: and No. 321, the Seal of OLIVER DE

No. 390.

Secretum of Robert Bruce,
Earl of Carrick; A.D. 1296.

No. 391.

Seal of Sir Walter de Hungerford, K.G.,
A.D. 1425.

BOHUN, charged, about the Shield, with the Bohun Swan. On his Seal, No. 391, Sir WALTER DE HUNGERFORD, K.G., Lord of HEYTESBURY and HOMET (the latter a Norman barony), displays his own Badge, the sickle, in happy alliance with the garb of Peverel (borne by him in right of his wife, CATHERINE, daughter and co-heir of THOMAS PEVEREL), to form his Crest. The Crest, it will be observed, in No. 391, is a garb between two sickles. The Shield of Hungerford only—sa. two bars arg., and in chief three plates, is also placed between two sickles. Two banners, denoting important alliances, complete the Heraldry of this remarkable composition: the banner to the dexter, for Heytesbury, bears—per pale indented gu. and vert., a chevron or; and that to the sinister, for Hussy—barry of six erm. and gu. Lord HUNGERFORD died in 1449, and was succeeded by his eldest surviving son, Sir ROBERT DE HUNGERFORD. The Seal of this Sir Robert, used by him during the lifetime of his father, precisely the same in its heraldic composition as his father's Seal, is remarkable from having each of its four sickles differenced with an ermine-spot upon the blade, to mark Cadency; and also, with the same motive, it shows that a label of three points was charged upon the Shield, and upon each of the two banners: No. 392.

No. 392.—Seal of Sir Robert de Hungerford: before A.D. 1449.

Through an alliance with the Hungerfords, sickles were borne, as one of their Badges, by the great family of COURTENAY. They appear, with a dolphin, a tau-cross, and this same tau-cross having a bell attached to it, as in No. 393, sculptured on the fine heraldic chimney-piece, the work of Bishop PETER DE COURTENAY (died in 1492), now in the hall of the Episcopal Palace at Exeter.

The BADGES of our early Heraldry are comparatively but little understood. They invite the particular attention of students, both from their own special interest, and the light they are qualified to throw upon the personal history of the English people, and also from their peculiar applicability for use by ourselves at the present day. Indeed, at this

No. 393.
A Courtenay
Badge, at Exeter.

time when the revival of true Heraldry is in the act of being accomplished with complete success, it appears to be peculiarly desirable that Badges should be brought into general use. It is not enough for us to revive our old English Heraldry as once in the olden time it flourished in England, and to rest content with such a revival: but we must go on to adapt our revived Heraldry, in its own spirit and in full sympathy with its genuine feeling, to conditions of our age and of the state of things now in existence. And very much may be done to effect this by the adoption of Badges, as our favourite and most expressive heraldic insignia, both in connection with Coat Armour and for independent display. Unlike Crests, which must necessarily be associated with helms and the wearers of helms, and consequently have both a military and a mediæval character, Badges are equally appropriate for use by Ladies, as well as by men of every profession, and they belong alike to every age and period.

ROYAL BADGES.—I conclude this chapter with a concise list of the more important of the Badges that have been borne by the Sovereigns and Princes of England; and with some general remarks upon the famous Badge of the Ostrich Feathers, now considered to be exclusively the Ensign of the PRINCES OF WALES.

The Planta-genista, or Broom-plant, No. 21, is well known as an English Royal Badge, from the surname derived from it for one of the most remarkable of the Royal Houses that ever have flourished in Europe.

As well known are the Rose, Thistle, and Shamrock, severally the Badges of the three realms of the United Kingdom of ENGLAND, SCOTLAND, and IRELAND. A golden Rose stalked proper was a badge of EDWARD I.: and from it apparently were derived, but by what process it is unknown, the White Rose of YORK, the Red Rose of LANCASTER, and the White and Red Rose of the House of TUDOR.

WILLIAM RUFUS: A Flower of five foils.

HENRY I.: A Flower of eight foils.

STEPHEN: A Flower of seven foils: a Sagittarius.

HENRY II.: The Planta-genista: an Escarbuncle: a Sword and Olive-Branch.

RICHARD I.: A Star of thirteen rays and a Crescent: a Star issuing from a Crescent: a Mailed Arm grasping a broken Lance, with the Motto—"Christo Duce."

JOHN and HENRY III.: A Star issuing from a Crescent.

EDWARD I.: An heraldic Rose or, stalked ppr.

EDWARD II.: A Castle of Castile.

EDWARD III.: A Fleur de lys: a Sword: a Falcon: a Gryphon: the Stock of a Tree: Rays issuing from a Cloud.

RICHARD II.: A White Hart lodged: the Stock of a Tree: a White Falcon: the Sun in splendour: the Sun clouded.

HENRY IV.: The Monogram SS: a crowned Eagle: an Eagle displayed: a White Swan: a Red Rose: a Columbine Flower: a Fox's Tail: a crowned

- Panther: the Stock of a Tree: a Crescent.* His QUEEN, JOAN OF NAVARRE: An Ermine, or Gennet.
- HENRY V.: A Fire-beacon: a White Swan gorged and chained: a chained Antelope.
- HENRY VI.: Two Ostrich Feathers in Saltire: a chained Antelope: a Panther.
- EDWARD IV.: A White Rose en Soleil: a White Wolf and White Lion: a White Hart: a Black Dragon and Black Bull: a Falcon and Fetter-lock: the Sun in splendour.
- HENRY VII.: A Rose of York and Lancaster, a Portcullis and a Fleur de lys, all of them crowned: a Red Dragon: a White Greyhound: a Hawthorn Bush and Crown, with the cypher H.R.
- HENRY VIII.: The same, without the Hawthorn Bush, and with a White Cock. His QUEENS: CATHERINE OF ARRAGON—A Rose, Pomegranate, and Sheaf of Arrows. ANNE BOLEYN—A Crowned Falcon, holding a Sceptre. JANE SEYMOUR—A Phoenix rising from a Castle, between two Tudor Roses. CATHERINE PARR—A Maiden's Head crowned, rising from a large Tudor Rose.
- EDWARD VI.: A Tudor Rose: the Sun in splendour.
- MARY: A Tudor Rose impaling a Pomegranate—also impaling a sheaf of Arrows, ensigned with a Crown, and surrounded with rays: a Pomegranate.
- ELIZABETH: A Tudor Rose with the motto, "Rosa sine Spina" (a Rose without a Thorn): a Crowned Falcon and Sceptre. She used as her own motto—"Semper Eadem" (Always the same).
- JAMES I.: A Thistle: a Thistle and Rose dimidiated and crowned, No. 308, with the motto—"Beati Pacifici" (Blessed are the peacemakers).
- CHARLES I., CHARLES II., JAMES II.: The same Badge as JAMES I., without his motto.

ANNE: A Rose-Branch and a Thistle growing from one branch.

From this time personal Badges ceased to be borne by English Sovereigns.

The Ostrich Feather Badge. The popular tradition, that the famous Badge of the Ostrich Feathers was won from the blind KING OF BOHEMIA at Cressi by the BLACK PRINCE, and by him afterwards borne as an heraldic trophy, is not supported by any contemporary authority. The earliest writer by whom the tradition itself is recorded is CAMDEN (A.D. 1614), and his statement is confirmed by no known historical evidence of a date earlier than his own work. As Sir N. HARRIS NICHOLAS has shown in a most able paper in the Archæologia (vol. xxxi., pp. 350—384), the first time the Feathers are mentioned in any record is in a document, the date of which must have been after 1369, and which contains lists of plate belonging to the King himself, and also to Queen PHILIPPA. It is particularly to be observed, that all the pieces of plate specified in this roll as the personal property of the Queen, if marked with any device at all, are marked with her own initial, or with some heraldic insignia that have a direct reference to herself. One of these pieces of plate is described as “a large dish for the alms of the Queen, of silver gilt, and enamelled at the bottom with a black escutcheon with Ostrich Feathers—eym in fund vno scuē nigro cum pennis de ostrich.” And these “Ostrich Feathers,” thus blazoned on a sable field upon the silver alms-dish of Queen PHILIPPA, Sir N. H. Nicholas believed to have been borne by the Queen as a daughter of the House of HAINAULT; and he suggested that these same “Ostrich Feathers” might possibly have been assumed by the Counts of the Province of Hainault from the Comté of Ostrevant, which formed the appanage of their eldest sons.

At the first, either a single Feather was borne, the quill generally transfixing an escroll, as in No. 394, from the monument of Prince ARTHUR TUDOR, in Worcester Cathedral; or, two Feathers were placed side by side, as they also appear upon the same monument. In Seals, or when marshalled with a Shield of Arms, two Feathers are seen to have been placed after the manner of Supporters, one on each side of the composition: in such examples the tips of the Feathers droop severally to the dexter and sinister: in all the early examples also the Feathers droop in the same manner, or they incline slightly towards the spectator. Three Feathers were first grouped together by

No. 395.

At Peterborough Cathedral.

No. 394.

At Worcester Cathedral.

No. 396.

At Peterborough Cathedral.

ARTHUR TUDOR, PRINCE OF WALES, eldest son of HENRY VII., as in Nos. 395 and 396, from Peterborough Cathedral; or with an escroll, as in No. 397, from a miserere in the fine and interesting church at Ludlow. The plume of three Feathers appears to have been encircled with a coronet, for the first time, by Prince EDWARD, afterwards EDWARD VI., but who never was PRINCE OF WALES: No. 398, carved very boldly over the entrance gateway to the Deanery at Peterborough, is a good early example. In No. 399 I give a representation of another early plume of three Ostrich Feathers, as they are carved, with an escroll in place of a coronet, upon the Chantry of Abbot RAMRYGE in the Abbey Church at St. Alban's : and again, in No. 400, from the head of a window near the east end of the choir, on the south side, in Exeter Cathedral, the three Feathers are charged upon a Shield per pale azure and gules, and this Shield is on a roundle.

No. 397.—In Ludlow Church.

No. 398.—The Deanery, Peterborough.

No. 399.—In the Abbey Church of St. Alban.

No. 400.—In Exeter Cathedral.

The Ostrich Feathers were borne, as a Badge with his Shield of Arms, upon one Seal of EDWARD III. himself: they were used, as an heraldic device, about the year 1370, by PHILIPPA, his Queen: they appear on some, but not on all, the Seals of the BLACK PRINCE, and they are omitted from some of his Seals after the battle of Cressi (A.D. 1346):

and they were also borne, generally with some slight difference, marking Cadency, in all probability by all the other sons of EDWARD III.—certainly by JOHN of Ghent, Duke of LANCASTER, and by THOMAS of Woodstock, Duke of GLOUCESTER. They were adopted by RICHARD II., and placed on either side of his crested Helm in the heraldic sculpture of Westminster Hall, as appears in two of these beautiful examples, Nos. 199 and 384: by this Prince the Ostrich Feathers were placed on his first Royal Seal, and they were habitually used for decoration and heraldic display; and they also were formally granted by him, as a mark of especial favour, to be borne as an Augmentation of the highest honour, to his cousin THOMAS MOWBRAY, Duke of NORFOLK. The Ostrich Feathers were borne, in like manner, by the succeeding Princes, both LANCASTRIAN and YORKIST: by at least two of the BEAUFORTS: by the Princes of the House of TUDOR: and by their successors the STUARTS. Thus, it is certain that the Ostrich Feathers were held to be a Royal Badge, from the time of their first appearance in the Heraldry of England about the middle of the fourteenth century; and that in that character they were adopted and borne by the successive Sovereigns, and by the Princes, sometimes also by the Princesses (as in the instance of a Seal of MARGARET BEAUFORT, the mother of HENRY VII.), of the Royal Houses, without any other distinction than some slight mark of Cadency, and without the slightest trace of any peculiar association with any one member of the Royal Family. From the time of the accession of the House of Stuart to the Crown of the United Kingdom, however, the coroneted plume of three Ostrich Feathers appears to have been regarded, as it is at this present day, as the special Badge of the PRINCES OF WALES.

In accordance with the express provision of his will two armorial Shields are displayed upon the monument of the BLACK PRINCE in Canterbury Cathedral, which Shields the Prince himself distinguishes as his Shields “for War” and “for Peace;” the former charged with his quartered arms of France and England differenced with his silver Label, No. 337; and the latter, sable, charged with three Ostrich Feathers argent, their quills passing through scrolls bearing the Motto, “Ich Dien,” No. 401. The same motto is placed over each of the Shields that are charged with the Feathers, as in No. 401: and over each Shield charged with the quartered arms (there are on each side of the tomb

No. 401.—Shield “for Peace” of the Black Prince.

six Shields, three of the Arms, and three of the Feathers, alternately) is the other motto of the Prince, “Houmout.” In his will, the BLACK PRINCE also desired that a “black Pennon with Ostrich Feathers” should be displayed at his Funeral; and he further appointed that his Chapel in Canterbury Cathedral should be adorned in various places with his Arms, and “likewise with our Badge of Ostrich Feathers—noz bages dez plumes d’ostruce.”

The will of the BLACK PRINCE proves the Feathers to have been a Badge, and not either a Crest or the ensign of a Shield of Arms, since twice he expressly calls them “our Badge:" and it also is directly opposed to the traditional warlike origin and military character of the Feathers, as a Badge of the BLACK PRINCE, for it particularly specifies the peaceful significance of this Badge, and distinguishes it from the insignia that were worn and displayed by the Prince when he was equipped for war. The Mottoes "Ich Dien" and "Houmout" are old German, and they signify, "I serve," and "magnanimous." It has been suggested by Mr. Planché, that "Houmout" is Flemish, and that the three words really form a single Motto, signifying, "Magnanimous, I serve," that is, "I obey the dictates of magnanimity." Archæologia, xxxii. 69.

Upon a very remarkable Seal, used by HENRY IV. a short time before his accession, the shield with helm and crest are placed between two tall Feathers, about each of which is entwined a Garter charged with his favourite and significant Motto—the word SOVEREYGNE, as in No. 402. His father, Prince JOHN OF GHENT, placed a chain upon the quills of his Feathers, as in the very curious boss in the cloisters at Canterbury. The uncle of HENRY IV., THOMAS, Duke of GLOUCESTER, on one of his Seals, differenced his two Feathers with Garters (probably of the Order) displayed along their quills, as in No. 403. And, about A.D. 1440, JOHN BEAUFORT, K.G., Duke of SOMERSET, on his Garter-plate placed two Ostrich Feathers erect, their quills componée argent and azure, and fixed in golden scrolls; No. 404. In the Harleian MS. 304, f. 12, it is stated that the Ostrich Feather of silver, the pen thus componée argent and azure, "is the Duke of Somerset's:" also that the "Feather silver, with the pen gold, is the King's: the Ostrich Feather, pen and all silver, is the Prince's: and the Ostrich Feather gold, the pen ermine, is the Duke of Lancaster's."

The Shield charged with three Ostrich Feathers, No.

401, was borne by Prince JOHN OF GHENT ; and it appears on the splendid Great Seal of HENRY IV., between the Shields of the Duchy of CORNWALL and the Earldom of CHESTER. HUMPHREY, Duke of GLOUCESTER, is also recorded to have borne this same Feather Shield.

In the Vaulting of the ceiling over the steps leading to the Hall at Christchurch, Oxford, the Ostrich Plume Badge is carved within a Garter of the Order : and, again, the

No. 402.—From the Seal of King Henry IV.

No. 403.—From the Seal of Thomas, Duke of Gloucester.

No. 404. — From the Garter-Plate of John Beaufort, K.G.

Badge is represented after the same manner, environed with the Garter, in the beautiful binding of a copy of the Bible, now in the possession of Robert Skere, Esq., of Rubislaw, which is reputed to have been used by CHARLES I. in his last moments.

The Ostrich Feathers are repeatedly mentioned in early documents ; and they are shown to have been constantly used for various decorative purposes, always evidently with an heraldic motive and feeling, by the same Royal personages who blazoned them on their Seals, and displayed them elsewhere as their armorial insignia. A well-known example of a diaper of White Ostrich Feathers on a field per pale argent and vert, is preserved in the stained glass now in the great north window of the transept of Canterbury Cathedral

CHAPTER XVI

SUPPORTERS

“Standing by the Shield
In silence.”—IDYLLS OF THE KINGS.

A SUPPORTER is a figure, sometimes of an angel, frequently of a human being, but more generally of some animal, bird, or imaginary creature, so placed in connection with a Shield of Arms as to appear to be protecting and supporting it. In English Heraldry a single Supporter is of comparatively rare occurrence, but examples appear more frequently in the Heraldry of Scotland. In early examples, when two Supporters appear, they are in most cases alike : but, more recently (except in the Heraldry of France), the two figures are generally quite distinct the one from the other, the earlier usage of having the two Supporters alike being comparatively rare. The modern prevailing practice in England is happily exemplified in the well-known instance of the present Royal Supporters, the Lion and the Unicorn.

Supporters, which admit all Marks of Cadency and all Differences, are considered to have been introduced into the Heraldry of England during the reign of EDWARD III. ; but they may with greater accuracy be assigned to the middle of the fifteenth century, than to the second half of the fourteenth. As armorial insignia of a very high rank, Supporters are granted in England only by the express command of the Sovereign. In Scotland, where they occur more frequently than in the Heraldry of the South of the Tweed, the "Lord Lyon" has power to grant Supporters: originally by the Scottish Heralds these accessories of Shields were entitled "Bearers."

Supporters are now borne, by right, by all Peers of the Realm, by Knights of the Garter, Knights Grand Crosses of the Bath, Knights Grand Commanders of the Star of India, by Nova Scotia Baronets, and by Chiefs of Scottish Clans. They are conceded, with due difference, to all Sons of Peers who, by courtesy, bear titles of Peerage. They appear also borne with the arms of many persons now not of knightly rank, who have inherited supporters from illustrious ancestors.

Supporters probably owe their origin rather to several concurrent circumstances, than to any one particular circumstance. The mere fact of a Knight carrying his own armorial Shield, or his Esquire bearing it beside him, would suggest the general idea of some supporting figure in connection with a representation of that Shield. The act of carrying a Banner of Arms, in like manner, would suggest a representation of a "Supporter" for a Shield of Arms. To early Seals, however, Heraldry is in an especial degree indebted for the development of the idea of Supporters, and for bringing it into a definite form. Again, the prevalent use of Badges in the fourteenth century, and in the fifteenth also, would necessarily exercise a powerful influence in the same direction; and would lead Heralds to associate with Shields of Arms certain other figures which, while in themselves distinct and independent, were closely allied with certain Shields of Arms. The prototypes of true Supporters, indeed, as they appear on Seals, are Badges.

An Effigy represented upon a Seal, as in No. 405, the Seal of DEVORGUILLA CRAWFORD, about A.D. 1290, from LAING'S Volume : or in Nos. 316, 317, would be even more than a suggestion of a Supporter. The same may be said, when some figure, almost certainly a Badge, was introduced into the composition of a Seal, holding or supporting a Shield by its guige, as in No. 203 ; or when a Shield, or two or more Shields, were charged upon some figure, as in No. 204 : both of these examples, indeed, might be regarded as illustrations of the first adoption of single Supporters.

The introduction of angelic figures, which might have the appearance of acting as "Guardian Angels," in their care of Shields of Arms, was in accordance with the feeling of the early days of English Heraldry ; and, while it took a part in leading the way to the systematic use of regular Supporters, it served to show the high esteem and honour in which armorial insignia were held by our ancestors of those ages.

In No. 159 I have already shown an example of a sculptured Shield thus supported by Angels, from St. Albans. In the same noble church there are other examples of the same character in stained glass. Angel Supporters, the figures treated in various ways, occur in very many Gothic edifices ; particularly, sculptured as corbels, bosses or pateræ, or introduced in panels, and employed for the decoration of open timber roofs, as in Westminster Hall. They appear also on Seals ; as on the Seal of HENRY OF LANCASTER, about A.D. 1350, which has the figure of an Angel above the Shield, and a lion on each side of it.

No. 405.—Seal of Devorguilla Crawford ; about 1290.

The representation of armorial Banners upon Seals would lead to at least the occasional introduction of some figure to hold, or support, the Banner; and here, again, we discern the presence of some of the immediate predecessors of "Supporters," properly so called. In the Seals, Nos. 391, 392, the Banners are not supported, and yet they are indirectly suggestive of giving support to the Shield which is marshalled with them in the same composition. Another Hungerford Seal, that of MARGARET BOTTREUX, widow of the second Baron HUNGERFORD (who died in 1477), in the centre of the composition has a kneeling figure of the noble lady, and on each side a banner of arms is held (supported) erect, so that the two banners form a kind of canopy over her head, by a lion and a gryphon. In No. 406 I give a part only of this elaborate Seal, sufficient to show how its general composition bears upon the adoption of Supporters. The Monument in Westminster Abbey of Sir LUDOVIC ROBSART, K.G., Lord BOURCHIER, Standard-Bearer to HENRY V. at Agincourt, has two banners sculptured in the stone-work of the canopy, which are placed precisely in the same manner as the banners in No. 406; and, like them they are held by Badges acting as Supporters. Two well-known seals of the PERCIES are charged with banners, and in each case the banner-staff is held by a single Supporter: one of these figures is a man-at-arms, A.D. 1386; the other is a lion, A.D. 1446. At the same period, two lions appear on another Percy Seal. Another, of the same date, has the shield supported by an armed man, without any banner, but having a lance with a long pennon charged with the Crescent badge of PERCY, No. 412, p. 255. Other Percy Seals, again, of the fourteenth century, on either side of the Shield have two lions or two birds.

No. 406.—Part of Seal of Margaret, Lady Hungerford.

Numerous examples of great interest illustrate the early introduction of Badges into the composition of Seals, as accessories of Shields. A Seal of Prince JOHN OF GHENT, which has two falcons and padlocks, is one of the most beautiful and suggestive works of its class: in this Seal the two birds are addorsed, and consequently they also have their backs turned towards the central achievement. This position of the figures on early Seals is not uncommon; but it must be considered to have been adopted simply and solely as an artistic necessity, arising from the form of the spaces to be occupied by the figures upon the Seal. Another most characteristic example of that marshalling of Badges upon Seals, which certainly led the way to true Supporters, is the Seal of Sir MAURICE DE BERKELEY, A.D. 1430, upon which a mermaid—the Berkeley badge—is blazoned on each side of the Shield. The two figures are drawn with much skill and elegance. The Shield itself quarters Berkeley within a bordure, and a differenced coat of Bottetourt: it hangs from a large helm, which, in its turn, is ensigned by as large a mitre—the singular Crest of the Berkeleys. The two figures, generally animals, which fill up the spaces to the dexter and sinister of the central achievement on Seals, in the fifteenth century are almost invariably drawn of a comparatively large size ; and, for the most part, they really act as Supporters to the Crested Helm, being themselves supported by the Shield. The composition of the Seal of EDMUND DE MORTIMER, Earl of MARCH, A.D. 1400, though now mutilated, exhibits in a most satisfactory manner this very effective arrangement, from which true Supporters to a Shield of Arms might obviously be derived. In this Seal,

No. 407.— Seal of Earl Edmund de Mortimer :
A.D. 1400.

No. 407, the Shield quarters Mortimer, No. 131, and—or, a cross gu., for Ulster. The Seal of WM. DE WYNDESOR, No. 382, illustrates with no less happy effect the occasional use of birds instead of beasts, as Supporting Badges. Other examples exist in great numbers, and in abundant variety : the two that I add from Mr. Laing's Volume, Nos. 408 and 409, are in every respect most characteristic ; they are severally the Seals of ROBERT GRAHAM, of Kinpcont, and of Sir WILLIAM LINDSAY, of the Byres.

It is scarcely necessary for me to point out to students that Supporters always have a decided heraldic significance. In supporting a Shield of Arms, they discharge an heraldic duty : but, in themselves, Supporters are armorial symbols of a high rank ; and, with peculiar emphasis, they record descent, inheritance, and alliance, and they blazon illustrious deeds.

Supporters should always be represented in an erect position. In whatever direction also they actually may be looking, they always ought to appear to fulfil their own proper office of giving vigilant and deferential support to the

No. 408.

Seal of Robert Graham, of Kinpont :

A.D. 1433.

No. 409.

Seal of Sir Wm. Lindsay, of the Byres :

A.D. 1390.

Shield. It would be well, in our blazoning of supported Achievements, not only for us to regard a becoming position and attitude for Supporters to be matters determined by positive heraldic law, but also that some satisfactory arrangement should be made and recognised for general adoption, by which an equally becoming support would be provided for "Supporters." The existing custom is to place the Supporters, whatever they may be, upon some very slight renaissance scroll-work, that is neither graceful nor consistent ; or, to constrain the Motto to provide a foundation or standing-place for them. In the latter case, an energetic lion, or a massive elephant, and, in a certain class of achievements of comparatively recent date, a mounted trooper, or a stalwart man-of-war's man, probably with a twenty-four pounder at his feet, are made to stand on the edge of the ribbon that is inscribed with the Motto. Mr. Laing has enabled me to give an excellent example of Supporters—two lions standing upon a motto-scroll or ribbon—in No. 410, the Seal of JOHN DRUMMOND, created Earl of MELFORT and Viscount FORTH in the year 1686: the Shield is Scotland, within a bordure componée; the Supporters are gorged with collars charged with thistles; and the Crest is the Crest of Scotland issuing from a celestial Crown. As says the Motto of Sir WILLIAM MAHON, "Moniti, meliora sequamur"—now that we have been told of it, let us produce something better than this support for our Supporters.

No. 410.—Seal of John Drummond, Earl of Melfort: A.D. 1686.

The Heralds of France still restrict the term "Supporters"—"Les Supports"—to animals; and to human beings, to figures of angels, and to mythological personages or other figures in human form, when supporting a Shield, they apply the term "Les Tenants." When trees or other inanimate objects are placed beside any armorial shield, and so discharge the duty of Supporters in French achievements, they are distinguished as "Les Soutiens." An old French writer on Heraldry, PALLIOT, says that in his time (A.D. 1660), Tenant is used in the singular number, and denotes any kind of single Supporter, while Supports is used when there are two.

In the French Heraldry of the present time, a single Tenant or Support is of rare occurrence; and when two Tenants or Supports appear in blazon, they are generally though not always, alike.

CHAPTER XVII.

FLAGS.

*The Pennon. The Banner. The Standard. The Royal Standard.
The Union Jack. Ensigns. Military Standards and Colours.
Blazoning. Hoisting and Displaying Flags.*

“Many a beautiful Pennon fixed to a lance,
And many a Banner displayed.”

SIEGE OF CARLAVEROCK, A.D. 1300.

“Prosper our Colours!”—SHAKESPEARE, Henry VI., Part 3.

ADMIRABLY adapted for all purposes of heraldic display rich in glowing colours, and peculiarly graceful in their free movement in the wind, FLAGS are inseparably associated with spirit-stirring memories, and in all ages and with every people they enjoy an enthusiastic popularity peculiar to themselves.

In the middle ages, in England, three distinct classes of heraldic Flags appear to have been in general use, each class having a distinct and well-defined signification.

1. First, the PENNON, the ensign of knightly rank, small in size, of elongated form, and either pointed or swallow-tailed at the extremity, is charged with the Badge or some other armorial ensign of the owner, and by him displayed upon his own lance, as his personal ensign. The Pennon of Sir JOHN D'ABERNOUN, No. 286, fringed and pointed, A.D. 1277, bears his arms—Az., a chevron or.: and No. 411, another example of the pointed form of Pennon, is from the Painted Chamber, Westminster, about A.D. 1275. No. 412, a long swallow-tailed Pennon, charged with the Percy crescent Badge, is from the Seal of HENRY DE PERCI, first Earl of NORTHUMBERLAND. Before the true heraldic era, Lance-Flags with various decorative devices, but without any blazonry having a definite signification, were in use: See Nos. 5, 6. The Pennoncelle was a modification of the Pennon.

2. Second, the BANNER, square or oblong in form, and of a larger size than the Pennon, bears the entire Coat of Arms of the owner blazoned over its whole surface, pre-

No. 411.

Pennon, from the Painted Chamber

No. 412.

Pennon of Percy: A.D. 1400.

cisely as the same composition is blazoned upon a Shield: No. 162. The Banner is the ensign of the Sovereign, or of a Prince, a Noble, or a Knight who had been advanced to the higher rank or degree of a "Banneret;" and its presence signifies the position occupied by a Banneret or personage of still higher rank, and by all who are his personal retainers or followers, or who are under his immediate command. Two Banners are represented in each of the Hungerford Seals, Nos. 391, 392. A small group of oblong Banners, with two pointed Pennons, is represented in No. 413, from the Painted Chamber.

In the olden time, when a Knight had distinguished himself by conspicuous gallantry, it was the custom to mark his meritorious conduct by prompt advancement on the very field of battle. In such a case, the point or points of the good Knight's Pennon were rent off, and thus the small Flag was reduced to the square form of the Banner, by which thenceforth he was to be distinguished. FROISSART, in his own graphic manner, has described the ceremonial

No. 413.—Oblong Banners and Pointed Pennons, from the Painted Chamber.

which attended the first display of the Banner of a newly-created Banneret on the field of battle. Sir JOHN CHANDOS, one of the Knights Founders of the Garter, appeared with his maiden Banner on the field, on the morning of the battle of Naveret, in Castile, April 3rd, 1367 :—“He brought his Banner in his hands,” says the chronicler, “rolled up” (rolled round the staff), “and said to the PRINCE OF WALES”—it was the BLACK PRINCE,—“‘My Lord, behold, here is my Banner : I deliver it to you in this way’”—still rolled round the staff, that is—“‘that it may please you to display it, and that this day I may raise it; for, thank God, I have land and heritage sufficient to support the rank as it ought to be!’ Then the Prince and the King”—Don PETRO, King of Castile—“took the Banner, which was of silver with a sharp pile gules, between their hands by the staff, and displayed it, and returned it to him, the Prince saying—‘Sir John, behold your Banner; may God grant you may do your duty!’ Then Sir JOHN CHANDOS bore his Banner (displayed) to his own Company, and said—‘Gentlemen, see here my Banner and yours; preserve it as your own!’” We see that, like another hero of a later period, the BLACK PRINCE held the maxim—“England expects every man to do his duty.”

Quarterings, Marks of Cadency, and Differences are blazoned on Banners under the very same conditions that they appear on Shields of Arms. For example, the Banners, as well as the Shield, on the seal of Sir Robert de Hungerford, No. 392, are Differenced with a label for Cadency, and thus are distinguished from the corresponding Banners and Shield on the Seal of Sir Robert’s father, No. 391.

Crests, Badges, Supporters, and other external accessories and ornaments of Armorial Shields have no place on Banners, a Banner representing a Shield, and being charged as a Shield. In the seventeenth century, however, English Banners sometimes were charged with Achievements of Arms, including all the accessories and ornaments of Shields.

In early times Banners appear in use at sea, as well as on land; and the same Banners were used both on shore and afloat. The sails of our early shipping, also, are constantly represented as covered with armorial blazonry, and they thus were enabled to act as Ship-Flags. Many curious and interesting representations of the strange, unwieldy, unship-shape looking craft that were the ancestors of the British Navy, are introduced with their heraldic sails and their Banners into the compositions of Seals. A fine example of its order is the Seal of JOHN HOLLAND, Earl of HUNTINGDON, A.D. 1436, "Admiral of England, Ireland, and Aquitaine," No. 414. The ship is really a noble-looking vessel, with her solitary sail blazoned with the Lord Admiral's Arms—England, within a bordure of France,—the same arms that were borne by Prince JOHN OF ELTHAM, No. 24. In this example the crew are not represented:

No. 414.—Seal of Earl John Holland, Admiral of England, &c. ; A.D. 1436.

but in other Seals of early shipping figures are commonly introduced, and almost always they are drawn of ludicrously disproportionate size. This ship does not display any Banner from a banner-staff, but has a nautical Pennon of ample size flying at the mast-head: when Banners are displayed on board ships upon early Seals, they are generally narrow in proportion to their height, a form of Banner adopted on land as well as at sea, in consequence of the greater inconvenience attending the display of broad or really square Banners. At a later period, however, Ship-Flags of very large size came into favour.

3. The STANDARD, the third variety of early heraldic Flags, which first appears about the middle of the fourteenth century, and was in general use by personages of high rank in the two following centuries, appears to have been adopted solely for the purpose of adding to the splendour of pageants, and for enhancing "the pomp and circumstance of war." Standards may be considered to have been devised for the special purpose of displaying Badges on a grand scale.

This Flag is of ample proportions, and great length ; but its size varies with the owner's rank. Next to the Staff the red cross on a silver field of ST. GEORGE is blazoned, except in some Royal Standards, which omit this cross : the rest of the field is generally divided per fesse into two tinctures, in most cases the livery colours of the owner, or the prevailing tinctures of his Coat of Arms. With some principal figure or device occupying a prominent position, various Badges are displayed over the whole field, a Motto, which is placed bend-wise, having divided the Standard into compartments. The edges are fringed throughout, and the extremity is swallow-tailed, unless the owner be a Prince of the Blood Royal, when it is pointed.

The Standard of Sir HENRY DE STAFFORD, K.G., second son of HENRY, second Duke of BUCKINGHAM (executed in 1483), is represented in No. 415, from a drawing in the Heralds' College. It is charged, first, with a banner of St. George : then, on a field per fesse sable and gules, the White Swan of the De Bohuns, with the silver Stafford-knot (No. 304), differenced with a Crescent gules for Cadency ; the Motto is HVMBLE : ET : LOYAL ; and the fringe, like the field, is componée sa. and gu. In other examples a greater variety of Badges are introduced. The student will not fail to take notice of the systematic display of the ensign of St. George in these Standards, as the national armorial device of England.

No. 415.—Standard of Sir Henry de Stafford, K.G. : about A.D. 1475.

The ROYAL STANDARD, which stands at the head of our English Flags of the present day, bears the full blazonry of the Royal Arms of Her Majesty THE QUEEN, as they are marshalled on the Royal Shield: No. 416. This splendid Flag, so truly heraldic in its character, and, like the early Banners, of square shape and charged with Coat Armour and not with Badges, ought to be styled the ROYAL BANNER. The same Standard is duly differenced with their own Marks of Cadency

No. 416.
The Royal Standard, or Banner.

and their Shields of Pretence for the different members of the Royal Family.

The UNION JACK, our own national British Flag, as we now display it, is the second of its race. The First Union Jack, No. 417, was produced in obedience to a Royal Proclamation of JAMES I. in the year 1606. Its object was to provide a single National Flag for both England and Scotland as a single kingdom, which might put an end to certain serious disputes concerning the precedence of their respective Banners of St. George and St. Andrew, Nos. 418, 419, between the natives of England and Scotland--of "South and North Britain." This "Union" Flag combined the blazonry of the two rival ensigns, not marshalling

No. 418.
St. George.

No. 417.—The First Union Jack.

No. 419.
St. Andrew.

them by Quartering after the early heraldic usage, but by reviving a still earlier process, and by blending the cross and the saltire of Nos. 418 and 419 in a single composition. This was effected, accordingly, by charging the Cross of St. George, with a narrow border or "fimbriation" of white to represent its white field, upon the Banner of St. Andrew, the result being the Flag shown in No. 417. On the final "Union" between England and Scotland in 1707, this device was formally declared to be the "Ensign armorial of the United Kingdom of Great Britain."

Upon the first day of January, 1801, the Second Union

Jack, the "Union Jack" of to-day, No. 420, superseded the Flag of King JAMES and Queen ANNE. The "Union" with Ireland rendered a change necessary in the Union Jack, in order to incorporate with its blazonry the Banner of ST. PATRICK, No. 421, arg., a saltire gu. The process that had been adopted before was again brought into action, but now a single compound device had to be formed by the combination of a cross and two saltires, Nos. 418, 419, and 421. As before, in this new Flag the blue field of ST. ANDREW forms the field: then the two Saltires, the one

No. 420.
The Second Union Jack.

No. 421.
St. Patrick.

white and the other red, are formed into a single compound Saltire of the two tinctures alternating, the white having precedence; a narrow edging of white is next added to each red side of this new figure, to represent the white field of St. Patrick, as the narrow edging of white about the red cross represented the white field of ST. GEORGE in No. 418; and, finally, the red cross of St. George fimbriated with white, as in the First Jack, is charged over all. Such is the Second Union Jack, No. 420. In this compound device it will be observed that the broad diagonal white members represent the silver saltire of St. Andrew, No. 419: that the red diagonal members represent the saltire gules of St. Patrick, No. 421, and that the narrow diagonal white lines are added in order to place this saltire gules on a field argent: that the diagonal red and the broad diagonal white members represent the two Saltires of St. Andrew and St. Patrick in combination: and that the fimbriated red cross in the front of the goodly alliance declares the presence of the symbol of St. George.

Sir HARRIS NICHOLAS has suggested that this flag may have acquired its name of "Jack" ("Union" is obvious enough) from the original author of the First Union Flag, King JAMES, who, in the Heralds' French language, would be styled Jacques: and so the Flag would be called "Jacques' Union," which would easily settle down into "Jack's Union," and finally would as easily become "Union Jack." The Second Union Flag is always to be hoisted as it is represented in No. 420, the diagonal white having precedence in the first canton. To reverse the proper display of the Flag implies distress or danger; or such a procedure (very often, as I am aware, unconsciously adopted, through ignorance of the real meaning of the Flag itself) subjects the Union Jack to degradation.

No. 422.
The Red Ensign.

The ENSIGNS now in use are:—

1. The Red Ensign, a plain red Flag cantoning a Union Jack—having a Jack in the dexter chief angle next to the point of suspension: No. 422. This Ensign shares with the Union Jack the honour of being the "Ensign of England"—the Ensign, that is, of the British Empire. When displayed at sea, it now distinguishes all vessels that do not belong to the Royal Navy : but, before the year 1864, it was the distinguishing ensign of the “red squadron of the Navy,” and of the “Admirals of the Red”—the Admirals of the highest rank.

2. The White or St. George's Ensign, is the old banner of St. George, No. 418, with a Jack cantoned in the first quarter. It now is the Ensign of the Royal Navy : but, before 1864, it distinguished the “white squadron” of the Navy, and the Admirals—second in rank—of that Squadron.

3. The Blue Ensign differs from the Red only in the field being plain blue instead of red. It now is the Ensign of the Naval Reserve : before 1864 it was the Ensign of “Admirals of the Blue,” third in rank, and of their Squadron of the Royal Navy.

A Red Ensign is often charged with a Crown, or with some appropriate device, to denote some particular department of the public service.

With the Ensigns may be grouped the Flag of the Admiralty, which displays a yellow anchor and cable set fesse-wise on a red field.

The Ensigns are always to be hoisted so as to have the Jack next to the point of suspension, as in No. 422.

MILITARY FLAGS. 1. Cavalry Standards, which are, and ought to be called, Banners, being lineal descendants and true representatives of the knightly Banners of the mediæval chivalry, are small square Flags, the colour of the field the same as the regimental facings ; and each Standard bears the Number, Motto, and specific Title of its own Regiment, with whatever heraldic Badge or Device may be associated with it. Upon these Standards also are blazoned the regimental “Honours” — such words as WATERLOO, ALMA, LUCKNOW, and others, which briefly and with most emphatic significance declare the services of the corps. The Household Cavalry, the Life Guards and Blues, have all their Standards of Crimson, and they are blazoned with the Royal Insignia and their own "Honours" and Devices.

2. Infantry Colours. In the first instance, each Regiment of Infantry had one "Colour:" subsequently, two others were added: and, finally, in the reign of Queen ANNE, it was decided that every Infantry Regiment or Battalion of the Line (the Rifles of the Line excepted, who have no "Colours") should have its own "Pair of Colours." Of this "Pair," one is the "Queen's Colour"—a Union Jack charged with some regimental Devices: the other, the "Regimental Colour," is of the tincture of the facings, on which the "Honours" and "Devices" of the Regiment are charged, and in the dexter chief angle a small Jack is cantoned: in fact, the "Regimental Colour" is the same as the Red or Blue Ensign (No. 422), the Colour of the field varying with the regimental facings, and the field itself being charged with the various Devices.

In their Colours, the Guards reverse the arrangement that obtains with the Regiments of the Line. With them, the Queen's Colour is always crimson, with or without a Jack, but charged with the Royal Cypher and the regimental Devices: the Regimental Colour of the Guards is the Union Jack.

3. The Royal Artillery have no Colours or Standards.

4. The characteristic Banner of the Volunteers, with its admirable Motto, DEFENSE . NOT . DEFIANCE, displays figures of such an archer as might have been "out" with ROBIN HOOD, and such a rifleman as is a devoted subject of QUEEN VICTORIA. Excellent as it is, this can scarcely be considered an heraldic Flag. Perhaps it will have a comrade "Colour" of a more decidedly heraldic character: either a Union Jack, charged with the Motto of the Force, ensigned with a Crown, and within an oak-wreath; or a Flag of English scarlet, charged with the Union Device blazoned upon an escutcheon of pretence, the escutcheon ensigned with a Crown and encircled by a wreath of oak and laurel, with the Motto of the Volunteer Force, the Number and special Device of each Regiment being also added on a canton.

I conclude this Chapter, which treats briefly of the Heraldry of the most important English Flags, with four still more brief general remarks:—

1. First: by all English people who are disposed to exclaim, making SHAKESPEARE'S words their own, "Prosper our Colours!" it ought to be understood that their National Flags are endowed with heraldic, that is, with historical significance, recorded after an heraldic fashion.

2. Second: this significance of their Flags ought also to be understood, that it may be appreciated, by all true English people.

3. Third: our Flags ought always to be made and represented correctly.

And 4. Lastly: our Flags, and all other Flags also, ought always to be hoisted and displayed rightly and properly.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE ROYAL HERALDRY OF ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND

Shields of Arms of the Reigning Sovereigns of England—of Scotland—of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. Crests. Supporters. Mottoes. Crowns. Banners. Armorial Insignia of the late Prince Consort—of the Prince and Princess of Wales—of the other Princes and Princesses, the Sons and Daughters of the Queen.

“On his Banner were three Leopards, courant, of fine gold, set on red: fierce were they, haughty and cruel, to signify that, like them, the KING is dreadful to his enemies; for his bite is slight to none who inflame his anger: and yet, towards such as seek his friendship or submit to his power his kindness is soon rekindled.”—ROLL OF CARLAVEROCK.

“With Scotland’s Arms, Device and Crest Embroidered round and round.”—MARMION.

How the “three Leopards courant” of the shrewd chronicler of Carlawerock are identical with the “three Lions passant guardant” of the Royal Shield of England I have already shown (see page 84). To the Norman Sovereigns of England, WILLIAM I., WILLIAM II., HENRY I., and STEPHEN (A.D. 1066—1154), the same Shield of Arms has been assigned—Gu., two lions pass. guard., in pale, or, No. 22. It must be distinctly understood, however, that there exists no certain authority for these Arms.

In like manner, STEPHEN is also said to have borne on a red Shield three golden Sagittaries, or Centaurs, with bows and arrows. And, again, HENRY II. is considered to have added a third lion to the two on the Shield of his father, a single golden lion passant guardant on red being (also considered to be) the armorial ensign of the province of Aquitaine, acquired by HENRY in right of his Consort, ALIANORE.

As early as the reign of HENRY III., a Shield of Arms, No. 23, was assigned to the Anglo-Saxon Kings: another Shield, No. 2, was assigned to EDWARD THE CONFESSOR: and a third Shield, No. 3, to another sainted Anglo-Saxon Prince, EDMUND.

From the appearance of the Second Great Seal of RICHARD I., about A.D. 1195, all uncertainty concerning the

No. 22.

Royal Arms, supposed to have been borne before A.D. 1189.

No. 187.

Royal Arms, from A.D. 1189 to 1340.

Royal Arms of England is at an end, and they are borne as follows by the successive English Sovereigns:—

RICHARD I.: JOHN: HENRY III.: EDWARD I.: EDWARD II.: and EDWARD III., till the thirteenth year of his reign, A.D. 1340:—Gu., three lions passant guardant, in pale, or,—No. 187.

EDWARD III., from the thirteenth year of his reign, when he claimed to be King of France as well as of England, and so styled himself: RICHARD II.: and HENRY IV., till about the fifth year of his reign:—France Ancient and England quarterly,—No. 252.

RICHARD II. sometimes bore the Arms of the CONFESSOR, No. 2, with his own, on a separate shield, as at Westminster Hall ; and sometimes he impaled the Confessor's Arms with his own quartered Shield, the arms of the Confessor having the precedence.

HENRY IV. from about 1405 : HENRY V. : HENRY VI. :

No. 253.—Royal Arms from about A.D. 1405 to 1603.

No. 252.—Royal Arms from A.D. 1340 to about 1405.

EDWARD IV. : EDWARD V. : RICHARD III. : HENRY VII. : HENRY VIII. : EDWARD VI. : MARY : and ELIZABETH, to A.D. 1603 : — France Modern and England Quarterly, No. 253.

The Royal Shield of SCOTLAND, No. 138, first appears upon the Seal of ALEXANDER II. about A.D. 1235 ; and, as Mr. Seton well observes, the origin of its bearings "is veiled by the mists of Antiquity." The same Shield, without any modification or change, was borne by all the Sovereigns of Scotland.

No. 138.—Royal Arms of Scotland.

JAMES I. : CHARLES I. : CHARLES II. : JAMES II. : WILLIAM III. and MARY : and ANNE, till May 1, 1707 : Quarterly: 1 and 4, Grand Quarters, France Modern and England (No. 253) : 2, Grand Quarter, Scotland (No. 138) : 3, Grand Quarter—Az., a harp or, stringed arg., for Ireland : No. 423.

WILLIAM III., as an elected Sovereign, charged his paternal shield of NASSAU, No. 424. Az., billettée, a lion rampt. or, in pretence upon the Royal Shield : also, during

No. 423.—Royal Arms of the Stuart Sovereigns.

the life of his Consort, till Dec. 28, 1694, he bore the Stuart shield with Nassau in pretence on the dexter half of his Shield, and thus impaled in the sinister half of his Shield

No. 425.—Diagram of Shield of William III. and Mary.

No. 424.
Arms of Nassau.

No. 426.—Diagram of Shield of William III alone.

the same Stuart arms, as in the Diagram, No. 425, to denote their joint Sovereignty: the Shield represented in this Diagram, No. 425, bears the whole of No. 423 on its dexter half, with No. 424 in pretence; and on its sinister half it also bears the whole of No. 423. When he reigned alone, WILLIAM III. bore his own dexter half of the impaled Shield alone, as in the Diagram, No. 426: the Shield represented in this Diagram bears the dexter half of No. 425.

Queen ANNE, from May 1, 1707, till 1714, bore the Royal Arms marshalled as in the Diagram, No. 427:—

No. 427.—Diagram of the Second Royal Shield of Queen Anne.

No. 428.
Arms of Hanover.

No. 429.—Diagram of the Royal Shield from A.D. 1714 to 1801.

1 and 2, England impaling Scotland; 3, France Modern (No. 253); 4, Ireland (the Harp, as in the third quarter of No. 423).

The Arms of HANOVER, on the accession of GEORGE I., August 1, 1714, were added to the Shield of the United Kingdom. This was accomplished by removing the charges (England and Scotland impaled) from the fourth quarter of the Shield, No. 427, and charging that quarter with the arms of Hanover as they appear on the Shield, No. 428:—Per pale and per chevron, 1, Gu., two lions of England, for Brunswick: 2, Or, Semée of hearts, a lion rampt. az., for Lunenburgh: 3, Gu., a horse courant arg., for Westphalia: 4, Over all, on an inescutcheon gules, the golden crown of Charlemagne. This marshalling is shown in the Diagram No. 429, which represents a Shield bearing,—1 and 2, England impaling Scotland; 3, France Modern; 4, Ireland; 5, Hanover (as in No. 428, without the Crown).

On January 1, 1801, the Fleurs de Lys of France were removed from the Royal Shield of Great Britain, which then was marshalled as in the diagram, No. 430, quarterly, 1 and 4, England; 2, Scotland; 3, Ireland; 5, Hanover—the shield of Hanover being ensigned with the Electoral Bonnet, No. 240, till 1816, but with a Royal Crown from 1816 till 1837, as it appears in No. 428.

GEORGE I.: GEORGE II.: GEORGE III., till Jan. 1, 1801:—The arms indicated in the diagram, No. 429.

No. 430.—Diagram of the Royal Shield from A.D. 1801 to 1837.

GEORGE III., till 1816:—The arms indicated in the diagram, No. 430, the inescutcheon ensigned with an electoral bonnet.

GEORGE III., after 1816: GEORGE IV.: WILLIAM IV.:—The same arms as No. 430, but the inescutcheon ensigned with a Royal Crown.

HER MAJESTY, QUEEN VICTORIA:—The same as No. 430, but without the inescutcheon, and as the four quarters are marshalled on the Royal Standard, No. 416.

ROYAL CRESTS.

For ENGLAND:—A golden lion statant guardant, imperially crowned; assumed by EDWARD III., and by him borne on his Helm standing upon a Cap of Estate; retained from his time, and now borne standing on an Imperial Crown. No. 431.

For SCOTLAND :—First Crest. A lion statant guardant gu., assumed by ROBERT II., about A.D. 1385 ; retained, and with some modifications used by his successors, till about A.D. 1550. Second Crest. On an Imperial Crown, a lion sejant affronté gu. ; imperially crowned, holding in the dexter paw a sword, and in the sinister paw a sceptre, both erect and ppr. ; with the motto—IN : MY : DEFENSE ; assumed by JAMES V. ; borne by MARY, and shown in her signet-ring, No. 432, about 1564 ; retained, and now in use.

No. 431.—Royal Crest of England.

ROYAL SUPPORTERS.

For ENGLAND. Of uncertain authority before HENRY VI., who bore two white antelopes : also, a lion and a panther, or antelope.

EDWARD IV. :—A lion or, or argent, and a bull sable : or, two lions argent : or, a lion and a hart argent.

RICHARD III. :—A lion or and a boar arg. : or, two boars arg.

HENRY VII. :—A dragon gu., and a greyhound arg. : or, two greyhounds arg. : or, a lion or and a dragon gu.

HENRY VIII. :—A lion or and a dragon gu. : or, a dragon gu., and either a bull, a greyhound, or a cock arg.

EDWARD VI. :—A lion or, and a dragon gu.

MARY and ELIZABETH :—A lion or, and a greyhound arg., or a dragon gu.

For SCOTLAND.—First Supporters : Two lions rampt. guard. ; first seen on a Seal of JAMES I., A.D. 1429. Second Supporters : Two silver unicorns, royally gorged and chained or; assumed by JAMES IV., and retained in use. On the signet of Queen MARY STUART, No. 432: for this beautiful cut once more I am indebted to Mr. Laing.

For the UNITED KINGDOM. Dexter Supporter: A lion rampt. guard., royally crowned, or. Sinister Supporter: A

No. 432.—The Signet of Queen Mary Stuart, considerably enlarged.

unicorn rampt. arg., royally gorged and chained or. Assumed by JAMES I. of Great Britain: retained, and still in use.

ROYAL MOTTOES.

The ancient English war-cry—DIEU . ET . MON . DROIT!—"God and my Right!" assumed as a regular Motto by HENRY VI., has been retained in use since his time.

Queens ELIZABETH and ANNE also used—SEMPER . EADEM—"Always the Same." JAMES I. used—BEATI . PACIFICI—"Blessed are the Peace-makers."

Mottoes of Scotland: NEMO . ME . IMPUNE . LACESSIT—"No man with impunity attacks me:." and, above the Crest—IN . MY . DEFENSE.

THE CROWN.

Till the time of HENRY IV., the Crown, the symbol of England's Royalty, was a golden circlet richly jewelled, and heightened with conventional strawberry-leaves: fine examples are represented in the effigies of HENRY III., JOHN, and EDWARD II.

HENRY IV., as shown by his splendid effigy at Canterbury, introduced fleurs de lys, alternating with the leaves.

From the time of HENRY V., the circlet has been heightened by crosses pattées and fleurs de lys alternating, four of each, and without any leaves. HENRY V. also first arched the circlet with jewelled bands, which at their intersection he surmounted with a mound and cross.

The arched Crown of HENRY V. has four half-arches,—that is, it is arched over twice: HENRY VI. and CHARLES I. arched their crown three times: all the other Sovereigns have had two complete arches only, and the Crown still retains these two arches intersecting at right angles, as in No. 234. At different periods, while the design of the Crown has remained unchanged, the contour of the arches, and the artistic treatment of the ornamentation have undergone various modifications.

No. 234.
Crown of H.M., The Queen.

The ROYAL BANNERS, or STANDARDS, are charged with the bearings of the Royal Shield of Arms for the time being.

The Armorial Insignia of H.R.H. the late PRINCE CONSORT. The SHIELD is—Quarterly, 1 and 4,—The Royal Arms of the Queen, as in No. 416, but differenced with a silver label of three points charged on the central point with a cross of St. George: 2 and 3,—Saxony, No. 225. This Shield is encircled with the Garter of the Order; and ensigned with the Prince's own Coronet, shown in No. 441.

The CREST is the Royal Crest of England, No. 431. the lion having the same label that differences the Shield, adjusted about his neck as a collar, and being crowned with the coronet, No. 441, in place of the Imperial Crown.

The SUPPORTERS are those of the Royal Arms, the golden lion and silver unicorn, both of them differenced with the same label, and the lion crowned with the same coronet.

The MOTTO.—TREU . UND . FEST—"True and Faithful." To the dexter of this Achievement, the complete Royal Achievement of Her Majesty the Queen.

THE ARMORIAL INSIGNIA OF T.R.H., THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

AS PRINCE ROYAL and HEIR APPARENT, and also as PRINCE OF WALES, His Royal Highness bears the Royal Shield of Arms of the QUEEN, as in No. 416, differenced with a silver label of three points; as the Black Prince differenced with the same label the Shield of EDWARD III. (see Nos. 252, 337).

Upon this Shield the Prince bears, in pretence, this quartered Inescutcheon of the Arms of his high dignities of the second rank:—Quarterly of Seven: 1, PRINCIPALITY OF WALES—Quarterly gu. and or, four lions pass. guard. counterchanged: 2, DUCHY OF CORNWALL—Sa., ten bezants, four, three, two, one: 3, DUKEDOM OF ROTHSAÿ—Scotland, differenced with a label of three points arg.: 4, EARLDOM OF CHESTER—Az., three garbs or: 5, EARLDOM OF DUBLIN—Az., a harp or, stringed arg., with a label as in the third quarter: 6, LORDSHIP OF THE ISLES—Arg., on waves of the Sea ppr., a lymphad sa.: 7, FEUDAL EARLDOM OF CARRICK and BARONY OF RENFREW—Or, a chevron gu. This last quarter is of uncertain authority: I am disposed to believe that it should be blazoned—arg., a saltire and chief az.

Over all, a second inescutcheon of the arms of SAXONY, No. 225.*

The Shield encircled with the Garter of the Order, and ensigned with the Prince's own CORONET, No. 289. The CREST and SUPPORTERS, those of England, differenced with the silver label, and ensigned with the Coronet of the Prince. Above the Arms, with the Crest, is placed the OSTRICH FEATHER BADGE of the PRINCE OF WALES, with the motto, ICH . DIEN—" I serve."

H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES bears, without any difference, the Arms of her Royal Father, the KING OF DENMARK. Recent events that have taken place upon the Continent of Europe, and the territorial changes consequent upon them, might rightly require a fresh marshalling of the Arms of Denmark. In Continental Royal Shields, however, Quarterings are frequently retained as "Arms of Pretension"—heraldic reminiscences or heraldic aspirations, and marshalled with the insignia of actual Sovereignty; as, indeed, was long the case with our own Royal Shield, which bore the fleurs de lys of France for more than two centuries purely as "Arms of Pretension." Consequently, it is possible that the King of Denmark may continue to bear his Arms with precisely the same blazonry that his Shield displayed at the time of his accession. At all events, no change has yet taken place,

* In place of the Arms of Saxony only, upon his inescutcheon surtout the PRINCE OF WALES might marshal the numerous German quarterings of his paternal Coat of Arms. Also, the insignia of the Prince might be marshalled upon a group of three Shields, instead of a single Shield and two inescutcheons; and the insignia of the Princess might be marshalled to form a similar group.

and, accordingly, the Arms of the Princess are now what they were on the occasion of her marriage.

THE ROYAL ARMS OF DENMARK. The Shield divided into four quarters by the national white cross, having a border of red to represent the red field of the Danish Ensign. First Quarter :—DENMARK—Or, semé of hearts gu., three lions pass. guard., in pale, az. Second Quarter :—SLESWICK—Or, two lions pass., in pale, az. Third Quarter :—Per fesse, in chief, SWEDEN—Az., three crowns or; in base, ICELAND—Gu., a stock-fish arg., crowned or; impaling, for FAROE ISLANDS—Az., a buck pass. arg.; and, for GREENLAND—a polar bear rampt. arg. Fourth Quarter :—Per fesse, in chief, for JUTLAND—or, ten hearts, four, three, two, one, gu., and in chief a lion pass. az.; in base, for VANDALIA—Gu., a wyvern, its tail nowed and wings expanded, or.

On an Inescutcheon, quarterly : First, for HOLSTEIN—Gu., an inescutcheon per fesse arg. and of the first, in every point thereof a nail in triangle, between as many holly-leaves, all ppr. Second, for STORMERK—Gu., a swan arg., gorged with a coronet or. Third, for DITZMERS—Az., an armed knight ppr., brandishing his sword, his charger arg. Fourth, for LAUENBURGH—Gu., a horse's head coupé arg.

Over all, in pretence upon a second Inescutcheon, OLDENBURGH—Or, two bars gu.; impaling—Az., a cross patée fitchée or, for DALMENHURST.

This Shield is placed to the sinister of the Shield of the Prince of Wales, and with it stands between his Supporters. It would be good Heraldry to impale the Charges of the two Shields on a single Shield.

Or, a single Shield of the primary Arms of the Prince, without his quartered Inescutcheon, but with Saxony in pretence, may impale Denmark only; and, with the Coronet, Crest, Badge, and Supporters of the Prince, this comparatively simple impaled Shield, represented in No. 433, might be adopted and borne as the Ensigns of the Prince and Princess for general use.

The other PRINCES and PRINCESSES, Sons and Daughters of the QUEEN, all bear the Royal Arms of the Sovereign, the Princes on Shields, the unmarried Princesses on Lozenges. All their Royal Highnesses bear the Royal Supporters and Motto; all have a Shield of Saxony, in pretence on their own Shield or Lozenge; all ensign their Shield or Lozenge with their own Coronet, No. 290; and

No. 433.—Impaled Shield of Prince and Princess of Wales.

the Princes bear the Royal Crest. In every case, the Supporters and the Crest are ensigned with the same Coronet: all the Shields, Lozenges, Crests, and Supporters, are differenced with a silver label of three points, the labels being differenced as follows:—

H.R.H. the Duke of EDINBURGH, &c.:—On the central point a red cross; on each of the other two points a red anchor.
H.R.H. the Prince ARTHUR:—Red cross, and two red fleurs de lys.
H.R.H. the Prince LEOPOLD:—Red cross, and two red hearts. H.R.H. the Princess LOUISA : Red rose, and two red cantons. H.R.H. the Princess BEATRICE :—Red heart, and two red roses.

Their Royal Highnesses, the Princesses who are married, bear the Royal Arms of the QUEEN impaled by the armorial ensigns of the Princes, their Consorts : but each Princess differences the Royal Arms of England with her own label. Thus :—

H.R.H. the CROWN PRINCESS OF PRUSSIA, PRINCESS ROYAL OF ENGLAND, on the central point of her label has a red rose, and on each of the other two points a red cross.

H.R.H. the Princess ALICE OF HESSE has on her label a red rose, between two ermine spots.

H.R.H. the Princess HELENA, Princess CHRISTIAN, has on her label a red cross between two red roses.

The youthful eldest son of the PRINCE OF WALES bears his Father's Shield, differencing the label with a red cross on the central point only.

The label of H.R.H. the Duke of CAMBRIDGE is silver, of three points, and the points are differenced with a red cross in the centre, and on each of the two side points two red hearts in pale. The Duke bears the Royal Arms, but with his own Coronet, No. 292, and differencing the accessories as well as the Shield with his own label.

H.R.H. the Princess MARY OF TECK differences with the same label as the Duke her Brother : and her Arms are impaled by those of Prince TECK, her Husband.

CHAPTER XIX.

ORDERS OF KNIGHTHOOD AND INSIGNIA OF HONOUR.

Feudal Knighthood. Orders of Knighthood:—Knights of St. John—Knights Templars—The Order of the Garter—of the Thistle—of St. Patrick—of the Bath—of St. Michael and St. George of The Star of India. The Victoria Cross. The Albert Medal. Naval and Military Medals. Foreign Insignia bestowed on British Subjects.

“The same King would make an Order of KNIGHTS of himself and his Sons, and of the bravest of his land.”—FROISSART.

“I will say as I have said,—

Thou art a noble KNIGHT.”—LORD OF THE ISLES.

KNIGHTHOOD, as that term is generally understood in its comprehensive acceptation, has been well defined to be “a distinction of rank amongst freemen, depending not upon birth or property, but simply upon the admission of the person so distinguished, by the girding of a sword or other similar solemnity, into an order of men having by law or usage certain social or political privileges,” and also a certain appropriate title. It is evident, therefore, from this definition that Knighthood implies the existence of these two conditions: the one, that the man to be admitted to the rank of Knighthood should possess such qualifications as may entitle him to that distinction; and the other, that Knighthood should be conferred by a personage endowed with a competent power and authority.

In feudal times the qualifications for Knighthood were military exploits of a distinguished character, and eminent services, of whatever kind, rendered to the King and the realm : also, the holding a certain property in land (in the time of EDWARD I., land then of the yearly value of £20, or upwards), whether directly from the King, or under some Noble, by the feudal tenure of personal military service to be rendered under certain established conditions. During the first two centuries after the Conquest, Knighthood was conferred by the great Barons and by the Spiritual Peers, as well as by the King himself, or by his appointed representative : but, after the accession of HENRY III., the prevailing rule appears to have been that in England no persons should be created Knights except by the King, or the Prince Royal acting for his Father, or by the King's General-in-Chief, or other personal representative.

The knightly rank, as it gave an increase of dignity, implied also the maintenance of a becoming state, and the discharge of certain civil duties : and, more particularly, all Knights were required to make such a provision for rendering military service as was held to be consistent with their position and their property ; and it was expected from them that they should take a dignified part in the chivalrous exercises and celebrations of their times. It followed, that feudal Knighthood was a distinction which, if not conferred for the sake of honour, became obligatory ; and fines, accordingly, were imposed upon men qualified for Knighthood who, notwithstanding, were found not to be Knights. In the course of time, as the rigour of the feudal system abated, the numbers of the military tenants of small tenures greatly increased : and, since many of these persons had no inclination for the profession of arms, they gladly accepted the alternative of paying a fine, which enabled them to evade an honour unsuited as well to their means as to their personal tastes and their peaceful avocations. A fruitful source of revenue thus was secured for the Crown, while the military character of Knighthood was maintained, and at the same time a new and important class of the community gradually became established.

The Knights of Norman England, who at first were stipendiary soldiers of the highest order, derived their designation from their warlike predecessors of Anglo-Saxon times, the word "cniht," in the late Anglo-Saxon tongue, signifying a military attendant. When they had established themselves in the position and in the possession of the lands of the Anglo-Saxons, the Anglo-Norman Knights retained their own original title. The Latin equivalent for that title of "Knight" is "Miles," and the Norman-French is "Chevalier."

These Knights may be grouped in two classes. The first class contains all persons who had been admitted into the comprehensive Order of Chivalry—who were Knights by reason of their common Knighthood. The second class is formed of Knights who, in addition to their Knightly rank, were members of some special and distinct Fraternity, Companionship, or Order of Knighthood. Every Society of this kind has always possessed Laws, Institutions, Titles, and Insignia peculiar to itself.

The peculiar character and object of the Crusades led to the formation of two Orders of Priest-Knights—Orders not belonging to any particular nation, but numbering amongst their members men of all nations. These are the Orders of the KNIGHTS OF ST. JOHN OF JERUSALEM, or HOSPITALLERS, and of the KNIGHTS TEMPLARS.

The HOSPITALLERS, instituted about A.D. 1092, were introduced into England about 1100. In the year 1310 they were established at Rhodes, and in 1530 at Malta, under their forty-third Grand Master, PHILIPPE DE VILLIERS DE L'ISLE-ADAM. Their device is a silver cross of eight points. No. 107, charged upon a black field, or worn upon a black surcoat or mantle. The Order was finally suppressed in England in 1559.

The TEMPLARS, instituted about A.D. 1118, were introduced into England about 1140. In the year 1309 they were suppressed, and in 1312 their Order was finally abolished. They wore a Cross of the same form as No. 107, but of a red colour upon a white field. This red cross they charged upon a white banner: and they bore another banner, No. 13, of black and white, entitled "Beau Seant." The same words, "Beau Seant!" were their war-cry. The Badges of the Templars were the Agnus Dei—the Holy Lamb, holding a red-cross banner; and a device representing two Knights mounted on a single horse, intended to denote the original poverty of the Order.*

THE ORDER OF THE GARTER, a military Fraternity under the special patronage of "ST. GEORGE, the good Knight," was instituted at Windsor by King EDWARD III. in, or about, the year 1350—very probably in the summer of 1348, but the exact time is not positively known. It may safely be assumed, that the occasion which led to the institution of this most noble and renowned Order, was a Tournament or Hastilude of unusual importance held at his Castle of Windsor by EDWARD III. at the most brilliant period of his reign: and it is highly probable that the Order suggested itself to the mind of the King, as a natural result of his own chivalrous revival of a knightly "Round Table," such as flourished in the days of King Arthur. How much of historical fact there may be in the popular legend, which professes to derive from a certain romantic incident the

* The Arms of the Barrister Templars of the present day are—azure, a pegasus (or, winged horse) argent, or sometimes or. This Coat is derived from the early Badge, the two horsemen having been mistaken in later times for wings.

Title certainly borne by King EDWARD'S Order from the time of its original institution, it is not possible to determine: but the legend itself is not in any way inconsistent with the spirit of those times; nor would the Knights Founders of the Garter regard their Order as the less honourable, because its Title might remind them of the happy gallantry, with which the casual misadventure of a noble Lady had been turned to so good an account by a most princely Monarch. The Statutes of the Order have been continually modified and altered, and the original military character of the Institution has long ceased to exist: still, no changes in the Order of the Garter have affected the preeminence of its dignity and reputation. Illustrious now as ever, and foremost in rank and honour in our own country, the GARTER is second to no knightly Order in the world.

The MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE GARTER consists of the SOVEREIGN and Twenty-five KNIGHTS COMPANIONS, of whom the PRINCE OF WALES always is one. By a Statute of the year 1805, the Order includes such lineal descendants of GEORGE III. as may be elected: and still more recent statutes have provided for the admission of foreign Sovereigns, and also of certain "Extra Knights," who are elected "Companions" as vacancies occur.

The OFFICERS of the Order are, the Prelate, the Bishop of Winchester: the Chancellor, the Bishop of Oxford: the Registrar, the Dean of Windsor: the Herald, Garter King of Arms: and, the Usher of the Black Rod.

Knights of the Garter place the initials "K.G." after their names; and these letters take precedence of all other titles, those of Royalty alone excepted.

The Stalls of the Knights are in the choir of St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, where their Garter-Plates are fixed, and their Banners are displayed.

The INSIGNIA of the Order of the Garter are—The Garter itself, of a light blue originally, now of a dark blue, with border, buckle, and pendant of gold. On it, in golden letters, the Motto—HONI . SOIT . QVI . MAL . Y . PENSE—"Dishonour to him who thinks ill of it;" and not, as it is commonly rendered, "Evil to him that evil thinks."

The Badge of the Order is circular, and formed of a buckled Garter enclosing a Shield of St. George, the whole blazoned in the proper tinctures: it is worn on the left shoulder of the blue velvet Mantle. When irradiated with eight rays of silver or diamonds, a device resembling the Badge in every respect, except that the cross of St. George is enclosed within the Garter without being charged on a Shield, forms the Star of the Order.

No. 434.—The Lesser George, of the Garter.

The Collar, of gold enamelled, is formed of twelve buckled Garters, each encircling a Tudor Rose, and as many knots of intertwined cords. Attached to this Collar is the George—a mounted figure of the Saint in the act of trampling down the dragon and piercing him with his lance. The Collar and George were added to the Insignia by HENRY VII.

The Lesser George, or Jewel, added by HENRY VIII., has the same device placed on an enamelled field, and forming a jewel generally oval in form; it is encircled by a buckled Garter of the Order, and represented in No. 434. It was this Lesser George that CHARLES I., immediately before he suffered, delivered to Archbishop JUXON, with the word, "Remember." As a matter of course, the figure of St.

GEORGE ought always to be represented as a Knight, armed and equipped as one of the Christian chivalry of the Middle Ages—not as a pagan horseman of antiquity, and more particularly not in the guise of such a nude champion as appears on some of our modern coins. The Lesser George, often incorrectly called the Badge, at first was sometimes worn from a gold chain, and sometimes from a black Ribbon. The Colour of the ribbon was changed to sky-blue by Queen ELIZABETH; and, after the accession of the present Royal Family, it was again changed to the dark blue of the broad Ribbon now worn. This Ribbon of the Order crosses the figure of the wearer, passing over the left shoulder, and the Lesser George hangs from it under the right arm.

Since the time of CHARLES II it has been customary for the nearest representatives of a deceased K.G. to return his Insignia to the Sovereign.

Each Officer of the Order, except the Usher, has his own proper Badge.

THE ORDER OF THE THISTLE, OF SCOTLAND, styled “Most Noble and Most Ancient,” and indicated by the Initials “K.T.,” was originally instituted long before the accession of a Scottish Sovereign to the Crown of England; but it is now governed by statutes framed by JAMES II. of Great Britain, ANNE, and GEORGE IV.

The Order consists of the SOVEREIGN and sixteen KNIGHTS. Its OFFICERS are the Dean; the Lord Lyon King of Arms; and the Gentleman Usher of the Green Rod.

The INSIGNIA are—the Badge or Jewel, of gold enamelled, being a figure of St. Andrew holding his silver Saltire and surrounded by rays, the whole within an oval border bearing the Motto—NEMO . ME . IMPUNE . LACESSIT.—“No man with impunity challenges me.”

This Badge, No. 435, is worn from the Collar of the Order, formed of sixteen Thistles alternating with as many bunches of rue-sprigs; or, from a broad dark green Ribbon, which crosses the left shoulder. There are fine examples of these Insignia sculptured upon the Monument of MARY, Queen of Scots, in Westminster Abbey.

The Star of this Order, of silver or diamonds, is in the form of a St. Andrew's Saltire, having its four limbs alternating with the four points of a lozenge: in the centre, surrounded by the Motto, is a Thistle proper.

No. 435.—Badge of the Thistle.

No. 436.—Badge of St. Patrick.

The Most Illustrious ORDER OF ST. PATRICK, OF IRELAND, indicated by the Initials, "K.P.," and instituted in 1783 by GEORGE III., consists of the SOVEREIGN, the GRAND MASTER, and twenty-two KNIGHTS. The OFFICERS are the Prelate, the Archbishop of Armagh: the Chancellor, the Archbishop of Dublin: the Registrar, the Dean of St. Patrick's: Ulster King of Arms: two Heralds and four Pursuivants: the Genealogist: and the Usher of the Black Rod.

The INSIGNIA are—the Badge or Jewel, of gold enamelled, and oval in form. It has a Shamrock (or Trefoil slipped) having on each leaf a Royal Crown, charged on the Saltire of St. Patrick, the field being surrounded by the Motto—QVIS . SEPARABIT . (“who will sever?”) MDCCLXXXIII., on a blue band, which in its turn is encircled with a wreath of Shamrocks on gold. This Badge, No. 436, is worn from the Collar, composed of Roses and Harps, alternating with each other and with knotted cords, a Crown surmounting a Harp being in the centre ; or, the Badge is worn from a broad sky-blue Ribbon, crossing the right shoulder.

The Star resembles the Badge, except that its centre is circular instead of oval ; and that it has eight rays of silver or diamonds, in place of the wreath of Shamrocks.

The Most Honourable ORDER OF THE BATH is an early Institution which, after having long been in abeyance, has been revived and remodelled, and has received fresh statutes in the years 1725, 1815, 1847, and 1859.

The Order, now numbering 985 members, consists of several distinct Groups or Classes, which include, with the SOVEREIGN, the Royal Princes, and some few distinguished Foreigners, Officers of our own Navy and Army, and also Diplomatic and Civil Servants of the Crown.

Another Group is still needed, to render this Order what it ought to be—what, indeed, it ought to have been from the moment of its revival, an ORDER OF MERIT. This additional Group should include all the Heroes of Peace—those sons of England who have deserved well of their Country, without serving as either soldiers, sailors, or diplomatists.

The Three “Classes” of the Order alike include members of the Three Services.

The "First Class," of KNIGHTS GRAND CROSS OF THE BATH—G.C.B., has fifty Naval and Military, and twenty-five Civil Knights.

The "Second Class" numbers (with power to increase these numbers) 102 Naval and Military and fifty Civil KNIGHTS COMMANDERS OF THE BATH—K.C.B.

The "Third Class," not of Knights, but of COMPANIONS OF THE BATH—C.B., has 525 Naval and Military and 200

No. 437.—Naval and Military Badge of the Bath.

Civil Members, who take rank between Knights and Esquires.

The Naval and Military INSIGNIA are—The BADGE, a complicated combination of devices, characteristic of the debased period which produced it. It is represented in No. 437. The Cross is white; the circle with the Motto, red; and the small Scroll in base, blue; all the rest being enamelled "proper." This Badge is worn by the G.C.B.

attached to a Collar, formed of nine Crowns and eight clusters of the Rose, Thistle, and Shamrock issuing from a Sceptre, alternating with seventeen Knots enamelled argent: or, this Badge is suspended by the G.C.B. from a broad red Ribbon, crossing the left shoulder. By the K.C.B. the Badge is worn from a narrower red Ribbon about the neck, or a still narrower at the button-hole. Also, by the C.B. it is attached to a narrow red ribbon at the button-hole.

The Star of the G.C.B. is the Badge, without the Cross and the lions, charged with silver rays having a lozenge-shaped outline. The Star of the K.C.B., which is in the form of a Maltese Cross, omits the Cross of the Badge. The C.B. have no Star.

The Diplomatic and Civil INSIGNIA are—the Badge, No. 438, worn with the same distinctions as the Naval and Military Badge; but the C.B. Badge is of smaller size than the Badges of the two higher Classes.

The Star of the G.C.B. has eight silver rays encircling their Badge in a circular form. The Star of the K.C.B. is the same as that of the Naval and Military K.C.B., omitting the laurel-wreath and the small scroll and motto.

The Motto of the Order—TRIA. JUNCTA. IN. UNO—"Three united in one," refers to the Union of the three Realms of England, Scotland, and Ireland, as well as to that of the three Services, in the Order.

The Stalls of the G.C.B., and those of their Esquires, are in Henry the Seventh's Chapel, Westminster Abbey; but no installation has taken place since 1815. The Dean of Westminster is officially connected with the Order.

No. 438.
Diplomatic and Civil Badge of the Bath.

THE ORDER OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE, founded in 1818, is restricted to natives of Malta and the Ionian Islands.

The Most Exalted ORDER OF THE STAR OF INDIA, instituted by Her Majesty, the Queen; in 1861, to render especial honour to high merit and loyalty in the Indian

No. 439.—Badge of the Star of India.

Empire, on the 24th of May, 1866, was enlarged, and ordained to consist of the SOVEREIGN, a GRAND MASTER, and 175 Ordinary COMPANIONS or MEMBERS; together with such extra and Honorary Members as the Sovereign at any time may be pleased to appoint.

The VICEROY AND GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA for the time being is always the GRAND MASTER. The Ordinary Members are divided into Three Classes:—The “First Class” comprises twenty-five KNIGHTS GRAND COMMANDERS: G.C.S.I. In the “Second Class” there are fifty KNIGHTS COMMANDERS: K.S.I. And, the “Third Class” numbers 100 COMPANIONS: C.S.I.

The original Constitution of this Order limited its Members to the Sovereign, the Grand Master, and 25 Knights.

The INSIGNIA are—The Badge, No. 439, formed of diamonds, having the Motto on a field of light blue enamel, and the bust of the Queen executed as an onyx cameo. This Badge is attached by a mullet to the Collar, composed of heraldic-roses and lotus-flowers alternating with palm-branches, a crown being in the Centre: or, the Badge is worn from a Ribbon of pale blue with white borders, crossing the left shoulder. The Star, of diamonds, has a mullet upon an irradiated field in its centre, within the Motto—HEAVEN’S LIGHT . OUR . GUIDE, the whole being environed with wavy rays having a circular outline.

No. 440.—The Victoria Cross.

The VICTORIA CROSS, of bronze, was instituted by Her Majesty, the Queen, in 1856, to render honour to “conspicuous bravery” in actual conflict, by sea or land. This Cross, No. 440, is worn on the left breast, attached to a blue ribbon for the Navy, and to a red ribbon for the Army. A Bar is attached to the ribbon for every such act of bravery as would have won the Cross.

THE ALBERT MEDAL, No. 441, was instituted by Her Majesty, the Queen, March 13, 1866, to distinguish those who save, or who at the peril of their own lives endeavour to save, life at sea. The Coronet is that of H.R.H. the late PRINCE CONSORT; and the Monogram consists of the Initials, V. A., with an anchor. This Medal is executed in Silver and Bronze for two classes of recipients.

No. 441.—The Albert Medal.

MEDALS and CLASPS OF HONOUR. Various Medals have been ordained and conferred for signal services of the Navy and Army: they are worn attached to Ribbons which vary in their Colours. Clasps are small bars, attached to the Medal-Ribbons, upon each of which the name of some particular action is inscribed. The Name, Rank, and Ship or Regiment of every recipient of a Medal is engraved on the Medal itself. "Good Service Medals" were instituted in 1830: they are worn by seamen of the Navy and Marines from a blue ribbon, and by soldiers from a crimson ribbon. The "Crimean Medals" are worn from a blue ribbon with yellow edges for service in the Crimea itself, and for service in the Baltic from a yellow ribbon with blue edges. Medals for service in India are worn from ribbons striped white and scarlet. English Medals, however honourable, as a prevailing rule are certainly not artistic. It is to be hoped that, at no distant period, they all will be made to assume as high a character as works of Art, as they are eminently distinguished in their capacity of Decorations of Honour.

FOREIGN INSIGNIA, even when bestowed by Sovereign Princes, cannot be worn by any British subject without the express sanction and authority of his own Sovereign. In the existing state of things, it is most desirable that this regulation should be withdrawn ; and, in its stead, that the recipients of Honour Decorations bestowed by Foreign Sovereigns should register the fact of their having received any such distinction at the College of Arms, and should then assume the right to wear their Insignia, unless forbidden to do so by an express command from the Crown.

The Foreign Decorations that now are frequently worn by British officers, soldiers, seamen and marines, are the elegant Cross of the French LEGION OF HONOUR, attached to a red ribbon ; and the "French Military Medal," attached to a yellow ribbon with green edges. The "Sardinian (Italian) War Medal," suspended from a sky-blue ribbon. And the Badge of the Turkish ORDER OF THE MEDJIDIE, worn from a red ribbon having green edges.

CHAPTER XX.

PRECEDENCE. GENEALOGIES.

“ORDERS and DEGREES.

Jar not with Liberty, but well consist.”—PARADISE LOST, Book V.

“The use of ARMS was closely connected with the Study of GENEALOGY.”

DALLAWAY, Science of Heraldry:—A.D. 1793.

WHEN JAMES I. succeeded to the Crown of England while he was actually the King regnant of Scotland, and accordingly became Sovereign of the two Realms, he found it necessary to produce a “Union Flag” for the whole of Great Britain, in consequence of the serious disputes for Precedence that arose between the natives of South and North Britain. Before the time of the peace-loving son of MARY STUART, a Sovereign of another mould, HENRY VIII., had felt the necessity of framing and establishing some definite system of Precedence amongst the various degrees, orders, and ranks of his subjects: and, in 1539, a statute to that effect was enacted. Other statutes afterwards were added; and, from time to time, Royal Letters Patent on the same subject have been issued; and thus the Precedence now recognised and in use amongst us has been established.

It will be observed, that tenure of office in certain cases constitutes actual Rank: also, that conceded Rank gives a fixed Precedence.

THE ORDER OF PRECEDENCE

The SOVEREIGN.

The Prince of Wales.

The Younger Sons of the Sovereign.

The Grandsons of the Sovereign.

The Cousins of the Sovereign.

The Archbishop of Canterbury.

The Lord Chancellor.

The Archbishop of York.

The Archbishop of Armagh.

The Archbishop of Dublin.

The Lord High Treasurer : now represented by the "First Lord of the Treasury," popularly styled "Prime Minister."

The Lord President of the Council.

The Lord Privy Seal.

The following GREAT OFFICERS OF STATE precede all Peers of their own Degree—that is, if Dukes, they precede all other Dukes ; if Earls, all other Earls ; &c. :—

The Lord Great Chamberlain.

The Lord High Constable.

The Earl Marshal.

The Lord Steward of the Royal Household.

The Lord Chamberlain of the Royal Household.

The Secretaries of State, being Peers.

The Peers of each Degree take Precedence in their own Degree, according to their Patents of Creation.

Dukes.

Marquesses.

Eldest Sons of Dukes.

Earls.

Eldest Sons of Marquesses.

Younger Sons of Dukes.

Viscounts.

Eldest Sons of Earls.

Younger Sons of Marquesses.

Bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester.

Bishops, according to Seniority of Consecration.

Barons.

The Speaker of the House of Commons.

The Treasurer and the Comptroller of the Royal Household.

The Master of the Horse.

The Secretaries of State, when not Peers.

Eldest Sons of Viscounts.

Younger Sons of Earls.

Eldest Sons of Barons.

Knights of the Garter, Thistle, and St. Patrick, not being Peers.

Privy Counsellors.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

The Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench.

The Master of the Rolls.

The Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.

The Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer.

The Judge Ordinary.

The Lords Justices of Chancery.

The Vice Chancellors.

The Judges of the Queen's Bench.

The Judges of the Common Pleas.

The Barons of the Exchequer.

Younger Sons of Viscounts.

Younger Sons of Barons.

Paronets.

Knights Grand Crosses of the Bath

Knights Grand Commanders of the Star of India.

Knights Grand Crosses of St. Michael and St. George.

Knights Commanders of the various Orders.

Knights.

Serjeants-at-Law.

Masters in Chancery and in Lunacy.

Companions of the Various Orders.

Eldest Sons of the Younger Sons of Peers.

Eldest Sons of Baronets.

Eldest Sons of Knights.

Esquires to Knights of Orders.

Esquires:—Including the Eldest Sons of the Sons of Viscounts and Barons, the eldest Sons of all the younger Sons of Peers, and their eldest Sons in perpetual Succession: the younger Sons of Baronets: persons holding the Queen's Commission, or who may be styled "Esquire" by the Queen in any Official Document: Members of the Royal Academy of Arts: Barristers at Law: Masters of Arts, and Bachelors of Law.

Clergymen.

Gentlemen.

THE PRECEDENCE OF WOMEN

is determined, before Marriage, by the Rank and Dignity, but not by the Office, of their Father.

All the unmarried Sisters in any family have the same Degree, which is the Degree that their eldest Brother holds (or would hold) amongst men. Thus:—Of the Sons of an Earl the eldest alone has an honorary Title of Nobility, and is styled "My Lord," while all the Daughters of an Earl have a similar honorary Title, and are styled "My Lady."

By Marriage Women share the Dignities and Precedence of their Husbands: but, the strictly Official Dignity of a Husband is not imparted to a Wife, as in the case of the Archbishops and Bishops.

The Dignities which Ladies have by Birth or by right of Inheritance, are not imparted by Marriage to their Husbands: nor does Marriage with an inferior in Dignity in any way affect the Precedence that a Lady may enjoy by Birth, Inheritance, or Creation—both her own Precedence and that of her Husband remain as before their Marriage.

In the ROYAL FAMILY the following Precedence takes effect :—

The Princess of Wales.

The Daughters of the Sovereign.

The Wives of the Younger Sons of the Sovereign.

The Wives of the Eldest Grandsons of the Sovereign. .

The Granddaughters of the Sovereign.

The Wives of the Younger Grandsons of the Sovereign.

The Cousins of the Sovereign.

To whatever Precedence she may be entitled by Birth, the Wife of a Peer always takes her rank, and therefore takes her actual Precedence, from her Husband.

The Widow of a Peer, so long as she remains a Widow, retains the rank she enjoyed whilst married: but, should she contract a second Marriage, her Precedence then is determined either by the rank of her second Husband, or by the rank that was her own by Birth and which she enjoyed before her first Marriage.

The Wife of the Eldest Son of any degree precedes all her Husband's Sisters, and also all other Ladies having the same degree of rank with them. Thus :—the Wife of the Eldest Son of an Earl takes Precedence of all Daughters of Earls. In actual practice, however, by a principle of Precedence that is accepted and adopted in all families of the same degree amongst themselves, the Sisters in every case have their place immediately after the Wife of their own Eldest Brother.

GENEALOGIES.

GENEALOGIES, the Records of the Descents and Alliances of Families, are necessarily associated with the Armorial Ensigns borne by those Families, and by the several Members and Branches of them. Still, it does not apparently follow, in the same manner, as a matter of necessity, that the study and investigation of Genealogies should be interesting and even attractive, because interest and attractiveness are inseparable from Heraldry. And yet, I do not hesitate to claim for genealogical researches the favourable regard of students of Armoury, on the very ground of the interest which they are certain to feel in such researches; and also in confident reliance on that inherent power of attraction, inseparable from the subject itself, that will not fail both to win their favourable regard, and to lead them on from one inquiry to another.

The very act of tracing up some eminent and illustrious personage, from generation to generation of his forefathers, noting down the alliances that have interwoven one thread of a brilliant line with others not less lustrous; or, the reverse of this process, the following the lineage of some worthy of the olden time onward down the stream, observing both the tributaries that flow into the main channel and the streamlets that issue from it—all this, when once it has been systematically undertaken, leads the student through the most picturesque regions of historical romance.

The popular idea of Genealogy may be, that it consists in placing in a formal order of arrangement a series of dry names, connected with dates that (if it be possible) are even more dry. It is not uncommon to dispose of many things precisely in the same way, when an opinion is formed without even the slightest attempt to judge of a question by its true merits—it is so easy to decline the trouble and to avoid the effort attendant on inquiry and investigation, and so pleasant to become the possessor of an “opinion” and “views,” without any outlay in acquiring them. A Map has no value in the estimation of those who ignore Geography: the claims of Archæology are disregarded by all who are content to remain in ignorance even of what it implies: and History itself becomes and continues to be a dead letter, so long as an acquaintance is formed only with the exterior of its volumes. And, in like manner, Genealogy appears under a very different aspect to those who know it only by name, and to lovers of Biography and History who are familiar with its lucid and yet ever suggestive guidance. Without written Genealogies, who can clearly understand the political and historical position of the rival Princes of the red and white Roses; or of HENRY VII. and the “last of the Plantagenets;” or of Queens ELIZABETH TUDOR, MARY STUART, and JANE GREY? Or who, without similar aid, will follow out the fortunes of the Houses of BEAUCHAMP and NEVILLE and DUDLEY, and connect them with the existing noble lord of Warwick Castle; or, when reading of the DE CLARES, the DE BOHUNS, or the DE PERCIES, will see at a glance the connection between “STRONGBOW” and the “red Earl GILBERT,” or will understand the significance of the white swan Badge of the DE STAFFORDS, or will read at sight the quartered Shield of the Duke of NORTHUMBERLAND, of to-day, and will discern the line that connects the living Earl PERCY with the “HOTSPUR” whose fame was two centuries old when SHAKESPEARE wrote of him? And further, who, that is unable to accomplish such things as these, can appreciate History, can enjoy it and apply its lessons aright?

In arranging a Genealogy the utmost conciseness is essential, all details being left for full description elsewhere. All the members of the same family are placed side by side, on the same level, in their order of seniority ; and all are connected by lines with one another and with their parents. Successive generations also, throughout all the branches of any family, or in allied families, have their places on the same levels ; and the connecting and distinguishing lines are continued throughout. Examples of Genealogies treated in the most scientific and yet simple manner, easy to be understood, and perfect as models for students, may be obtained in any Part of the "Herald and Genealogist," edited by Mr. J. G. NICHOLS, F.S.A., 25, Parliament Street, Westminster. I refer to this excellent Periodical, because it is not possible for me here in the space at my disposal to set forth a really useful example of a Genealogy : and, I must add, because it is most desirable that students of Heraldry should form such an acquaintance with Mr. Nichols, as may be acquired through his works. "Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica," edited by Dr. J. J. HOWARD, F.S.A., is another bi-monthly Periodical, which ought to be in the hands of all Genealogists.

In Genealogies, this mark = denotes alliance by marriage, and it is placed between the names of a husband and wife : and the lines that proceed from this mark, thus, = point out their issue. The initials S.P. (of the Latin words Sine Prole, "without issue") show where a line or a branch ceases. Other abbreviations and signs in general use will suggest their own signification.

As I began this Chapter with quotations, so with a quotation I conclude it. "There are some persons," writes Mr. LOWER, in his "Curiosities of Heraldry" (p. 292), "who cannot discriminate between the taste for pedigree" (or genealogy) "and the pride of ancestry. Now these two feelings, though they often combine in one individual, have no necessary connection with each other. Man is said to be a hunting animal. Some hunt foxes ; others for fame or fortune. Others hunt in the intellectual field ; some for the arcana of Nature and of mind ; some for the roots of words, or the origin of things. I am fond of hunting out a pedigree." So am I. And, gentle reader, when you have joined the chase genealogical, I promise you, so also will you be.

CHAPTER XXI.

*The College of Arms. The Lyon Office of Scotland. Grants of Arms.
Tax on "Armorial Bearings," and on "Arms Found."*

"They were conspicuous for judgment, experience, learning, and elegance; they gained honour wherever they were employed."

NOBLE: History of the College of Arms.

"What is your Crest and Motto?—Send name and county to ——'s Heraldic Office. For plain Sketch, 3s. 6d. In heraldic colours, 6s."

MORNING NEWSPAPERS.

I. THE HERALDS OF ENGLAND, who before had been attached to the Household either of the Sovereign or of some Personage of exalted rank, were incorporated as a Fraternity by RICHARD III., a Prince whose historical reputation is by no means in harmony with that early act of his reign, which has done such good service to English History—the Foundation and Establishment of the COLLEGE OF ARMS, or, as it is commonly called, the HERALDS' COLLEGE.

The Letters Patent, issued for this purpose by RICHARD III., bear date March the 2nd, 1483, the first year of his reign. Very important privileges and immunities, with high powers and authority, were granted to the incorporated Heralds: and the "right fair and stately house," called "Pulteney's Inn," situate in the metropolitan parish of All Saints, was assigned to them as their permanent official residence. The Charter granted to the Heralds by the last Plantagenet Sovereign was confirmed by his successors.

The buildings of the College were destroyed by the great fire of 1666; but all the records and documents fortunately escaped, having been removed to Whitehall; and the edifice was subsequently re-built, chiefly at the cost of the Heralds themselves, as it now stands between St. Paul's Cathedral and the Thames. There, in the College of Arms, are still carefully preserved all that the early Heralds recorded and transmitted to our times. There, not the least valuable of the contents of the College, an unique Library is in the keeping of Guardians, who understand its true uses, as they appreciate its preciousness. And there also the Head Quarters of English Heraldry are as duly established, as those of the British Army are at the Horse Guards in Whitehall.

The great change that has come upon London since the Heralds re-built their official home, has caused the College of Arms now to appear out of place in its original position in the City. Other changes, which follow in such rapid succession in that busy neighbourhood, render it by no means improbable that the site of their College may be required for some great "City improvement;" and so the Heralds may be constrained to establish themselves in the more congenial regions of the metropolitan "far west." This, as I am disposed to consider, is one of those consummations that are devoutly to be desired.

The times have been in which Heraldry could not number amongst its true friends the official Heralds of the College of Arms: but, happily, a very different, and in many most important respects a thoroughly satisfactory condition of things now obtains at the College. So far as the Heralds are concerned, as a body of learned, accomplished, and courteous gentlemen, Heraldry now is admirably represented amongst us, and faithfully supported. What still is deficient in the existing constitution of the College of Arms, as a National Institution, is adaptation to existing circumstances, sentiments, and requirements. It is but a truism to assert that, as a National Institution, the College of Arms does not fill its proper position : and, to all who are familiar with the facts of the case it is equally obvious, that this is simply because the College does not vindicate its indisputable title to that position which really is its own.

Heraldry is decidedly popular. This popularity also is assuming a more practical, and at the same time a more enduring form, through gradually becoming the result of a correct appreciation of the true character of Heraldry, and of its intrinsic value. At a time in which people are beginning to feel and to admit that they ought to know something about Heraldry, the College of Arms ought to take the lead in making Heraldry still better understood, still more justly appreciated, still more popular. The time, also, is indeed come in which it is the bounden duty of the College of Arms to impress upon the community at large, that the sole source and fountain-head of authority in all matters armorial, under the Sovereign, centres in itself. This is to be accomplished by the same process, and only by the same process, by which the College of Arms may win for itself thorough popularity and universal confidence. If the College requires fresh or increased powers, application to that effect should be made to the Legislature. The Heraldry of Scotland, as I write, is in the act of being dealt with by Parliament : and it would be equally easy to obtain such a statute as would enable English Heraldry to do justice to itself, while fulfilling its own proper duties.

Without abating or compromising in the slightest degree its own dignity or the dignity of Heraldry, the College of Arms requires to be transmuted from an exclusive into a popular Institution. It requires, not indeed to have its object and aim and system of action changed, but to have them expanded, and expanded so widely as to comprehend all the heraldic requirements of the age. This is a subject of too urgent importance not to be noticed here ; but still, it is not possible to do more than to notice it in very general terms.

Upon one specific point, however, a few plain words may be spoken without hesitation, and may be left by themselves without comment. The Fees and Charges of all kinds for granting, matriculating, confirming, and recording the rightful possession of armorial Insignia must be arranged upon a perfectly fresh system, with such provisions and modifications as may adapt them to every variety of circumstance and of requirement. This is a question which can be regarded only from one point of view by every true lover of Heraldry, and consequently by every true friend of the College of Arms.

II. The National Heraldic Corporation in Scotland, entitled the LYON OFFICE, is under the presidency of the Lord Lyon King of Arms. The Chief of the Scottish official Heralds since May, 1796, has been a Peer of that realm ; and the duties of the office, accordingly, have been discharged for seventy years by a Lyon Depute. But, on the death of the last Earl of KINNOUL, in February, 1866, it was determined to remodel in some respects the arrangements of the Lyon Office ; and now Mr. GEORGE BURNETT, who had long been "Lyon Depute," has been appointed by Her Majesty to be "Lyon King." The Arms of the Lyon Office I have already given, No. 265.

The action of the Scottish Lord Lyon King of Arms, and of the Institution over which he presides, after having degenerated from the worthy standard of earlier days, has revived under far happier conditions, and with prospects that are eminently gratifying. It may be fairly expected, indeed, that the most salutary results will be produced by the very decided "tendency" that for some time has existed, "to cultivate the rules and principles of that earlier age, to which"—writes Mr. Seton—"we are indebted for a system of Scottish Heraldry, whose purity certainly has not been surpassed in any other corner of Christendom." These words occur in a highly interesting memoir of the Lyon Office, in the fourth chapter of the work entitled "The Law and Practice of Heraldry in Scotland," an able and admirable volume, published in 1863 in Edinburgh, which shows the growing popularity of a true Heraldry north of the Tweed, and proves that in the author, Mr. SETON, Scottish Heraldry possesses an advocate no less powerful than zealous and judicious.

III. Arms and Armorial Insignia are granted only through the College of Arms in England, and through the Lyon Office in Scotland, in both realms with the direct sanction of the CROWN. In Ireland all Grants are made by Ulster King of Arms, with the sanction of the Lord Lieutenant.

It is to be observed and kept in remembrance that, as a Rule, the sole right to Arms is a Grant from the College or the Crown, or Inheritance by lineal descent from an ancestor to whom a Grant was made. Some few exceptional cases may occur, from time to time, in which armorial ensigns may become lawful property, and therefore may be rightly borne, without either Grant or lineal Inheritance. These cases are strictly exceptional, and not to be regarded as precedents for general usage: moreover, in them the right and title to Arms, however obtained, is sanctioned and confirmed by lawful authority.

All English "Grants" and "Confirmations of Arms" Confirmations, that is, of the Claims of certain individuals to bear certain Arms, by some right and title duly set forth and approved) are formally and regularly recorded, with a full blazon of the insignia, at the College.

It is very greatly to be desired that, in addition to this time-honoured usage of the Heralds in making these records, some simple plan could be adopted for the periodical registration at the College of Arms of all armorial insignia that are borne by right. Almost equally desirable, also, it would be to make a corresponding registration, as far as it might be possible, of whatever insignia are borne without any right. The contents of both registers would form unquestionably useful publications of a periodical character. In connection with any such project as I have just suggested, it appears to me that good service might be rendered to the cause of true Heraldry amongst us, if Badges and Mottoes (without any other insignia whatever) were formally granted by the College, under certain conditions, and at the cost of a small Fee.

In fresh Grants of Arms, as in so many formal documents, something of the early form of Expression, with some traces of its piquant quaintness, are still retained. Very quaint indeed, and very extravagant also, is the style that was generally adopted by the Heralds of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and yet characteristic of both the men and their times. As an example of one of these old documents, an example of no common interest in itself, I now give the Grant of Arms to JOHN SHAKESPERE, the Poet's father, in the year 1596. Two draft copies of the original Grant are preserved in the College of Arms; the following transcript is printed from the later of the two copies, the earlier having been used to supply any word or passage that now is wanting in the other. The insertions thus obtained are printed in brackets.

GRANT OF ARMS TO JOHN SHAKESPERE, A.D. 1596.

TO ALL and singuler Noble and Gentelmen of what estate [or] degree bearing arms to whom these presentes shall come, William Dethick alias Garter principall King of Armes sendethe greetings.

Know yee that, whereas by the authoritie and auntyent pryveleges pertheyning to my office from the Quenes most excellent Mate and by her highnesse most noble and victorious progenitors, I am to take generall notice and record and to make declaration and testimonie for all causes of arms and matters of Gentry thorough out all her Majestes Kingdoms, Domyinions, Principalities, Isles, and Provinces, To th' end that, as manie gentelmen, by theyre auntyent names of families, kynredes and descentes, have and enjoye certeyne enseignes and cotes of arms, So it is verie expedient in all ages that some men for theyre valeant factes, magnanimite, vertu, dignities, and desertes, may use and beare suche tokens of honour and worthinesse, whereby theyre name and good fame may be the better knowen and divulged, and theyre children and posterite in all vertu (to the service of theyre Prynce and Contrie) encouraged. Wherefore being solicited and by credible report informed that John Shakespeare of Stratford uppon Avon in the counte of Warwik, whose parentes and late antecessors* were for theyre faithfull and va[leant service advaunced and rewarded by the most prudent] prince King Henry the Seventh of [famous memorie, sythence which tyme they have continewed at] those partes, being of good reputacion [and credit; and that the] said John hathe maryed [Mary, daughter and one of the heys of Robert Arden, of Wilmcote, in the said] counte, esquire.† In consideration whereof, and for the encouragement of his posterite, to whom such Blazon [or Atchevement] by the auntyent custome of the lawes of armes maie descend, I the said Garter King of Armes have assigned, graunted and by these presentes confirmed this shield or cote of arms, viz. Gould, on a bend sables a speare of the first, steeled argent; and for his crest or cognizance a falcon, his winges displayed, argent, standing on a wrethe of his coullors, supporting a speare gould, steeled as aforesaid, sett upon a helmett with mantelles and tasselles as hath ben accustomed and dothe more playnely appeare depicted on this margent. Signefieng hereby, and by the authorite of my office aforesaid ratifieng, that it shalbe lawfull for the sayd John Shakespeare gent. and for his cheldren, yssue and posterite (at all tymes and places convenient) to bear and make demonstracion of the said Blazon or Atchevement uppon theyre Shieldes, Targets, Escucheons, Cotes of arms, Pennons, Guydons, Ringes, Edefices, Buylldinges, Utensiles, Lyveries, Tombes or Monuments, or otherwise, for all lawfull warrlyke factes or civile use and exercises, according to the lawes of armes, without let or interruption of any other person or persons for use or bearing the same. In wit-

* Above the word antecessors is written Grandfather.

† Gent. was first written, and it is altered to esquire.

nesse and perpetuall remembrance hereof I have hereunto subscribed my name, and fastened the seale of my office endorzed with the signett of my armes, At the Office of Armes, London, the xx. daye of October, the xxxviij. yeare of the reigne of our Sovereigne Lady Elizabeth, by the grace of God Quene of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faythe, etc. 1596.

Like other documents of its class, in this Grant the language is framed after certain regular forms; so that it is to be read without that exact observance of particular expressions, which is rightly bestowed upon legal and historical records. The interest inseparable from this Grant is enhanced in no slight degree by the strong probability that John Shakespere made his application to the College of Arms by the advice and in consequence of the request of his son. Had the worthy Garter been able to divine the "dignities and desertes" of the son, he might possibly have employed formal language of a still more complimentary character, when drawing up a Grant of Arms for the father.

A much more curious specimen of the heraldic style and form of expression (and also of the spelling) of the earlier days of the Queen ELIZABETH era, is a Grant of Augmentation and Crest, by LAWRENCE DALTON, Norroy King of Arms, to JOHN BENNETT, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, Gentleman, A.D. 1560. The Preamble to this Grant, which is printed in full in "Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica," (p. 48), is thus written:—

To All and Singuler as well nobles and gentles as kings herauldes and officers of Armes as others wch thes presentes shall see Reade or heare I awrence Dalton Esquire Al's Norrey Kinge of Armes of thest and west p'tyes of Englande fro the Ryver of trent northwarde Sendythe Due and humble comendacons and greatinge fforasmuche as awncyentlye fro the begynnyng and not withowt great Delyberacon Equitie and Reason hyt hathe byn by the moste noble and famous princes Constytutyd and ordeynynd that men of wysdom knoledge vertue and of noble lyefe and Coorage have byn notorycwslye commendyd to the Woorlde wth Sonndrye monumentes and Remembrances wth tokens of honnor for A testamonye of theyre good Desertes As Amonge the Romayns ye Erecc'on of Statues and Images wth tytles and Appellac'ons of honnour And of more latre Dayes wth the moste p'te of nac'ons bearinge of Signes and tokens in Shyldes callyd Armes wch be the Demonstrac'ons and Evidences of noblenes vertue and woorthynes that to eu'ry man accordinge to theyre Desertes be Dyu'slye Dys-trybutyd Wherby such signes and tokens of the woorthye and cooragious might appeare before the cowarde vnwoorthye and Ignorant Even so yt ys yet obs'vyd that suche wch have merytyd or donne com'endable s'vice to theyre prince or cuntrye or by theyre woorthye and Lawdable lyefe Do Daylye encrease in vertue wysdom and knowledge shulde not be forgotten and so put in oblyvyon but rewardyd wth som token of honnor for the same the Rather to move and styrre other to the Imytac'on of lyke noblenes vertue and woorthynes ffor wch purpose hyt was not therefor withowt great provydençe ordeynyd and yet ys that there Shulde be officers and herauldes of Armes to whose office hyt shulde be appropryate to kepe in Regestre tharmes pedegrees and Descentes of nobles and gentles wth theyre woorthye and valyant actes and to have power and awethorytye to allowe and Ratefye vnto the woorthye Som awgmentac'on token or Remembrance of noblenes for theyre seyde woorthynes And now beinge Desyryd —

And so forth, worthy Mr. Norroy having forgotten such "signes and tokens" as stops, while carefully showing what style and form it is not desirable for us to adopt, however excellent may be his system of building up honourable insignia upon a foundation of nobleness, virtue, and worthiness.

I add one other early document of another kind, which is an excellent model for present use by the Heralds of our own days, the orthography having by them been duly corrected.

EXAMPLE OF A CONFIRMATION OR RECORD OF ARMS:—
 Theis are the anncient Armes and Creast, belonging to the name and famely of LEECHFORDE in the County of Surrey, descended from the LEECHFORDS in Buckinghamsheire. Which at the request of SR RICHARD LEECHFORDE of Shelwood in the County of Surrey Knight, I WILL'M SEGAR Garter, Principall King of Armes have blasoned, and sett forth in coullors, according as they are here depicted in the margent.

Viz." (here follows a written blazon). . . . "Testifying hereby the saide armoryes to belong vnto the saide SR RICHARD LEECHFORD and to his yssue, to vse, beare, and shewe forth at all tymes, and in all places, at their free lib'ty and pleasure. In Witnes wherof. . . .

&c. &c., with Seal and Signature, and the Date 3rd of JAMES I.

I presume that an argument in support of the abolition of all Taxation of "Armorial Bearings," on the plea of the utter absurdity of a tax upon an honourable distinction, would be met with the reply that "Armorial Bearings" are taxed purely as "luxuries," and without the slightest reference to their intrinsic character. If the validity of this plea must be admitted, still this tax might be levied with what may be styled a becoming heraldic discrimination.

For example :—Arms distinguished by "Augmentations of Honour" might be altogether exempted; a higher rate might be fixed in the case of Arms that are ensigned with Coronets, and that display Supporters. Arms borne by unquestionable right, and which are duly recorded at the College, might be rated at a comparatively low charge, certainly not to exceed five shillings a year: and a Badge borne alone might be rated at one-half the tax for a Shield of Arms with Crest or Badge. On the other hand, all Arms or armorial insignia borne with a very questionable right, or without even the pretence of any right whatever, might be subjected to the ordinary tax for "Armorial Bearings" of their class multiplied (according to circumstances) by four, six, or ten.

The tax estimated by the aid of the multiplication-table, that has just been suggested, would extend, under a special schedule possessing a high multiplying power, to any self-constituted "Establishment" or "Office," which, powerless to "grant" Arms, undertakes—in consideration of a very trifling fee—to "find," and either to "sketch" or to "colour" them. Exceedingly simple is the process, by means of which this undertaking is accomplished. It consists in consulting a printed Armoury; and, when the desired "Arms" have been "found" in its well-stored columns, they then at once are assigned to the applicant, in conformity with the comprehensive and beautifully simple theory, that all persons having the same surname and who also live (or were born) in the same county are equally entitled to bear the same Arms. Probably it does not occur to the patrons of advertising Heraldry-dealers, that upon precisely the same principle every person who has the same "name and county" with any officer who may be "found" in the Navy or the Army List, might assert a right to whatever rank and title such an officer may enjoy by virtue of his commission.

The almost universal desire to possess some kind of armorial insignia, implies a corresponding recognition of the necessity to obtain them from some Institution or Personage, supposed to be competent and authorised both to determine what they should be, and to impart a right to accept and to assume and bear them. It rests with the Heralds of the College of Arms to take the initiative in a course of action, which would direct all aspirants for heraldic distinctions, as a matter of course, to their own doors. The Heralds, who really are Heralds, and who alone are real Heralds, may rely on the support of Public Opinion. If a fictitious Heraldry is not only prevalent, but in some sense actually in the ascendant, it is not because the counterfeit is preferred to the genuine, but because it is unconsciously mistaken for it. In very many instances, indeed, a determination to obtain "Arms" is coupled with an ignorance of Heraldry so complete, as to ignore the existence of any such thing as a Heraldry that is fictitious.

A popular College of Arms, without any serious difficulty, might establish its own authority with all classes of the community ; and, at the same time, it would not fail to impress upon the public mind the very decided difference that exists between the heraldic and the non-heraldic acceptation of the expression—" an escutcheon of pretence." Much real good would certainly result from the rude shock that would be given to many a complacent display of armorial insignia, by showing the proud blazonry to be abated with the baton sinister of heraldic untruth and unwarrantable assumption. And better still it would be to show to all who possess, or who desire to possess and to bear "Arms," that the "Pride of Heraldry" is a worthy and a noble pride, because it is the Pride of Truth and Right.

CHAPTER XXII.

MISCELLANEOUS :—Coins. Seals. Heraldry in Architecture—in Monuments—in Illuminations—in Encaustic Tiles. Heraldic Personal Ornaments, and various Heraldic Decorations. Conclusion.

"The Spandrels over the Wall-arcading are exquisitely beautiful. . . . Those in the western arm contained Shields of a large number of the great men of the day . . . the few which remain are nobly executed."—GLEANINGS FROM WESTMINSTER ABBEY, by G. G. Scott, R.A. : 2nd Edition p. 33.

I. THE HERALDRY OF THE COINAGE, in addition to the Shields of Arms of successive Sovereigns, exemplifies the changes that have taken place in the form and adornment of the Crown, and it also is rich in various Badges and Devices having an historical significance.

In Coins the Royal Shield is sometimes quartered by a cross charged upon it, as in the silver penny of EDWARD VI. A mediæval ship, having a sail covered with heraldic blazonry, appears on the Noble—a coin worthy of its name. A figure of the King in armour (not particularly well proportioned to the size of the vessel), his sword in one hand, and his Shield of arms in the other, is also represented in these fine examples of mediæval numismatic art. A ship without any sail, but in its stead charged with the Royal Shield heightened by a Cross, forms the reverse of another excellent coin, the Angel, the obverse bearing a figure of St. MICHAEL with his lance thrusting down the dragon. The Angel of EDWARD IV. on either side of the Cross has the initial E and the white rose of York ; and the legend is—

PER : CRVCEM : T̄V̄A : SALVA : NOS : XTE : REDEMPT : ("By thy Cross save us, O Redeemer Christ!"). A Crowned Rose, with a Royal Cypher, is another favourite device; as in the Shilling of HENRY VIII., with the legend—POSVI : DĒV : ADIVTOREM : MEVM : ("I have placed God (before me as) my helper").

Such are a few examples of the early Heraldry of English Coins. More recently, and particularly in our own Coinage, Heraldry and Art have declined together, so that feeble designs, but too commonly executed with lamentable consistency, are associated with heraldic inaccuracies which continue uncorrected to this day—witness the tressure of Scotland always incorrectly blazoned on the Royal Shield; and poor BRITANNIA sitting forlorn on the copper and bronze coinage, as if conscious of being constrained to display on her oval Shield an obsolete blazonry, that places the reign of Queen VICTORIA in the eighteenth century!*

II. To what has been already said on the value of heraldic SEALS I desire here to add a few words, in the hope of inducing all students of Heraldry to study them with the most diligent care.

Casts of fine impressions are not difficult to obtain. Almost every accessible fine Seal has been copied by Mr. Ready, of the British Museum, who supplies admirable casts at a very moderate cost. In like manner, Casts of Scottish Seals may be obtained from Mr. H. Laing, of Elder Street, Edinburgh. The most satisfactory casts are made in gutta-percha, which may be gilt by simply rubbing a gold powder with a soft brush upon them, after slightly warming their surfaces. Moulds for reproducing casts or impressions may be made in gutta-percha; and from these moulds casts, also in gutta-percha, may be obtained. The process is very simple: the gutta-percha, softened by immersion in hot water, is pressed upon an impression in relief, until a perfect intaglio is formed. When this mould is cold and hard, it will stamp an impression upon gutta-percha softened in the same manner.

* The specimens of the existing Coinage of Europe, displayed at the present time in the central edifice of this year's Universal Exposition, at Paris, show that if the art of the English Mint is now at a low ebb, the prevailing standard of numismatic art is not a single degree higher, the coins of France alone being in many respects an honourable exception to the general rule.

I add to the examples of fine heraldic Seals that I have already given, the richly traceried Seal bearing the armorial Shield of JOHN, Lord BARDOLF, of Wormegay in Norfolk, about A.D. 1350; No. 442. This most beautiful Seal, which in the original in diameter is only one and one-sixth inches, has been somewhat enlarged in the engraving, in order to show the design more plainly. The arms of BARDOLF are —Az., three cinquefoils, or.

No. 442.—Seal of Lord Bardolf.

The liberality and kindness of Mr. Laing enable me to associate with the Seal of Lord BARDOLF a small group of additional examples of Scottish Seals: two of them are good illustrations as well of English as of Scottish Heraldry, and they exemplify the usage of introducing Gothic traceries into the composition of Seals with Shields of Arms: in both these examples, however, the leading outlines only of the traceries remain, and the rich cusping (which is so perfect in the Seal of Lord BARDOLF) is lost. No. 443, the Seal of WILLIAM MURE, A.D. 1397, has a Shield bearing—Arg., on a fesse az. three mullets of the field.

No. 443.—Seal of William Mure.

No. 444.—Seal of Thomas Monypeny.

No. 444, the Seal of THOMAS MONYPENY, A.D. 1415, has the Shield couchée charged with Az., a chevron between three crosses-crosslets fitchée issuing from as many crescents arg.: the Crest, on a helm, is a bird, probably a popinjay or parrot. The Seal of RICHARD STUART, No. 445, probably about 1350, may be compared with No.

No. 445.—Seal of Richard Stuart.

414, p. 258: in the smaller and earlier example, the solitary individual who represents the crew may be assumed to be Richard Stuart himself; his vessel displays two banners which are evidently affected by contrary currents of air, and a pennon.

The noble Seal, No. 446, engraved from a most perfect impression recently discovered appended to a document in the guardianship of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster, represents its illustrious owner, THOMAS DE BEAUCHAMP, K.G., third Earl of WARWICK, in armour, with his shield and jupon charged with the armorial insignia of Beauchamp, (gu., a fesse between six crosses crosslets or), and with the same insignia repeated upon the bardings of the charger upon which the Earl is mounted. The engraving of the Seal itself appears on the Frontispiece to this Volume: and the Counter-Seal, one of the most beautiful and most perfect examples in existence of the early seal-engraver's art, is here represented in No. 447. The Shield displayed on this Counter-seal is charged only with the Arms of the NEWBURGHs (chequée or and az., a chevron erm.), from whom the Earldom of Warwick passed by inheritance to the House of Beauchamp. The inscription is commenced on the Seal, No. 446, and continued on the Counter-seal, No. 447, and is as follows:—S: THOE: COMITIS: WARRWYCHIE: ANNO: REGNI: REGIS: E: T' CII: POST: CŌQVESTV̄: ANGLIE: SEPTIO: DECIO: ET: REGNI: SVI: FRANCIE: QVARTO—"The Seal of Thomas, Earl of Warwick, in the seventeenth year of the reign of King Edward III. (of that name) after the Conquest of England, and the fourth of his reign over France." Thus, the date of the execution of this fine Seal is the year 1344. The Earl himself died in 1369.

A second Beauchamp Seal is also represented in the Frontispiece. This is the Seal of RICHARD DE BEAUCHAMP, K.G., fifth Earl of WARWICK, who died in the year 1439. The Heraldry in this example is particularly interesting. The Shield, charged with Newburgh and Beauchamp quarterly, is couchée from the helm of the Earl which is ensigned with his coronet and crest; and on either side is a bear with a ragged staff, the famous Badges of the BEAUCHAMPS : No. 448. The Inscription is—SIGILL : RIC : DE : BELLO : CAMPO : COMIT : WARWICII—"The Seal of Richard de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick" (see pages 231 and 246).

No. 447.—Counter-Seal of Earl Thomas de Beauchamp : A.D. 1344.

At the present time the popularity of English Heraldry extends, beyond the realm of England and the entire British Empire, to the United States of America, where a very great interest in the Herald's Art is both felt and expressed. And a remarkable illustration of this popularity of Heraldry with the great nation who speak our language on the other side of the Atlantic, is shown at Boston by the publication in that city of a very able and well illustrated periodical devoted exclusively to matters connected with Heraldry and Genealogy : and also by a gentleman of the same city, Mr. W. H. WHITMORE, having very recently published there a well-written, handsome, and copiously illustrated volume, conceived in the true heraldic spirit, entitled "Elements of Heraldry ; with an Essay upon the Use of Coat-Armour in the United States." The concluding Chapter of this singularly interesting work is devoted to "Heraldry in America," and it commences with a description, accompanied by fac-simile wood-cuts, of a number of the Seals of Arms which the original settlers in New England took over with them from the mother country. The courteous kindness of Mr. Whitmore has enabled me to insert a few of his examples, which, while characteristic of the debased Heraldic art of the seventeenth century, form a little group of Seals that have peculiar claims of their own upon our regard. The original Seals (of which he has engraved twenty-nine examples), Mr. Whitmore informs us, "were all undeniably engraved in England."

Ex. 1.

Ex. 2.

Ex. 3.

Example 1. Seal of SAMUEL, son of Governor RICHARD BELLINGHAM, used in 1650 : it bears the arms of the Lincolnshire family of that name—Sa., three bugle-horns arg.

Ex. 2. From the Will of Governor THOMAS DUDLEY, A.D. 1654.

Ex. 3. Arg., a chevron between three leverets courant sa. : the Seal of Governor JOHN LEVERETT, also of an old Lincolnshire family.

Ex. 4. Arg., a Cross between four escallops sa. : from

Ex. 4.

Ex. 5.

Ex. 6.

Ex. 7.

the Seal of JOHN COGGESHALL, of Rhode Island, first President under the patent of 1647-48, &c. A descendant of an English family long seated in Essex.

Ex. 5. From the Seal of JOHN LEVERETT, of Cambridge, in the United States, grandson of Governor LEVERETT, who on his tombstone is styled "armiger."

Ex. 6. From the Seal of Governor PEPPERELL.

Ex. 7. Arg., three crescents barry undée az. and gu. : Crest, a Stork rising, ppr. From the Seal of Governor JOHN HAYNES, originally of Copford Hall, Lexden Hundred, in the County of Essex.

III. In GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE Heraldry is always a consistent, beautiful, and most effective accessory. Indeed, so thoroughly is the spirit of Heraldry in harmony with the great Architecture which grew up in the middle ages, that Heraldry must be considered rather as an element of its nature than as an allied Art. Gothic Architecture is essentially heraldic; and hence, as well as from its elastic nature and its equally consistent and happy applicability to every use and requirement, it is peculiarly appropriate as our own national style.

From the earliest years of its existence as a definite Science, Heraldry is found to be most intimately associated with the Gothic Architecture of England: and happy it was for the early Heralds, that in their days the English Gothic was at work in the full strength of its first maturity. And this alliance was never interrupted, or permitted to decline from its original cordiality. As long as the Gothic flourished, Heraldry held its own place in Architecture. And in the finest works that exist amongst us, relics of the grand Gothic Ages of English Architecture, Heraldry is ever present to adorn them with its graphic records. In the spandrels of arcades, in panels, upon bosses in vaulting, in stained glass, in encaustic floor-tiles, and indeed in almost every position in which such ornamentation could be admissible, the early Herald is found to have been the fellow-worker with the early Gothic architect. Gothic Architecture, accordingly, has preserved for us very noble collections and specimens of the most valuable illustrations of our national Heraldry. Canterbury and York Cathedrals, and the Abbey Churches of Westminster and St. Alban's, with the Chapel of King's College, Cambridge, are especially rich in heraldic treasures: and Westminster Hall and the northern Castles of Alnwick and Warkworth may be specified as noble examples of secular Architecture, which retain their heraldic enrichments.

IV. Gothic MONUMENTS, and in common with them their successors of the Renaissance era, abound in every variety of armorial blazonry. And fine examples of heraldic Monuments are no less abundant, than are the Shields and other insignia that appear on particular memorials. The principles which directed the selection of Shields to be introduced into the composition of early Monuments are worthy of careful consideration: and the same remark is no less applicable in the case of Architecture. I must be content to specify a very small group of heraldic Monuments of especial interest and value. In Westminster Abbey: the Monuments of QUEENS ALIANORE of Castile, PHILIPPA of Hainault, ELIZABETH TUDOR, and MARY STUART; the Monuments of King EDWARD III. and King HENRY VII. ; and those of ALIANORE DE BOHUN, Duchess of GLOUCESTER, the Countess of LENNOX, the Countess of DERBY, the two De VALENCES, Earls of Pembroke, EDMUND, Earl of Lancaster, Lord BOURCHIER, and Sir GILES DAUBENEY, K.G. In Canterbury Cathedral: the Monuments of the BLACK PRINCE, and of HENRY IV. and JOANNA of Navarre. In Salisbury Cathedral: the Monument of Earl WILLIAM LONGESPÉE. In St. Alban's Abbey Church: the Monuments of HUMPHREY, Duke of GLOUCESTER, and of the Abbots WHEATHAMSTEDE and RAMRYGE. Also, other fine Monuments in the Churches at Ely in Norfolk, Ewelme and Northleigh in Oxfordshire, King's Langley in Hertfordshire, and Cobham in Kent; in Beverley Minster, and in the Beauchamp Chapel at Warwick.

V. In the ILLUMINATIONS of the Middle Ages Heraldry has a place of honour: and in the revival of that early Art, which is held in such high estimation at the present day, Heraldry ought to occupy a position of corresponding prominence. This implies in the Illuminators of to-day some knowledge of Heraldry, and at least some degree of familiarity with good early examples. I venture to suggest, therefore, to students of Illumination the study both of the Herald's Art and his Science, as no unimportant part of their preparation for the practice of the Art of Illumination on the principle of the sagacious maxim of a great modern painter, quoted by Mr. RUSKIN in his "Seven Lamps of Architecture"—"Know what you have to do. and then do it."

VI. In the ornamentation of early ENCAUSTIC or INLAID PAVEMENT TILES, Shields of Arms and various heraldic devices frequently occur: and in many examples the Shields of Arms are arranged with much skill and in excellent taste, to form decorative compositions in combination with foliage and traceries. Numerous heraldic Tiles of a very interesting character remain in the Cathedrals of Worcester, Gloucester, and Exeter; and in the Churches of Great Malvern, King's Langley, the Abbey Church of St. Alban, and many others. The student will observe that the devices upon these Tiles are frequently reversed, evidently the result of the neglect to reverse the designs upon the original dies or stamps.

VII. Heraldic blazonry was highly esteemed in the middle ages as a becoming decoration for PERSONAL COSTUME. The Knights wore their Coats of Arms, and they carried and used their Shields of Arms, and their armorial insignia were displayed upon their weapons and upon the various accessories of their personal equipment. The Ladies adapted this usage to their own Costume, and they also wore Mantles and Dresses of Arms; and many of their personal ornaments were strictly heraldic. Without even suggesting now to our Ladies any revival of heraldic costume, properly so called—such as dresses, mantles, or shawls emblazoned with the bearings of armorial shields—I certainly do desire to see Heraldry exercising a powerful influence in all designs for personal ornaments, the works of the goldsmith and the jeweller more especially. Badges also may supply the motive for designing many patterns that are to adorn fabrics used for costume: and, in like manner also, the designs woven into carpets, curtains, and various other fabrics may be derived with the greatest advantage from the same source. The loom is employed in blazoning heraldic insignia in white damask: why should it not work, under judicious and cautious guidance, in silk and velvet, in satin and every woollen fabric?*

It must be understood, however, that heraldic ornaments and devices, unless they be of such a character that they are universally applicable, must have a reference to the wearer, or they degenerate at once into heraldic parodies. Personal ornaments, costume, furniture, if heraldic, must display devices that have a significance as well as a beauty: such costume and ornaments must be, not “becoming” only to the wearer, but (in the heraldic acceptation of that term) “belonging” also. And so in every instance.

For purposes of universal decoration and adornment, Heraldry is no less applicable now than when EDWARD III.

* I have lately seen a design for the embroidery of a dress for a young lady of the Clan CAMPBELL; its characteristic features are the Scottish Thistle and the Myrtle, the latter the Badge of the Campbells. I may express my approval of the motive of this design: others, as I have reason to believe, have approved the treatment of it.

or HENRY IV. reigned in England. Happily, a taste for furniture and all the appliances of every day life in the Gothic style is gradually becoming prevalent ; and this is inseparable from the use of Heraldry for the purposes of ornamentation. I presume that the fallacy of regarding the Gothic style of Art as exclusively ecclesiastical in its associations and uses, or as no less necessarily inseparable from mediæval sentiments and general usages, is beginning to give way to more correct views, as the true nature of the Gothic and its original universal employment are better understood. I consider it to be unnecessary for me, therefore, to enter here, in support of my own sentiments, into any detailed explanations to show that the revival of a Style of Art which flourished in bygone ages, and with it the revival of Heraldry as it was invented and grew into its early dignity and popularity, are in no way or degree whatever connected with an implied return to the mode of life of four, five, or six centuries ago. We have used Roman and even what we intended to be Greek Architecture in nineteenth-century England ; we are still in the habitual use of Roman and Greek designs for every variety of decoration ; and of late we have added Egyptian and Scandinavian works of Art to the deservedly prized collections of models, that we have formed for the express purpose of imitating them : and yet we do not consider that we thus in any way bind ourselves to adopt Roman, or Greek, or Egyptian, or Scandinavian costumes or customs ; nor in our use of the Arts of Antiquity do we perceive any demonstration of retrogression in ourselves.

It is the same with Mediæval Heraldry and Gothic Art. We may apply to our own times, our own uses, our own delight, what the old Heralds and the Gothic Artists have taught us, without even dreaming of wearing armour or re-establishing the feudal system. True Heraldry (for it is with Heraldry that I am now more especially concerned) is a Science, and it also is an Art, for all time—for our times, and for future times, as well as for the times that are past. If we understand and appreciate it, we shall not fail to use and to apply it aright.

From the initial-letter of my first Chapter I suspended the Shield borne by that Sir WALTER SCOTT, of Abbotsford, whose name will ever be a household word with every lover of what is chivalrous and knightly. Here, at the end of this my last Chapter, I place the Seal, No. 449, of an earlier Sir WALTER SCOTT, of Branhholm and Kirkurd—a Knight of another branch of the same distinguished House, who differenced the Shield of Scott so as to bear—Or, on a bend azure a mullet and two crescents gold.

No. 449.
Seal of Sir WALTER SCOTT, of Branhholm and Kirkurd: A.D.
1529. (Laing.)

GENERAL INDEX.

Abated, Abatement, 100, 213.
 Abbotsford, 1, 330.
 Aberdeen, Earl of; Arms, 68.
 Abergavenny, Earl of; Arms, 191.
 Accollée, 100.
 Accosted, 100.
 Accrued, 82, 100.
 Achievement, Achievement of Arms, 100.
 Addorsed, 87, 100.
 Admirals, 264; "Admiral of England," 258.
 Admiralty, Flag of, 264.
 Æschylus, 7.
 Affrontée, 100.
 Aggroupment of Arms, 161, 167.
 Agnes de Percy; Seal, 164.
 Agnus Dei, as a Badge, 148, 284.
 Alant, Aland, 100.
 Albemarle, Earl of; Supporters, 92.
 Albert, H. R. H., The late Prince. See Prince Consort.
 Albert Medal, 293.
 Alerion, 96, 100.
 Alianore de Bohun. See Bohun.
 Alianore of Aquitaine; Arms, 268.
 Alianore of Castile and Leon; Arms, 166, 169; Monument, 326.
 Alianore. Daughter of Edward I., 77.
 Alice of Hesse, H. R. H., The Princess, 280.
 Alliance, Heraldic Record of, 162, 167; Feudal, 200.
 Allusive Heraldry, 15.
 Alnwick Castle, 326.
 Alphabet, the Letters of the, in Heraldry, 136.
 Aluminium, 47.
 Ambulant, 100.
 America, Heraldry in, 322.
 Angels, Heraldic figures of, 75; as Supporters, 75, 247.
 Anglo-Saxon Shields and Standards, 5, 56.
 Anglo-Saxon Sovereigns, Arms attributed to the, 19, 268.
 Anjou, Geoffrey, Count of, 192.
 Anjou, Queen Margaret of, 97.
 Annandale, Arms in, 204.
 Anne Boleyn, Queen, 236.

Anne Stuart, Queen, 262; Arms, 269, 271; Badge, 237; Motto, 274.
 Annulet, Annulettée, 72, 101, 120; in Modern Cadency, 198.
 Antelope, 101.
 Anthony, Saint; his Cross, 101, 156.
 Antique Crown, 101.
 Anvers, Sir T. de; Arms, 209.
 Appaumée, 101.
 Aquitaine; Arms, 268.
 Archbishop, 101; Marshalling his Arms, 177.
 Archdeacon, L'Ercedeckne; Arms, 202.
 Arched, Archy, 101.
 Arderne, Sir J.; Arms, 207.
 Argent, 40, 47, 101.
 Argyll, Duke of; Supporters, 92.
 Arm, Armed, 80, 101, 102.
 Armagh, See of; Arms, 142.
 "Armes Parlantes," 16, 76, 102.
 Armorial Bearings, 38, 102; Tax on, 314.
 Armory, 2, 101.
 Arms, Shields and Coats of, 3; Aggroupment of, 161; Attributed, 18; Combination of, 161; of Community, 102; of Dominion, 102; of Heiress and Co-heiress, 174, 176; of Herald Kings, 177; of Husband and Wife, 171, 175; of Knight, 177; of Office, 192; of Peeress in her own right, 177; of Prelate, 177; of Pretension, 102; of Royal Personages, 178, 267; of Succession, 102; of Unmarried Lady, 176; of Widow and Widower, 176.
 Arms, Grants and Confirmations of, 309.
 "Arms found," 314.
 Armoyée, 102.
 Arragon, Queen Catherine of; Arms, 236.
 Arrondie, 102.
 Arrow, 102.
 Art, Heraldic, 24, 27, 330.
 Art, Gothic, 329.
 Artificial Figures and Devices in Heraldry, 80.
 Arthur, H. R. H., The Prince, 279.

- Arthur Plantagenet, 195.
 Arthur Tudor, The Prince; Badge, 238.
 Arundel; Arms, 17, 209.
 Arundel, Fitz Alans, Earls of, 89, 196, 222.
 Arundel, Thomas Fitz Alan, Earl of, 118.
 Arundel, Radulphus de; Arms, 196.
 Arundel, the Baron; Supporters, 92.
 Ascania, Bernhard of, 113.
 Ascendant, 102.
 Ashton; Badge, 148.
 Ashwelthorpe; Monument, 222.
 Aspect, Aspectant, 102.
 Aspersed, 102.
 Asscheby (Ashby), Sir R. de; Arms, 209.
 At gaze, 81, 102; At speed, 81.
 Athole, Duke of; Supporters, 92.
 Attires, Attired, 81, 102.
 Attributed Arms, 18.
 Aubernoun, Sir J. d'; Pennon and Arms, 144, 254.
 Augmentation, Augmented, 102, 103.
 Augmentations of Honour, 210; by "Royal Favour," 212.
 Austria, The Emperor of, 97.
 Aveliane, 57, 103.
 Aventinus, 6.
 Azure, 41, 47, 103.
- Badge, 103, 179, 227; Varieties of, 228, 229; Examples of, 231, 249; marked for Cadency, 198, 233; in Seals, 168, 232; peculiarly appropriate for present use, 234; to supersede Crests, 225, 234; borne by Ladies, 234; in Modern Heraldry, 310.
 Badge, of Ostrich Feathers, 237; of Garter, 286; of Thistle, 287; of St. Patrick, 289; of Bath, 290, 291; of Star of India, 292.
 Badlesmere, Sir B. de; Arms, 208.
 Balliol; Arms, 66; Sir Alexander de, Seal, 104, 217.
 Balliol College, Oxford, 66.
 Banner, Armorial, 3, 103, 255; blazoning of, 39; made on field of Battle, 256; Royal, 275; marked for Cadency, 198, 257; on Seals, 247; at Sea, 257; of Leicester, 14; of Templars, 13, 284.
 Banneret, 103; creation of, 256.
 Bar, 51, 103; examples of, 208.
 Barbarossa, The Emperor, 113.
 Barbed, 103.
 Barbel, 77, 103.
 Barbed, Earling, 39, 103, 218.
 Bardolf; Arms, 186; John Lord, 319.
 Barkele. See Berkeley.
 Barnacles, Breys, 103.
 Baron, Baroness, 104.
 Baronet, 104.
- Barre, de; Arms, 103, 165; Joan de, 165, 232; Henry de, 165; John de, 77.
 Barrulee, 52, 105.
 Barrulet, 52, 105, 186.
 Parry, 52, 103.
 Barry Bendy, 60, 105.
 Bars Gemelles, 52, 103.
 Bar-wise, 53, 105.
 Base, 33, 105.
 Basilisk, 105.
 Basinet, 105, 225.
 Basingborne, Wm. de; Arms, 73.
 Bassett; Arms, 63.
 Bat, in Heraldry, 79.
 Bath Herald, 132.
 Bath, Order of the, 289; Knights of, 290; Companions of, 290; Insignia of, 290; Stalls of Knights, 291.
 Bath, Marquess of, 92.
 Baton, 105; Sinister, 195.
 Battled, Battled Embattled, 105.
 Bayeux Tapestry, 5.
 Beacon, Fire Beacon, 105.
 Beaked, 105.
 Bear, in Heraldry, 76; Bear and Ragged Staff, 228, 321.
 Bearer, 105, 246.
 Bearings, Armorial Bearings, 38, 105. See Arms.
 Beasts, in Heraldry, 76.
 Beatrice, H.R.H., The Princess, 279.
 Beauchamp, Earl Richard de, 168, 175, 214, 321; his Badges, 228; at Jousts at Calais, 231.
 Beauchamp, Earl Thomas de, 173, 321, 322.
 Beauchamp, of Warwick; Arms, 173, 175, 188; Badges, 147.
 Beauchamp, of Bletshoe; Arms, 188.
 Beauchamp, of Elmley; Arms, 187.
 Beauchamp, at Carlawerock; Arms, 188.
 Beauchamp; Differences, 191.
 Beauchamp Chapel, the, at Warwick, 173, 191, 327.
 Beaufort; Arms and Differences, 194, 197; Badge, 145, 240.
 Beaufort, Margaret de, 173, 174, 240.
 Beaufort, John de, 193, 194, 242.
 Beaufort, Henry de, 193.
 Beaumont, Bishop Lewis de; Effigy and Arms, 162.
 Beaumont, Sir J.; Crest, 223.
 Beau-seant, 13, 284.
 Bec, Bishop Anthony, 56.
 Beckington, Bishop; Rebus, 148.
 Bedford, Isabelle, Countess of, 230.
 Bedford, John, Duke of, 185.
 Bedford, the Duke of; Supporters, 92.
 Bees, in Heraldry, 79.
 Beeston, Arms, 79.
 Bellingham, Richard; Seal, 323.
 Bend, 58, 105; Examples, 207; Sinister, 60.

- Bendlet, 58, 105; in Cadency, 186;
 Sinister, 196.
 Bend-wise, In Bend, 59, 105.
 Bendy, 59, 105.
 Bennett, John; Grant of Arms to, 312.
 Bere, Sir R. de la; Crest, 212.
 Berkeley; Arms, 188, 202, 249; Badge,
 139, 232, 249; Crest, 139, 249.
 Berkeroles, Sir Wm. de; Arms, 207.
 Bermyngham, Sir Wm. de; Arms,
 207.
 Bernhard, of Ascania, 113.
 Beverley Minster, 27, 107, 162, 327.
 Bezan, 71, 105; Bezantée, 72.
 Bilbesworth, Sir H. de; Arms, 97.
 Billet, Billetée, 64, 70, 106.
 Birds, in Heraldry, 76, 106.
 Bird-bolt, 102, 106.
 Bishop, 106, 177.
 Black Prince. See Edward.
 Blasted, 82, 106.
 Blazon, 31, 106; Epithets and Terms in, 80, 106.
 Blazoning, 31, 39, 45, 106; Descriptive,
 46, 106; in Tinctures, 47.
 Blazonry, 31, 106.
 Blondville, Ranulph de; Arms, 201.
 Blue Ensign, 264.
 Bluemantle, 131.
 Bluet, Sir Wm.; Arms, 209.
 Blundell; Arms, 65.
 Blyborough, Monument at, 107.
 Boar, in Heraldry, 106; Boar's Head, 76.
 Bohemia, the King of, 237.
 Bohun, De, Earl of Hereford; Arms,
 59, 90; Crest, 91; Badge, 155, 168,
 259.
 Bohun, Alianore de, 165, 173, 326.
 Bohun, Mary de, 155.
 Bohun, Earl Humphrey de, 59, 84.
 Bohun, Sir Gilbert de, 59.
 Bohun, Oliver de, 165, 207, 232.
 Boleyn, Queen Anne; Arms, 213, 236.
 Bolingbroke, the Viscount; Supporters, 99.
 Bologne, Godfrey de, 97.
 Bordet, Sir R.; Arms, 208.
 Bordoun, Sir J.; Arms, 17, 107, 142.
 Bordure, 68, 106; Examples, 26, 185;
 Quartered and Impaled, 173; Componée, 196; Engrailed, 197; of France, 124.
 Bostock, Hugo; Arms, 97.
 Boston, United States; Works on
 Heraldry published at, 323.
 Boterels, Sir R. de; Arms, 209.
 Botiler, Le; Arms, 50, 58, 115. See
 Butler.
 Botonée, Botony, 56, 106.
 Bottetourt; Arms, 249.
 Bottreaux, Margaret; Seal, 248.
 Bouget, Water Bouget, 107.
 Bouchier, Lord; Arms, 248, 326.
 Bouchier, Sir H. de; Arms, 111, 223.
 Bourchier Knot, 107, 134.
 Bourdon, 17, 107.
 Bow, Bowed, 107.
 Bowen Knot, 107, 134.
 Braced, Brazed, 107.
 Bradestone, Sir T. de; Arms, 230.
 Brey, Sir Reginald de; Badge, 60, 104
 Breys, 107.
 Brian, Bryan, Sir Guy de; Arms, 62
 Brittany; Arms, 14, 169.
 Brittany, John, Duke of, 166.
 Brivere, Sir W. de; Badge, 136.
 Brizure, 107.
 Bromesgrove, 225.
 Bronscombe, Bishop, 126.
 Broom-plant, 17.
 Brouchant, 07.
 Brownlow, the Earl; Supporters, 92.
 Bruce, de; Arms, 164, 204.
 Bruce, Margaret, Lady de Ros; Seal, 164.
 Bruce, King Robert de, 151.
 Bruce, Robert de, Earl of Carrick;
 Seal, 231.
 Brunswick; Arms, 272.
 Brus, Sir Bernard de; Arms, 50.
 Buccleuch, Duke of; Difference, 195.
 Buckingham, Duke of; Supporters, 92.
 Buckle. See Fermail.
 Burgh, de; Arms, 167.
 Burgh, Elizabeth de; Arms, 167.
 Burgh, Hubert de; Arms, 69.
 Burgh, William de; Arms, 167.
 Burgonet, 107.
 Burke, Sir B.; his "Peerage," 98.
 Burnett, George, Esquire, Lord Lyon,
 308.
 Burton, Abbot; Rebus, 148.
 Butterflies, in Heraldry, 79.
 Buttons, Heraldic, 229.
 Byron; A ms, 119.
 Cabossed, 81.
 Cadency, 107, 180; Marked, 182;
 Marks of, 182, 188; by Label, 182;
 by Bordure, 185, 196; by Bendlet, 186, 194; by Canton, 186, 195; by Change of Tinctures, 186; by Change of Charges, 186; by Small Charges, 187; by Official Insignia, 189; by Single Small Charge, 190;
 of Illegitimacy, 192; Marked on Badges, Banners, Crests, Mant-lings, Standards, and Supporters,
 198, 233, 257; Modern, 198.
 Cadency, King Richard II. on, 207.
 Cadet, 107.
 Calais, Citizens of, 205.
 Calf, 76.
 Caltrap, 107.
 Calvary Cross, 55.
 Calveley; Arms, 76.
 Cambridge, H.R.H., The Duke of 280.
 Camden, 237.

- Camoys, Eliz., Lady, 173.
 Camoys, Thos., Lord de, 111, 173.
 Camoys, The Baron; Supporters, 92.
 Campbell; Arms, 70; Badge, 328.
 Canterbury; Arms of See, 142; Arms of Deanery, 136; Archbishop of, 101; Heraldry of the Cathedral, 244, 326.
 Canterbury, Wm. de Courtenay, Archbishop of, 189.
 Canting Heraldry, 16, 108.
 Canton, Cantoned, 64, 108; in Cadency, 185, 195.
 Canvyle, Sir G. de; Arms, 210.
 Caple, Sir R. de; Arms, 209.
 Carbuncle. See Escarbuncle.
 Carew, Sir Nicholas; Arms, 89.
 Carlaverock, Roll of, 12, 267.
 Carlisle, Earl of; Supporters, 92.
 Carnarvon, Earl of; Supporters, 92.
 Carrick, Earl of, 231; Earldom of, 276.
 Cartouche, 37, 108.
 Castile and Leon; Arms, 17, 102, 169.
 Castile and Leon, Queen Alianore of, 169.
 Castile and Leon, Ferdinand III., King of, 169; Pedro, King of, 257.
 Castle, 102, 108.
 Castle-acre Priory, 44.
 Catherine, Queen, of Arragon, 235.
 Catherine Parr, Queen, 236.
 Cavalry Standards, 264.
 Cave; Motto, 139.
 Cavendish; Motto, 140.
 Celestial Crown, 108.
 Centaur, Sagittarius, 108, 267.
 Cercelée, Recercelée, 56, 108.
 Chaffinch, 77.
 Champagne; Arms, 124.
 Chandos, Sir R. de, 62; Sir John, 256.
 Chapeau, 108, 220, 222.
 Charge, 38, 109; Miscellaneous, 70; Secondary, 187; Single Small, 190.
 Charlemagne; his Crown, 272.
 Charles I., 195, 286; Arms, 269; Badge, 236; Crown, 275.
 Charles II., 104, 197, 212, 287; Arms, 269; Badge, 236.
 Charles V., of France, 78, 125.
 Charlestone, Sir J.; Arms, 96.
 Charteris; Motto, 140.
 Chastillon; Arms, 166, 172; Guy de, 166.
 Chaucer, Geoffrey, 206.
 Chaworth, De; Arms 167; Matilda de, Seal, 167.
 Chequée, Checky, 43, 109.
 Chess-rook, 109.
 Chester, County Palatine of, 201; Arms, 201, 276; Ranulph, Earl of, 201; Prince of Wales, Earl of, 201, 270.
 Chester Herald, 131.
 Chevron, Chevronel, Chevronnée, Chevrony, 61, 109; Examples, 209.
 Chief, 33, 49, 109; Examples, 207.
 Childrey, Brass at, 156.
 Chivalry, High Court of, 206; Order of, 283.
 Cholmondeley; Motto, 140.
 Christchurch, Oxford, 243.
 Church-Bell. See Bell.
 Cinquefoil, 109.
 Cinque Ports; Arms, 171.
 Civic Crown, 109.
 Clare, De; Arms, 61, 175, 277; Badge, 109.
 Clare, Gilbert de, the "Red Earl," 96.
 Clare, in Suffolk, 202.
 Claremont Nesle; Arms, 172.
 Clarence, Lionel, Duke of, 167, 184.
 Clarence, Thomas, Duke of, 185.
 Clarenceux, 109, 131; Arms, 132.
 Clarendon, Sir Roger de; Arms, 195.
 Clarendon, the Earl of; Supporters, 99.
 Clarion, 109.
 Clasps, 294.
 Clechée, Urdée, 57, 109.
 Cleveland, Duke of; Difference, 195.
 Clifford, Lord, 50.
 Clintone, Clinton, Sir J. de, 50, 207; cf Maxtoke, 207; Badge, 231.
 Close, 110, 116.
 Closed, 81.
 Closet, 52, 110.
 Clouée, 71, 110.
 Coat of Arms, 3, 110, 327.
 Coat Armour, 110.
 Cobham Monuments, 327.
 Cockatrice, 79, 110.
 Cockayne; Arms, 76.
 Coggeshall, John; Seal, 324.
 Co-Heiress; Arms, 174.
 Coinage, Heraldry of the, 317.
 Coleville, Sir R. de; Arms, 208.
 Collar, 110, 131; of the Garter, 286; of the Thistle, 288; of St. Patrick, 289; of the Bath, 291; of the Star of India, 293.
 College of Arms. See Heralds' College.
 Colour, 40, 47, 111.
 "Colours," 111, 265.
 Combattant, 87, 111.
 Combination of Arms, 161, 168.
 Compartment, 111.
 Complement, 111.
 Compenée, Compony, 43, 111; Bordure, 196.
 Compound Badges, 134.
 Compound Quartering, 34, 111.
 Compounded Arms, 111, 161, 168.
 Confessor, the, 212. See St. Edward.
 Confirmation of Arms, 309; Example, 313.
 Conjoined in Lure, 111.
 Consort, H.R.H., The late Prince of Wales; Arms, 275; Difference, 275; Coronet, 276, 294; Crest, 276; Supporters, 276; Motto, 276.

- Contoise, 111, 218.
 Contournée, 111.
 Controversy, the Scrope and Grosvenor, 206.
 Copford Hall, Essex, 325.
 Corbet; Arms, 17.
 Cork, Earl of; Supporters, 92.
 Cornish Chough, 111.
 Cornwall; Arms of the Duchy of, 276.
 Cornwall, Edmund, Earl of, 94.
 Richard, Earl of, 68, 83, 94, 209.
 Cornwall, Piers Gaveston, Earl of, 95.
 Cornwall, The Prince of Wales, Duke of, 276.
 Coronet, 111.
 Costume, Heraldry of, 327.
 Cosynton, Sir S. de; Arms, 231.
 Cotise, Cotised, 58, 112.
 Couchant, Dormant, 86, 112.
 Couchée, 38, 112.
 Counter, 112.
 Counter-changing, 44, 112.
 Counter Componée, 43, 112.
 Counter Passant, 87.
 Counter Potent, 41.
 Counter Rampant, 87.
 Counter Salient, 87.
 Counter-Seal, 112.
 Counter-Vair, 41.
 Couped, 55, 87, 112.
 Couple-Close, 112.
 Courant, 112.
 Courtenay, William de, Archbishop, 189; Peter de, Bishop, 234.
 Courtenay, Earl Edward de, 143, 221; Badge, 233.
 Courtesy, Titles of, 113.
 Courthope, William, Esq., late Somerset Herald, 9.
 Coventry, Earl of; Supporters, 99.
 Covert, 113.
 Coward, Cowed, 86, 113.
 Crampet, 113.
 Crancelin, . . .
 Crawford, Deverguilla; Seal, 247.
 Crenelate 1, 113.
 Crescent, 68, 113; in Modern Cadency, 198.
 Cresset, 113.
 Crest, 113, 178, 215; Early, 220; Marked for Cadency, 198; Differenced, 223; as originally worn, 226; two or more, 226; superseded by Badge, 225, 234; of England, 91, 272; of Scotland, 91, 273; of English Princes, 91, 276; of Edward III., 99; German, 219.
 Crest-Coronet, 113, 120.
 Crest-Wreath, 114, 120, 123.
 Cretinge, Sir J. de; Arms, 239.
 Crined, 114.
 Crombe, de; Arms, 61.
 Cross, 54, 114; Through, 54; Couped, or Humettée, 55; Voided, 55; Finbriated, 54; of St. George, 54, 261; of St. Andrew, 60, 261; of St. Patrick, 61, 262; of St. Anthony, or Tau, 55; Greek, 55; Latin, 55.
 Quarter-pierced, 54; Quarterly-pierced, 55; on Degrees, 55; Calvary, 55; Heraldic Varieties of, 55; Quadrate, 55, 146; Patriarchal, 55, 144; Fourchée, 55, 125; Moline, 56, 139, 198; Recerclée, 56, 150; Patonce, 56, 144; Fleurie, 56, 125; Fleurettée, 56, 125; Pommée, 56; Botonée, or Treflée, 56, 106; Crosslet, 56; Clechée, or Urdée, 57, 109; Patée, or Formée, 57, 144; Maltese, and of eight points, 57; Potent, 57, 145; Avellane, 57, 103; Fitchée, 58, 122.
 Crosslet, Crossed Crosslet, 56.
 Crown, 114, 140, 275.
 Crozier, 115.
 Crusader Kings; Arms, 43.
 Crusades, 4.
 Crusilée, Crusily, 115.
 Cubit-Arm, 115.
 Cummin; Arms, 95.
 Cup, Covered Cup, 115.
 "Curiosities of Heraldry," by Mr M A. Lower, 303.
 Cushion, Oreiller, Pillow, 115.
 Czar, The; Arms, 93.
 Dacre Knot, 115, 134.
 Dageworth, Sir J.; Arms, 51, 238.
 Dalmenhurst; Arms, 278.
 Dancette, 34, 70, 115, 159.
 Danse. See Dancette.
 Darcy, D'Arcy; Arms, 65.
 Darnley, Lord; Arms, 67.
 Daubeney, Sir Giles, K.G., 326.
 D'Aubigny; Arms, 173.
 Dauphin, The, 77, 82.
 Debased, 116.
 Debruised, 116.
 Decoration, Heraldic, 328.
 Decrescent, In Detriment, 80, 116.
 Deer, 81, 116.
 Degrees, Degreed, Degraded, 55, 116.
 Deincourt; Arms 70.
 Delamere, Sir John, 96; Sir G., 208.
 Demembered, Dismembered, 116.
 Demi, 116.
 Demi-Eagle, 99.
 Demi-Lion, 87.
 Denbigh, Earl of, 95, 98.
 Denmark; Arms, 83, 278.
 Dependency, Feudal, 200.
 Depressed, 116.
 Despencer, Le; Arms, 175, 190.
 Despencer, Isabelle le, 175; Bishop Henry le, 189, 222; John le, 151.
 Developed, 118.
 Devon, Earl of, 221.
 Dexter, 32, 33, 118.
 Deyville, Sir J. de, 200.
 Diaper, Diapering, 44, 116.

- Difference, Differencing. 116, 181, 200.
 Differenced Shields, 191, 207.
 Differences, Temporary, 181; Permanent, 181; for Distinction only, 205; of Illegitimacy, 192.
 Dignities, 31.
 Dimidiation, Dimidiated, 116, 166, 171.
 Disclosed, 81, 116.
 Displayed, 81, 116.
 Disposition, Disposed, 45, 116.
 Ditzmers; Arms, 278.
 Dividing and Border Lines, 34, 116.
 Dolphin, 8, 78, 82, 117.
 Dormant, 86, 117.
 Doubling, 117.
 Douglas; Arms, 74; Crest, 151; Badge, 231; Augmentation, 212.
 Douglas, Sir James, 74; Lord William, 74; the first Earl, 74.
 Douglas and Mar, William, Earl of, 94.
 Dove-tail, 34, 117.
 Doyle; Motto, 140.
 Dragon, 79, 117.
 "Dresses of Arms," 328.
 Dreux, De; Arms, 116, 168.
 Dreux, John de, Duke of Brittany, 166, 168.
 Drummond, John; Seal, 252.
 Drury; Arms, 156.
 Dublin, De Vere, Marquess of, 138.
 Dublin, Earldom; Arms, 276.
 Dublin; Arms of See, 142.
 Ducal Coronet, 118.
 Duchess, 118.
 Dudley, Earl Robert, 214.
 Dudley, Thomas; Seal, 223.
 Duke, 117.
 Dunboyne, the Baron; Supporters, 92.
 Eagle, Heraldic, 25, 76; in Stained glass at York, 92; sculptured in Westminster Abbey, 93; with one Head, 93; with two Heads, 93; Imperial, crowned, 95; with Nimbus, 95; Drawing of, 98; German, 98; Austrian, 98; French, 98; as Supporter, 99; as Badge, 148.
 Eaglet, 95, 99, 118.
 Earl, 118.
 Earl Marshal, The, 131.
 Eastern, Radiated, or Antique Crown, 119.
 Ecclesal, Ekeleshale; Arms, 203.
 Ecclesiastics, Heraldic decoration of their Vestments, 162.
 Echingham, De; Arms, 71.
 Eclipsed, 80.
 Edinburgh, H. R. H., the Duke of, 279.
 Edmond, Son of Edward I., 185.
 Edmund, Saint; Arms, 19, 213, 268.
 Edmund, Earl of Cornwall, 94.
 Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, 123, 183, 186, 326.
 Edward, Saint, the Confessor; Arms, 18, 268.
 Edward I.; Label as Prince Royal, 182; Arms, 268; Badge, 235; Barding of Charger, 103; Rolls of Arms of his era, 13.
 Edward II.; Label as Prince Royal, 182; Arms, 268; Badge, 235; Roll of Arms of his era, 13.
 Edward III.; Label as Prince Royal, 182; Arms, 268; quarters France Ancient, 124; Crest, 90, 99, 220, 272; Badges, 235, 239; Supporters, 245; Heraldry of his Monument, 26, 173; Roll of Arms of his era, 13; Heraldry in his time, 9; his love of Heraldry, 230; founds the Order of the Garter, 284.
 Edward IV.; Arms, 269; Supporters, 273; Badges, 236; Coins, 317; grants Augmentations, 213.
 Edward V.; Arms, 269.
 Edward VI.; Arms, 269; Supporters, 273; Badges, 236; bears the Ostrich Feather Badge, 238; Coins, 317.
 Edward the Black Prince; Arms, 135, 182, 195; Crest, 91, 222; Badge, 237, 239; Motto, 241; First English Duke and Prince of Wales, 117, 241; at Naveret, 256; his Will, 241; his Monument, 26, 241.
 Eglesfield, Robert de; Arms, 97.
 Eleanor. See Alianore.
 Electoral Bonnet, 119, 272.
 Elford, Monuments at, 222.
 Elizabeth, Queen; Arms, 269; Supporters, 273; Badges and Mottoes, 236, 274; Changes Colour of Ribbon of the Garter, 127, 287; her Monument, 326.
 Elizabeth, Countess of Holland and of Hereford, 164.
 Elsyng, Brass at, 223, 326.
 Eltham, Prince John of, 26, 124, 169, 185, 258.
 Embattled, Battled, 34, 119.
 Embowed, 82, 119.
 Embued, 119.
 Enaluron, 119.
 Endorse, Endorsed, 53, 119.
 Enfiled, 119.
 England; Arms, 27, 83, 89, 267; Royal Heraldry of, 267; Patron Saints of, 19; Lions of, 88, 267; Crest, 91, 272; Supporters, 91, 273; Badges, 150, 235; Crowns, 275; Flags, 260.
 Engrailed, 34, 119, 197.
 Enhanced, 119.
 Ensign, 263; Red, 263; White, 264; Blue, 264.
 Ensigned, 119.
 Entire, Entoyre, Entoyre, 119.
 Enveloped, 119.
 Epithets, Heraldic, and Descriptive Terms, 80.
 Equipped, 120.

- Eradicated, 82, 120.
 Erased, 87, 120.
 Erect, 81.
 Ermine, Ermines, Erminois, 41, 42, 120.
 Erne, 96, 120.
 Erneford, Wm. de; Arms, 96.
 Erskine; Arms, 53.
 Escallop, 59, 77, 78, 120.
 Escarbuncle, 15, 120.
 Eschales; Arms, 17.
 Escroll, 120.
 Escutcheon, 120; of Pretence, 120, 174, 316.
 Esquire, 120.
 Essex, Henry, Earl of, 223.
 Essex, the Earl of; Supporters, 92.
 Estate, 120.
 Estoile, 120.
 Estoteville, Sir M. de; Arms, 208.
 Estwick; Motto, 140.
 Etone, Sir N. de; Arms, 96.
 Eureux, D', of Salisbury, 192.
 Ewelme, 326.
 Exeter Cathedral, 111, 239.
 Exeter, Hollands, Dukes of, 185; John Grandison, Bishop of, 189.
 Exeter, Marquess of; Supporters, 92.
 Fabulous Beings, in Heraldry, 79.
 Fairfax; Motto, 139.
 Falconer; Arms, 17.
 False, 120; False Cross, 55; False Escutcheon, 66; False Roundle, 72, 120.
 Fan, Vane, 121.
 Fan-Crest, 121, 217.
 Faroe Islands; Arms, 278.
 Fauconberg, Sir Wm.; Arms, 209.
 Feathers, in Heraldry, 121. See Ostrich Feathers.
 Fees, for Grants of Arms, &c., 303, 310.
 Felbrigg, Sir S. de, K.G., 122.
 Felbrigg, Brass at, 122.
 Femme, 121.
 Fenwick, John; Arms, 44.
 Fer-de-Moline, 121.
 Fermail, Fermaux, 121.
 Ferr, 121.
 Ferrers, De; Arms, 190; Anne de, 190; Margaret de, 173; William, Lord, of Groby, 190; Lord, of Chartley, 222.
 Fesse, 50, 121; Examples, 208.
 Fesse-Point, 33, 121.
 Fesse-wise, In Fesse, 51, 121.
 Feudal Influence, in Heraldry, 201.
 Feudal Alliance and Dependency, Heraldic Record of, 150, 162, 200.
 Field, 38, 122; Varied Fields, 42; "Of the Field," 43.
 File, 122.
 Fillet, 50, 122.
 Fimbriation, Fimbriated, 54, 122.
 Finned, 82.
 Fish, in Heraldry, 82, 102, 122.
 Fishbourne, Giles de; Arms, 78.
 Fitchée, 58, 122.
 Fitton; Motto, 140.
 Fitz Alan, of Bedale, 53.
 Fitz Alan, Earl of Arundel, 84, 89, 118, 222.
 Fitz Parnel, Earl Robert, 201.
 Fitz Payne, Sir R. le; Arms, 209.
 Fitz Ralph; Arms, 202.
 Fitz Roy, Henry; Arms, 100.
 Fitz Walter, Robert Le; Arms, 50.
 Fitz Warine, Fitz Waryn; Arms, 14; Sir Fulk de, 190.
 Fitz Urse; Arms, 76.
 Flags, 254; Military, 264; Four remarks upon, 266.
 Flanches, Flasques, 68, 69, 122.
 Flanchéd, 196.
 Fleur de Lys, 122; quartered by Edward III., 124; Removed from Royal Shield of England, 272; in Modern Cadency, 198.
 Fleurie, 56, 125.
 Fleurette, Florette, 56, 125.
 Flexed, 125.
 Flighted, 102, 125.
 Flodden Field, 211.
 Fly, 125.
 Foliated, 125.
 Foreign Insignia, 295.
 Formée, 57.
 Forneus, Sir R. de; Arms, 63.
 Forth, Viscount; Seal, 252.
 Fountain, 72, 125.
 Fourchée, 55, 86, 125.
 Fraise, 199.
 "France Ancient," 122, 124; "France Modern," 122, 125; "Bordure of France," 124; "Label of France," 123; Imperial Eagle of, 99.
 Fraser, Wm.; Seal, 199.
 Frederick II., Emperor; Arms, 93.
 Frere; Arms, 58.
 Frette, Fretée, Fretty, 64, 71, 125, 134.
 Froissart, 256, 281.
 Fructed, 82, 126.
 Fur, 40, 42, 126.
 Furnival, De; Arms, 186, 203.
 Fusil, Fusillée, Fusily, 70, 126.
 Fylfot, 126.
 Fynderne, Wm., 156.
 Gad, Gadlyng, 126.
 Galley, 126.
 Gambe. See Jambe.
 Garb, 126, 201.
 Garnished, 126.
 Garter, Order of the, 127, 284; Insignia of the, 127, 286; Stalls and Garter Plates of Knights, 285; Officers, 285.
 Garter King-of-Arms, 126, 131; Arms 132.

- Gaveston, Piers ; Arms, 95.
 Gemelles, Bars Gemelles, 52.
 Gem-Ring, 126.
 Genealogies, 301.
 Genet, 126.
 Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, 192.
 George, Saint ; Arms, 19, 126, 261 ;
 Chapel of, 104.
 George, The, of the Garter, 126, 286 ;
 The Lesser, 127, 286.
 George I. ; Arms, 271, 272.
 George II. ; Arms, 272.
 George III. ; Arms, 272.
 George IV. ; Arms, 272.
 Gerattyng, 127.
 Germany, The Emperor of ; Arms, 92.
 Germany, The King of ; Arms, 92.
 Geytone, Sir J. de ; Arms, 208.
 Ghent, Prince John of, 183, 193, 240.
 242, 249.
 Giffard ; Arms, 154.
 Giffard, Sir A., 72 ; Sir J., 89, 209.
 Gimmel-Ring, 127.
 Girt, Girdled, 127.
 Gliding, 82.
 "Glossary of Heraldry," The Oxford,
 31.
 Glossary of Titles, Names, and Terms,
 100.
 Gloucester, Alianore, Duchess of, 326.
 See De Bohun.
 Gloucester, Humphrey, Duke of, 185,
 243, 326 ; Thomas, Duke of, 240,
 242, 326.
 Gloucester, Thomas le Despencer,
 Earl of, 175.
 Gloucester, Ralph de Monthermer,
 Earl of, 95.
 Gloucester Cathedral, Tiles at, 327.
 Gold, 42, 47.
 Golpe, 72.
 Gonfannon, 127.
 Gorged, 127.
 Gorges, R. de ; Arms, 128.
 Gothic Architecture, Heraldry in, 325.
 Gothic Art, its Heraldic Character, 329.
 Gothic Monuments, Heraldry of, 326.
 Gough, Lord ; Arms, 23.
 Gouttée, Guttée, 127.
 Gradient, 127.
 Grafted, 127.
 Grafton, Duke of ; Supporters, 92 ;
 Differences, 195.
 Graham, Robert ; Seal, 250.
 Grand Quartering, Grand Quarters,
 34, 127, 170.
 Grandison ; Arms, 54, 96, 189.
 Grandison, Bishop John de, 189.
 Grants of Arms, 309 ; Example, 310.
 Great Malvern, Tiles at, 327.
 Great Yarmouth ; Arms, 171.
 Greeces, 128.
 Greek Cross, 55.
 Greenland ; Arms, 278.
 Greville, Earl of Warwick, 214.
 Grey ; Arms, 53 ; Crest of Sir Richard de Grey, K.G., 222.
 Griffin. See Gryphon.
 Grosvenor ; Arms, 201 ; Sir R. de, 58,
 206.
 Gryphon, Griffin, 79.
 Guardant, 85, 128.
 "Guide to the Study of Heraldry," by
 Mr. Montagu, 2, 9, 196.
 Guige, 37, 128.
 Gules, 41, 48, 128.
 Gurges, Gorges, 128.
 Gyron, Gyronnée, Gyronny, 64, 70, 128.
 Habited, 128.
 Hainault, The Counts of ; Arms, 83.
 Hainault, Queen Philippa of, 237, 239.
 Hames, Haimes, 128.
 Hamilton ; Crest, 151, 220.
 Hamilton, Sir Gilbert de, 151.
 Hammer, 128.
 Hanover ; Arms, 271 ; Livery Colours,
 136.
 Harcourt, Sir R. ; Arms, 224 ; Harcourt, or Harcourt ; Arms, 51, 186.
 Hardinge, Viscount ; Supporters, 92.
 Hardwick, Earl of ; Supporters, 92.
 Harp, 128.
 Harris ; Arms, 76.
 Harrington Knot, 134.
 Harsyck, Sir J. ; Crest, 224.
 Hart, 81, 116, 128.
 Hastilude, 128.
 Hastings, the Earl, 202 ; Edmund de, 202 ; Edward, Lord, 134 ; Sir
 Hugh, 223.
 Hastings ; Arms, 137 ; Crest, 223.
 Hatchment, 128.
 Hatfield, Bishop, 222.
 Hauriant, 82, 129.
 Hause, 129.
 Hautville, Sir G. de ; Arms, 209.
 Hawk's Bells, Jesses, and Lure, 129.
 Hay ; Arms, 120.
 Haynes, John ; Seal, 325.
 Headfort, The Marquess of ; Supporters, 92.
 Hedge-hog, 76.
 Heightened, 129.
 Heights, 129.
 Heiress, Arms of, 174.
 Helena, H.R.H., The Princess, Princess Christian, 280.
 Helm, Helmet, 129, 178.
 Hemenhale ; Arms, 51.
 Hempbrake, Hackle, 130.
 Heneage Knot, 130, 134.
 Henry I. ; Arms, 88, 137, 267 ; Badge,
 235.
 Henry II. ; Arms, 267 ; Badges, 235.
 Henry III. ; Arms, 268 ; Badge, 235 ;
 Rolls of Arms of his Era, 13.
 Henry IV. ; Label, as Duke of Lancaster, 185 ; Motto, 111, 242 ; Arms.

- 268; quarters "France Modern," 125; Badges, 235; Crown, 275; Seal, 242.
- Henry V.; Arms, 269; Badges, 155, 236; Supporters, 273; Crown, 115.
- Henry VI.; Arms, 269; Badges, 236; Supporters, 91, 273; Crown, 115, 275; Motto, 274.
- Henry VII.; 127, 238, 286, 296; Arms, 269; Badges, 236; Supporters, 273; Seal, 247.
- Henry VIII.; 127, 195, 213, 286; Arms, 269; Badges, 236; Supporters, 273; Coins, 318.
- Henry, 3rd Earl of Lancaster, 186.
- "Herald and Genealogist," 303.
- Heralds of England, Incorporated, 305.
- Herald, 131.
- Herald-Kings, 131, 177.
- Heraldic Sails, 257.
- Heralds' College, 131, 305.
- Heraldry, Early Love of in England, 2; Early Influence, 2; Definition and True Character of, 3; Introduction into England, and Establishment, 4; Utility of, 4; English Mediæval, 5; Ancient, 6, 9; English, its Career, 9; Early English Literature of, 12; its Allusive Character, 15; Canting, 16; Revival in England, 20, 24, 307; Debasement, 21, 22; a Science, 24, 27, 30, 330; an Art, 24, 27, 330; Style of Art in, 24, 30; Treatment of Animate Creatures in, 24, 27; Language of, 29; Nomenclature, 29; Style and Forms of Expression, 30; Birds in, 76; Beasts in, 76; Human Beings in, 73; the Lion in, 83, 87; the Eagle in, 9, 92; Scottish, 132, 204; of Monuments, 326; Royal, 267; of the Coinage, 317; its present Popularity, 307; in Architecture, 325; of Illuminations, 327; in Inlaid Tiles, 327; of Costume, 327; in the United States of America, 323.
- "Heraldry of Fish," by Mr. Moule, 77, 122.
- Hereford, De Bohuns, Earls of, 59; Elizabeth, Countess of, 164.
- Hereford Cathedral, 222.
- Herison, Herrison, 76, 132.
- Heriz, De (Harris); Arms, 76.
- Heron, 17.
- Herring; Arms, 77.
- Herschel, Sir J.; Arms, 23.
- Heytesbury and Homet, Lord, 232, 233.
- Heytesbury, the Baron; Supporters, 99.
- Hill, Hillock, 132.
- Hind, 81, 116, 132.
- Hirondelle, 77, 132.
- Holland, Counts of, 83; Elizabeth, Countess of, 164.
- Hollands, of Exeter, 185, 213; of Kent and Surrey, 185, 213.
- Holland, John, Earl of Huntingdon; Seal, 258.
- Holstein; Arms, 278.
- Honour, Augmentations of, 210.
- Honour-Point, 33, 132.
- "Honours," Regimental, 264.
- Honourable Insignia, Medals, and Clasps, 179, 294.
- Hoofed, 80.
- Hospitallers. See St. John, Knights of.
- Hotspur, Henry, 273.
- Howard; Arms, 211; Augmentation 211; Crest, 91, 223; Badge, 231.
- Howard, Thos., Duke of Norfolk, 211.
- Howard, Dr. J. J., 303.
- Human Beings, in Heraldry, 73.
- Humettée, 55, 133.
- Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, 185, 243, 326.
- Hungerford, 232; Badge, 231.
- Hungerford, Lord, 248; Sir Walter de, 232, 255, 257; Sir Robert de, 233, 255, 257.
- Huntingdon, Thos., Earl of, 258.
- Huntingfield, Roger de; Arms, 72.
- Huntley, the Marquess of, 68.
- Hurste, 133.
- Hurte, 72, 133.
- Husband and Wife, Marrelling their Arms, 171, 175.
- Hussy; Arms, 233.
- Iceland; Arms, 278.
- Illegitimacy, Cadency of, 192.
- Illuminations, Heraldry of, 327.
- Imaginary Beings, in Heraldry, 79.
- Imbrued, Imbued, 133.
- Impalement, Impaled, 172; of the Bordure and Tressure, 173.
- Imperial Crown, The, 114, 275; Imperially Crowned, 133.
- In Bend, 59, 133.
- In Chevron, 62, 133.
- In Chief, 50, 133.
- In Complement, 80, 133.
- In Cross, 55, 133.
- In Detriment, 80.
- In Fesse, 51, 133.
- In Foliage, 81, 133.
- In Glory, 80, 133.
- In Increment, 80.
- In Lure, 81, 133.
- In Orle, 66.
- In Pale, 54.
- In Piety, 81.
- In Plenitude, 80.
- In Pretence, 133.
- In Pride, 81, 133.
- In Quadrangle, 133.
- In Saltire, 61.
- In Splendour, 80, 133.
- Increscent, 80, 133.
- Indented, 34, 133.

- Inescutcheon, 65, 135.
 Infantry Colours, 265.
 Innes, Walter; Seal, 10.
 Innes, or De Ynays, Wm.; Seal, 11.
 Insects, in Heraldry, 79, 82.
 Insignia, Foreign, 295.
 Invested, 34.
 Inver'ed, 81.
 Ireland; Badge, 152, 235; Heraldry of, 309; Chief Herald of, 132.
 Ireland, De Vere, Duke of, 213.
 Irradiated, 133.
 Isabel, of France; Seal, 124, 164.
 Isabel, Countess of Bedford, 230.
 Isabel le Despenser, 175.
 Isle of Man; Arms, 9, 74.
 Isles, Lordship of, 276.
 Islip, Abbot; Rebus, 143.
 Issuant, 133.
 Janbe, Gambe, 87, 133.
 James I. of Scotland; Supporters, 273.
 James IV. of Scotland; at Flodden, 211; Supporters, 274.
 James V. of Scotland; Crest and Motto, 273; Garter Plate, 67.
 James VI. of Scotland—James I. of Great Britain; Arms, 269; Supporters, 91, 273; Badges and Motto, 156, 236, 274; creates Baronets, 104; his proclamation for first "Union Jack," 261.
 James II.; Arms, 269; Supporters, 274; Badge, 236; frames Statutes for Order of Thistle, 287.
 James; Motto, 140.
 Jane Seymour, Queen, 236.
 Jardine; Arms, 204.
 Jefferay; Motto, 140.
 Jerusalem; Arms, 43.
 Jessant, Jessant de lys, 133.
 Jesses, 133.
 Jewellery, Heraldic, 328.
 Joan, Daughter of Edward I., 95.
 Joan, Countess of Surrey; Seal, 165.
 Joanna, of Navarre, Queen; Badge, 126, 236.
 John, King; his Seal as Prince, 88; Arms, 268; Badge, 235.
 John, Prince, of Eltham, 26, 124, 169, 185, 258.
 John, Prince, of Ghent, 183, 193, 240, 242, 249.
 John de Dreux, 166, 168.
 John, Duke of Bedford, 185.
 John de Warrenne, Earl of Surrey, 165.
 Johnston; Arms, 204.
 Joust, 134.
 Jowlopped, 134.
 Jupon, 134.
 Juxon, Archbishop, 286.
 Kent, De Burgh, Earl of, 69; Holdings, Earls of, 185.
 Key, 134.
 "King Maker," the, 254, 214, 229.
 King, Mr.; his "Hand-book of English graved Gems," 6.
 King-of-Arms, 131. See Herald.
 King's College Chapel, Cambridge, Heraldry of, 25, 326.
 King's Langley, Monument at, 326.
 Kinnoul, Earl of, 308.
 Kirkpatrick; Arms, 204.
 Kirton, Abbot; Rebus, 148.
 Knight, Knighthood, Knightly Orders, 117, 134, 179, 281.
 Knights of St. John, 57, 283; Templars, 13, 284.
 Knot, 134, 231.
 Kyrkeby; Arms, 65.
 Label, 135, 182; Forms of, 135; Points of, 135, 182; Differenced, 183, 184; a Royal Difference, 183; as borne by Princes Royal, 182; by Black Prince, 182; by Princes of Wales, 183; of Brittany, 183; of France, 183; of Lancaster, 183, 184; of York, 183; borne as a Badge, 199; in Modern Cadency, 198.
 Laci, Lacy, De; Arms, 84, 89, 164.
 Laci, Earl Henry de; Crest, 216.
 Lacy Knot, 135.
 Ladies, Unmarried; their Arms, 176.
 Ladies', Heraldic Costume, 162, 165, 327; their right to bear Badges, 234.
 Laing, Mr. H., his "Catalogue of Scottish Seals," 11, 164, 199, 218, 232, 247, 250, 274, 318, 330.
 Lamb, 76.
 Lambert; Arms, 76.
 Lambrequin, 136.
 Lambton; Arms, 76.
 Lancaster, Label of, 183; Rose of, 150, 235; Badge of, 155; Livery Colours of, 136; Collar of, 110.
 Lancaster, Edmund, Earl of, 123, 183, 186, 326; Henry, Earl of, 186, 247; Thomas, Earl of, 218; John of Ghent, Duke of, 183 (see John of Ghent); Matilda of, 167, 190.
 Lancaster Herald, 131.
 Lance-Rest. See Clarion.
 Lane, Jane, 212.
 Language, of Heraldry, 29, 30.
 Langued, 80, 136.
 Latimer, George, Lord, 191; William le, 143, 221.
 Latin Cross, 55.
 "Law and Practice of Heraldry in Scotland," by Mr. Seton, 9, 68, 94, 140, 204, 309.
 Law of Tinctures, 43.
 Leaves, in Heraldry, 102, 136.
 Leechford, Sir R., Confirmation of Arms to, 313.
 Legh, Gerard, 22.
 Legion of Honour, 295.

Leicester, Banner of, 14.
 Leicester, Robert, Earl of, 201.
 Leicestershire Families, their Arms, 202.
 Lennox, Countess of; Arms, 67, 326.
 Leon; Arms, 83, 169. See Castile.
 Leopard, Leopardé, 84, 267.
 Leopold, H.R.H., The Prince, 279.
 L'Ercedeckne; Arms, 202.
 Leslie; Arms, 95; Euphemia, Countess of Ros, 95.
 "Lesser George," The, 127.
 Le Strange. See Strange.
 Letters of the Alphabet, in Heraldry, 136.
 Leverett, John; Seals, 324, 325.
 Leveson; Arms, 17, 102.
 Leybourne, Sir W. de; Arms, 90.
 Lichfield, Joust at, 230.
 Lincoln, Earls of; Arms, 89, 164, 209.
 Lincoln, Henry, Earl of; Crest, 216.
 Lincoln and Pembroke, Margaret, Countess of, 164.
 Lindsay, Sir W.; Seal, 250.
 Line, Border Line, Lined, 136.
 Lion, in Heraldry, 25, 27, 76, 83; Heraldic Treatment of, 23, 92; of England, 88, 267; of Scotland, 67, 269; as a Crest, 90; as a Supporter, 90, 91, 274; Percy Lion, 223; Howard Lion, 223; Examples of Lions, 209.
 Lion's Face, 87; Head, 87; Jambe, 87.
 Lioncel, 87, 136.
 Lion-leopard, Lion-leopardé, 85.
 Lionel, Prince, of Clarence, 167, 184.
 Lisle, Arthur, Viscount, 195.
 Little Easton, Brass at, 111, 223.
 Livery Colours, 136.
 Lodged, 80, 136.
 Lomelye, Lumley, Sir R.; Arms, 208.
 London, City of; Arms, 155.
 Longespée, William, Earl of Salisbury, 84, 90, 192, 326.
 Lord of the Isles; Arms, 137, 276.
 Lord Lyon, 132, 246, 308.
 Lorn; Arms, 136.
 Lorraine; Arms, 97.
 Loterel, Luterell; Arms, 76, 186, 202, 219.
 Loterel, Luterell, Sir A., 176; Sir G., 177, 219.
 Louis VII., of France, 122.
 Louisa, H.R.H., The Princess, 279.
 Loutre, 76.
 Louvaine; Arms, 170.
 Lower, Mr. M. A., 9, 303; on Crests, 229.
 Luce, 17, 77, 136.
 Lucy; Arms, 17, 170; Sir Anthony, 78; Geoffrey de, 78.
 Ludlow Church, 238.
 Lullingstone, 148.
 Lunenburgh; Arms, 272, 278.
 Lure, 81, 136.

Luterell. See Loterel.
 Lyhart, Bishop Walter; Rebus, 148.
 Lymphad, 136.
 Lyon Office, 132, 308; Depute, 308.
 Mahon, Sir W.; Motto, 252.
 Maintenance, Cap of, 137.
 Malet, Sir R., 209; Sir T., 209.
 Malmesbury, Earl of; Supporters, 97.
 Maltese Cross, 57.
 Man, Isle of, 9, 74.
 Manche, Maunche, 137.
 Mandeville, Geoffrey de, 15.
 Manfee, Sir W.; Arms, 209.
 Mantle, 137; of Arms, 328.
 Mantling, 137, 178, 220; Marked for Cadency, 198.
 March, Mortimers, Earls of; Seals, 250.
 Margaret, of Anjou, Queen, 97; of France, 123, 163, 171; Bruce, 164; Beaufort, 173; Tudor, 174; Countess of Lincoln, 164; de Ferrers, 173.
 Marks of Cadency, Marking Cadency. See Cadency.
 Marlborough, Duke of, 95, 98.
 Marmion, Sir R. de; Crest, 222.
 Marny, Sir R. de; Seal, 220.
 Marquess, Marquis, Marchioness, 137.
 Marriage, Heraldic Record of, 171.
 Marshalling, 138, 161; by Combination, 168; by Quartering, 169; Quartered Coats, 170; Arms of Husband and Wife, 171, 175; Crests, 178; Helms, Coronets, Mantlings, Mottoes, Supporters, Badges, and Various Insignia, 178, 179.
 Martel, 17, 138.
 Martlet, 77, 138; in Modern Cadency, 198.
 Martin; Crest and Motto, 140.
 Mary Tudor, Queen; Arms, 269; Supporters, 273; Badges, 236; grants Derby House to the Heralds, 131.
 Mary Stuart, Queen; Arms, 269.
 Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots; her Signet, 274; Heraldry of her Monument, 288.
 Mary, The Princess, of Teck, 280.
 Mary de Saint Paul; Seal, 166, 168.
 Mascle, Masculée, 69, 138.
 Masoned, 138.
 Matilda de Chaworth, 167; of Lancaster, 167.
 Medals, 294.
 Medjidie, Order of the, 295.
 Melfort, Earl; Seal, 252.
 Membered, 138.
 Menteith, Earl of, 94; Sir J., 95.
 Merchant's Mark, 138.
 Mere, De la. See Delamere.
 Merevale, Brass at, 222.
 Merit, Order of, 289.
 Mermaid, Merman, or Triton, 139.
 Metals, 40, 42, 139.

- Methuen, the Baron 95.
 Mill-rind. See Fer-de-Moline.
 "Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica," 303.
 Mitre, 39.
 Moline, 56, 139.
 Molines, Molyneux, De; Arms, 56.
 Monecastré, Sir W. de; Arms, 208.
 Monson, the Baron; Supporters, 92.
 Montacute, De, Montagu; Origin of the Name, 16; Arms, 70, 96.
 Montagu, Mr., his work on Heraldry, 2, 9, 196.
 Montfort, De; Arms, 59; Sir — de, 209.
 Montgomerie, Sir W. de, 96.
 Montgomerie, Earl of Eglintoun; Arms, 10.
 Monthermer, Sir Ralph de, 95, 99.
 Moon, the, 80.
 Monypeny, Thomas; Seal, 320.
 Mortimer, De; Origin of the Name, 16; Arms, 65, 173; Differences, 187; Crest, 143.
 Mortimer, Edmund de, Earl of March; Seal, 250.
 Motto, 139, 178, 227; Royal, 227.
 Moule, Mr., his "Heraldry of Fish," 77, 122.
 Mound, 140.
 Mounpynzon; Arms, 77.
 Mount, 140.
 Mounteney, De; Arms, 203; Sir E. de, 204; Sir J. de, 204; Sir T. de, 204.
 Mowbray, Sir J., 209; Roger de, 89; Thomas de, Duke of Norfolk, 213, 223, 240.
 Mullet, 140; in Modern Cadency, 198.
 Mundegumri, John; Seal, 10.
 Mural Crown, 141.
 Murallée, Walled. See Walled.
 Mure, Wm.; Seal, 320.
 Murrey, 42.
 Muschamp; Arms, 79.

 Naiaint, 82, 141.
 Naissant, 141.
 Names, 31.
 Nassau; Arms, 270.
 Natural Objects, in Heraldry, 79.
 Naval Crown, 141.
 Navarre; Arms, 124, 236.
 Naveret, Battle of, 256.
 Nebulée, 34, 141.
 Nelson, Admiral Lord: Arms, 23.
 Nerved, 141.
 Neville; Arms, 61; Differences, 191; Badge, 148.
 Neville, George de, Lord Latimer, 191.
 Neville, Earl Richard de, 204, 214, 229.
 Newburgh; Arms, 321, 322.
 Nicholas, Sir N. Harris, 9; on Ostrich Feather Badge, 237; on "Union Jack," 263.
 Nichols, Mr. J. Gough, 9, 15, 303.

 Nimbus, Nimbed, 95, 98, 141.
 Nomenclature, Heraldic, 29.
 Norfolk, the Duke of; Arms, 211; quarters Mowbray, 89; Supporters, 92; Crest, 223; Earl Marshal, 131.
 Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray, Duke of, 240.
 Normans, their Shields and Standards, 5.
 Norroy, 131. See Herald.
 Northleigh, 326.
 Northumberland, Earls of; Arms, 78, 89, 255.
 Northumberland, Henry, 1st Earl of, 170; the Duke of, 92, 223.
 Nortone, Sir J. de; Arms, 209.
 Norway; Arms, 83.
 Norwich; Arms of See, 189; Henry, Bishop of, 189.
 Nova Scotia, Badge. See Baronet.
 Nowed, 82, 141.

 Octofoil, in Modern Cadency, 198.
 Official Insignia, 179; in Cadency, 189.
 Official Arms, 177.
 Ogress, 72, 141.
 Oldenburgh; Arms, 278.
 Oldham, Bishop; Rebus, 148.
 Onslow; Motto, 140.
 Opinicus, 141.
 Oppressed, Debruised, 141.
 Or, 40, 141.
 Orders of Knighthood. See Knighthood.
 Order of Merit, 289.
 Ordinaries, 42, 49, 141; their structural Origin, 14, 63.
 Ordinary of Arms, 141. See Armory.
 Oreiller, 142.
 Orle, In Orle, 66, 142, 160.
 Ostrevant, Comté of, 237.
 Ostrich Feather Badge, 142, 223, 237.
 Otter, 76.
 Ousflet, Sir G. de; Arms, 208.
 Overall, Sur tout, 142.
 Overstone, the Baron; Supporters, 99.
 Overt, 81, 142.
 Oxford, De Veres, Earls of, 213.
 Oxney, John; Rebus, 148.

 Padlock, Badge, 249.
 Paignel, John; Arms, 202.
 Painted Chamber, Westminster, 255.
 Pale, Pale-wise, In Pale, Paly, 53, 54, 142.
 Pall, 142.
 Pallet, 53, 142.
 Palliot, French Writer on Heraldry 253.
 Paly Bendy, 60, 142.
 Pamé, 82.
 Panache, 142, 220, 221.
 Parr, Queen Catherine, 236.
 Party, Parted, 33, 143.
 Pascuant, 143.

- Passant, Passant Guardant, Passant Reguardant, Passant Repassant, 85, 144.
 Pastoral Staff, 144.
 Patée, or Formée, 57, 144.
 Pateshulle, J. de.; Arms, 51.
 Patonce, 57, 144.
 Patriarchal, 57, 144.
 Pawne, Peacock, 76.
 Peach-Branches, 149.
 Pean, 41, 144.
 Pebmarsh, Brass at, 202.
 Peché, Sir John, 149.
 Pedro, King of Castile, 257.
 Peer, 144.
 Peerage, 144.
 Peeress in her own Right, 177.
 Pegasus, 144, 284.
 Pelham; Arms, 76; Badge, 231.
 Pelican, 76, 144.
 Pellet, 72, 144.
 Pembroke, Sir R. de; Crest, 221.
 Pembroke, the Earl of, 166; De Valences, Earls of, 326.
 Pembroke College, Cambridge, 166, 167.
 Penbrugge; Arms, 53.
 Pendent, 144.
 Pennon, 3, 144, 254.
 Per, 33, 145.
 Perceval; Motto, 140.
 Percy, Percy; Arms, 70, 84, 170; Crest, 91, 223; Badges, 231, 249, 255; Seals, 249.
 Percy, Henry de, 78, 80, 186, 209, 216.
 Percy, Henry de, 3rd Baron, 186; Agnes de, 164.
 Percy Shrine, Beverley Minster, 27.
 Percy Effigy, at Beverley, 162.
 Peterborough Cathedral and Deanery, 238.
 Petrasancta, Silvester de, 40.
 Petre, the Baron; Supporters, 92.
 Peverel; Badge, 231; Catherine, 232.
 Peyvre, Sir R. de; Arms, 62, 209.
 Philip, "the Hardy," 162.
 Philippa, Queen, of Hainault; Badge, 237, 239; Heraldry of her Monument, 173, 326.
 Pickering, Sir T. de; Arms, 209.
 Pigot; Arms, 17.
 Pile, In Pile, 62, 145.
 Pirepound, Sir R.; Arms, 209.
 Planché, Mr., 9, 74, 97, 201, 242.
 Plantagenet, The Royal House of, 17, 192; Livery Colours of, 236; Arthur, 195.
 Planta Genista, 17, 145, 235.
 Plate, Plattée, 72, 145.
 Plenitude, 145.
 Plume, 145.
 Points, or Stops, in Heraldry, 46.
 Points of a Shield, 33, 145; of a Label, 162; In Point, 145.
 Pole; Motto, 140.
 Pomme, Pommée, 56, 72, 145.
 Poninge, Sir T. de; Arms, 208.
 Popinjay, 76, 145.
 Port, 145.
 Portcullis, 145; Pursuivant, 131.
 Portland, Duke of; Supporters, 92.
 Potent, 41, 57, 145.
 Poudrée, Powdered, 45, 145.
 Poutrel, Sir R.; Arms, 207.
 Preieres, Sir J. de; Arms, 208.
 Precedence, Order of, 296; in the Royal Family, 300; of Women, 299.
 Prelates; Arms, 177.
 Pretence, Escutcheon of, 120, 174, 316.
 Preying, 145.
 Prince, Princess, 145.
 Princes and Princesses of the Royal Family; Armorial Insignia, 278, 279; Coronets, 145.
 Proper, 42.
 Provence; Arms, 38.
 Prussia, H. R. H., The Crown Princess, Princess Royal, 280.
 Purled, 146.
 Purple, 41, 146.
 Pursuivant, 131, 146.
 "Pursuivant of Arms," by Mr. Planché.
 See Planché.
 Pycot, Sir B. Arms, 208.
 Quadrate, 55, 146.
 Quarter, 64, 146, 170. See Canton.
 Quarter Pierced, 55.
 Quartering, 34, 146; Simple, 34; Compound, 34, 170; Grand, 170; Marhalling by, 169; the Bordure and Tressure, 173.
 Quarterings, Quarters, 34, 170; Grand, 34, 170.
 Quartered Coats, Marhalling of, 170.
 Quarterly Quartered, 34, 147.
 Quarterly Quartering, 34, 147.
 Quarterly Pierced, 55.
 Quatrefoil, 147.
 QUEEN, H.M., The; Crown, 115, 275; Arms, 272; Banner, 260.
 Queen's College, Oxford, 97.
 "Queen's Colour," the, 265.
 Quency, De; Arms, 17.
 Queue Fourchée, 86, 147.
 Quilled, 147.
 Radclyffe, Radcliffe; Arms, 58.
 Radiant, Rayonée, 147.
 Radstock, the Baron; Supporters, 99.
 Ragged Staff, 135, 147, 205, 228, 321.
 Ragulée, Raguly, 34, 147.
 Ram, 76.
 Rampant, Rampant Guardant and Reguardant, 84, 85, 148.
 Ramryge, Thomas, Abbot of S. Albans, 25, 76, 97, 210, 239, 326.
 Ramsey; Arms, 76.
 Ready, Mr., his Casts of Seals, 318.
 Rebated, 148.
 Rebus, 148, 227.

- Recercelée, 56, 150.
 Red Ensign, 263.
 References to Authorities, 13.
 Reflexed, Reflected, 150.
 "Regimental Colour," the, 265.
 Reguardant, 85, 150.
 Rein-deer, 102, 150.
 Removed, 150.
 Renfrew, the Barony of, 276.
 Reptiles, in Heraldry, 79.
 Respecting, 150.
 Rest. See Clarion.
 Retorted, 150.
 Rhode Island, 324.
 Ribbon, Riband, 58, 150; of the Garter, 287; Bath, 291; Thistle, 288; St. Patrick, 289; Star of India, 293.
 Richard I.; Arms, 88, 268; Crest, 121, 216; Seals, 88, 215; Badges, 235.
 Richard II.; Arms, 212, 268; Crest, 91, 223; Badges, 27, 223, 235, 240; Roll of Arms of his Era, 13.
 Richard III.; Arms, 269; Badges, 235; Supporters, 273; incorporates Herald's, 131, 305.
 Richard, Earl of Cornwall, and King of the Romans, 68, 94.
 Richard, Earl of Warwick, 214.
 Richmond, Henry, Duke of, 195, 197.
 Richmond, John de Dreux, Earl of, 168.
 Richmond and Lennox, Ludovic Stuart, Duke of, 118.
 Richmond Herald, 131.
 Rising, Roussant, 81, 150.
 Riveres; Arms, 52.
 Robert II. of Scotland, 273.
 Robsart, Earl Ludovic; Monument, 248.
 Rolls of Arms; 12, 29.
 Romans, Richard, King of the, 68, 94.
 Roringe, Sir R. de; Arms, 208.
 Ross, Euphemia, Countess of, 95; Margaret, Lady de, 164; the Earl of, 95.
 Rosamond, Fair, 90, 192.
 Rose, 150; en Soleil, 150; of England, 150, 235; of Lancaster, 150, 235; of York, 150, 235; Badge of Edward I., 235; in Modern Cadency, 198.
 Rossel, Sir G.: Arms, 17, 209.
 Rothsay, H.R.H., The Prince of Wales, Duke of, 276.
 Rouge Croix, Pursuivant, 131.
 Rouge Dragon, Pursuivant, 131.
 Roundle, Roundlet, 71, 72.
 Royal Badges, 234; Banners, 275; Personages, their Arms, 178; Mottoes, 274; Standards, 260, 275; Supporters, 273.
 Rue, Chaplet of, 109.
 Ruskin, Mr., 327.
 Rustre, 69, 151.
 Sable, 41, 151.
 Sagittarius, Sagittary, 151, 267.
 Sails, Heraldic, 257.
 Saint Alban, Abbey Church and Arms of, 25, 75, 326; Heraldic Tiles at, 327.
 Saint Albans, Duke of, 195.
 Saint Andrew; Arms, 60; Banner, 261.
 Saint Anthony; Badge, 156.
 Saint Edmund. See Edmund.
 Saint Edward, the Confessor. See Edward.
 Saint George; Arms and Banner, 54, 259, 261, 287; Ensign, 264; Chapel, 285.
 Saint John, of Jerusalem, Knights of, 283.
 Saint Michael and Saint George, Order of, 292.
 Saint Michael's Church, St. Albans, 159.
 Saint Patrick; Arms and Banner, 60, 262; Order of, 288.
 Saint Paul; Badge, 155.
 Saint Paul, Mary de, 166; Guy, Count de, 166.
 Saint Vincent, the Viscount; Supporters, 99.
 Saint Waly, Sir R. de; Arms, 209.
 Salamander, 151.
 Salient, 86, 151.
 Salisbury, Longespée, Earl of, 90, 96, 192.
 Salisbury, D'Eureux, Earl of, 192.
 Salisbury Cathedral, 326.
 Salisbury, Marquess of; Supporters, 92.
 Saltire Saltire-wise, In Saltire, 60, 151.
 Sanglier, 106, 151.
 Sans, 52, 151.
 Sarcelée, 151.
 Sardinian, or Italian Medal, 295.
 Savage-man, Wood-man, 151.
 Saw, Frame-Saw, 151.
 Saxony; Dukedom and Arms, 113, 277.
 Scales, Rob. de; Arms, 78.
 Scarpe, Escarpe, 151.
 Science of Heraldry, 24, 30, 330.
 Scintillant, 151.
 Scotland, Early Heraldry of, 94; Heraldry of, 204; Royal Heraldry of, 267; Royal Arms of, 67, 83, 173, 267; Crests, 91, 252, 273; Badge, 156, 236; Supporters, 273, 274; Mottoes, 274; Scottish Supporters, 245; Differenced Shield of, 211; Early Seals of, 165 (see Laing, Mr. H.).
 Scott, Sir Walter, of Abbotsford, 1, 330.
 Scott, Sir Walter, 330.
 Scottish Seals, Laing's Catalogue of, 11. See Laing.
 Scrope, Le; Arms, 58, 206; Badge, 231.

- Scrope, Sir R. le, 58, 206; Thos. le, 190; Controversy, 206.
 Scudamore; Arms, 154; Motto, 140.
 Seals; their Value in Heraldry, 10, 318; Early Scottish, 11; Casts of, 318; Suggestive of Supporters, 246; Examples, 318; American, 323.
 Seax, 152.
 Secondary Charges, 187.
 Seeded, 82, 150, 152.
 Segrave; Arms, 84; Sir John, 89.
 Segreant, 152.
 Sejant, Sejant Rampant, 86, 152.
 Semée, 45, 152; de lys, 125.
 Seruse, Cerise, 152.
 Seton, Mr., his "Scottish Heraldry," 9, 68, 94, 140, 204, 269, 309.
 Sevans, Septvans; Arms, 121.
 Seymour, Queen Jane, 236.
 Shakefork, 152.
 Shakespeare; Arms, 153; grant of Arms to, 310.
 Shamrock, 152, 235.
 Shelly; Arms, 17.
 Shield, or Escutcheon, Heraldic, 14, 37, 152; Parts, Points, and Divisions of, 32; Varieties, 35; Bowed, 35; à Bouche, 36; Couchée, 38; Differenced, 207.
 Shield-belt. See Guige.
 Shield-boss, 15.
 Ship, 152.
 Shoveller, 152.
 Sickle, 232, 233.
 Simple Quartering, 34, 153.
 Single Small Charges, for Difference, 190.
 Sinister, 32, 33, 153.
 Sinople, 153, 158.
 Six-foil, 153.
 Skere, Robt., Esquire, 243.
 Sleswick; Arms, 278.
 Slipped, 82, 153.
 Soaring, 81.
 Someri, Sir J. de; Arms, 209.
 Somerset, Henry, Duke of, 193, 194; John, Duke of, 242.
 Somerset Herald, 131.
 Sottone, Sutton, Sir R. de; Arms, 209.
 Southacre, 224.
 Southampton, the Baron; Supporters, 92.
 "Soutiens, Les," 253.
 Spear, 153.
 Spiritual Peers, 106.
 Spur, 153.
 S. S., Collar of, 110. See Collar.
 Stafford, De; Arms, 61; Badge, 155.
 Stafford, Sir H. de; Standard, 259.
 Stafford, Sir Humphrey de; Crest-wreath, 225.
 Stafford Knot, 134, 153, 259.
 Stall-Plate, 153, 285.
 Standard, 154, 259; Anglo-Saxon, 5; Anglo-Norman, 5; Marked for Cadency, 198; Royal, 260, 275.
 Staple, 154.
 Stapleton; Badge, 154.
 Star, 154.
 Statant, Statant Guardant, 86, 154.
 Staunton Harcourt, 224.
 Stephen; Arms, 88, 262; Badges, 108, 151, 235, 262.
 Steward, Alexander, Earl of Men-teith; Seal, 94.
 Stewart, Margaret, Countess of Angus, 95.
 Stirrup, 154.
 Stock, 154.
 Stormerk; Arms, 278.
 Strange, Le Strange; Arms, 89.
 Strange, Hamon Le, 89; Sir J. Le, 209.
 Stringed, 154.
 "Strongbow;" Seal, 62.
 Stuart, Ludovic, 118; Sir Richard; Seal, 320; Badge, 240.
 Stuarts; Arms, 125; Livery Colours, 136.
 Subordinaries, 42, 64.
 Suns and Roses, Collar of, 110. See Collar.
 Supporters, 154, 178, 245; their probable Origin, 94, 246; their heraldic Significance, 251; rightly supported, 251; Royal, 273; of the United Kingdom, 274; of Scotland, 273; granted by the Lord Lyon, 246.
 "Supports, Les," 252.
 Surcoat, 155, 198.
 Surmounted, 155.
 Surrey, Earl of, 165.
 Sustained, 155.
 Swan, 81, 155, 259.
 Sweden; Arms, 278.
 Sword, 155.
 Swyneborne; Arms, 17.
 Sykes; Arms, 72.
 Symbolical Expression and Record, ancient and universal, 5.
 Tabard, 131, 156.
 Talbot; Badge, 231.
 Tanfield, 222.
 Tau Cross, 55, 233.
 Tawke; Arms, 156.
 Tax on "Armorial Bearings," 314.
 Templars, Order of, 284; their Banner, 13, 284.
 Templars, Barristers of the Temple, 284.
 Temple Church, London, 15, 107.
 Tenent, 156, 253.
 Tennée, Tawny, 42, 156.
 Tetlow; Arms, 23.
 Tey; Motto, 104.
 Thane, 104.
 Thistle, 68, 156, 235; Order and insignia of the, 287.

- Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, 148, 185, 240, 242.
 Thomas, Duke of Clarence, 185.
 Thorpe, Sir E. de; Helm and Crest, 222.
 Through, 54.
 Tiercée, In Tierce, Per Tierce, 34, 157.
 Tiles, Encaustic, 327.
 Timbre, Timbred, 157.
 Tiptoft, John, Lord; Seal, 222.
 Tinctures, 40, 157; Law of, 43, 46; Blazoning in, 47; Change of, for Cadency, 186.
 Titles, 31.
 Tong, 224.
 Torse, 157.
 Torteau, Torteaux, 72, 157.
 Tower, Turret, 157.
 Transfluent, 157.
 Transmuted, 157.
 Transposed, 157.
 Traversed, 157.
 Treflée, or Botonée, 56, 157.
 Trefoil, 157.
 Treille, Trellis, 71, 157.
 Tremaine; Arms, 75.
 Tressure, 66, 157; impaled and quartered, 173; incorrectly blazoned, 318.
 Tricked, In Trick, 42, 157.
 Tripping, 81, 157.
 Triton, 157.
 Trivet, 157.
 Trompintoun, Trumpington, Sir R. de, 17, 158.
 Trotton; Brass at, 111.
 Trumpet, 158.
 Trumpington; Brass at, 17, 158.
 Trussed, Trussing, 81, 158.
 Trussell, Tressell; Arms, 71.
 Tryvett; Arms, 157.
 Tudor, Arthur; Badge, 238, 240.
 Tudor, Margaret, 174.
 Tudor; Badge, 145; Livery Colours, 136; Rose, 158, 235.
 Tun, 148, 158.
 Tyndall; Crest, 143.
 Tynes, 81, 158.
 Ufford, Sir Ralph de; Arms, 167, 190.
 Ulster, Badge of, 104, 260. See Baronet and Herald.
 Ulster, William, Earl of, 167.
 Ulster King-of-Arms, 132, 309.
 Undée, Undy, 34, 158.
 Unguled, 80, 158.
 Unicorn, 91, 158, 273, 274.
 "Union Jack," 158, 260; the First, 261; the Second, 261, 262.
 Union Device, 103, 211.
 United Kingdom; Supporters, 274.
 Unmarried Ladies; Arms, 176.
 Urdée, 57.
 Uriant, 82, 158.
 Vair, 41, 42, 158.
 Valence, De; Arms, 166, 171, 326; Dimidiating Claremont Nesle, 172.
 Valence, Earl William de, 45, 53, 77, 225; Earl Aymer de, 166.
 Vandalia; Arms, 278.
 Vane. See Fan.
 Varied Fields, 42, 59.
 Vavasour, William le, 51.
 Vele, De; Arms, 76.
 Verdy, Verdée, Verdoy, 158.
 Vere, De; Motto, 139.
 Vere, Robert de, 138, 213.
 Verley, Sir Philip de, 96.
 Vernon, Sir William, 224.
 Vert, 41, 48, 158.
 Vervels, Vervals, 158.
 Vesci, William de, 56.
 Vested, 158.
 VICTORIA, H.M., The QUEEN; Arms, 272.
 Victoria Cross, 293.
 Vigilant, 156.
 Villiers, de L'Isle Adam, Phillippe de, 57, 283.
 Viscount, Viscountess, 158.
 Vivre, 159.
 Voided, 55, 159.
 Vol, 96, 159.
 Volant, 81, 82, 159.
 Volunteers; Motto and Flag, 265.
 Vulned, 159.
 Wachesham, Sir G. de; Arms, 208.
 Wadsle, Wadseley, De; Arms, 202.
 Wake; Arms, 52, 183; Sir J., 208.
 Wake Knot, 134, 159.
 Waldegrave; Arms, 14.
 Wales, Native Princes of, 83.
 Wales, the Princes of, always K.G., 285; also Earls of Chester, 201.
 Wales, Arms of the Principality of, 276.
 Wales, H.R.H., Albert Edward, The Prince of; his Armorial Insignia, 276, 280; his Label, 135, 183; his Coronet, 140; his Badge, 240; his eldest son's Label, 280.
 Wales, H.R.H. Alexandra, The Princess of; her Armorial Insignia, 277.
 Walford, Mr., 9.
 Walled, Murallée, 159.
 Waltone, De; Arms, 68.
 Warkworth, 326.
 Warrenne, De, the Earls; Arms, 43, 45, 205.
 Warwick, the Earls of; Arms and Seals, 96, 173, 175, 188, 214, 321.
 Water Bouget, 159.
 Wattled, 159.
 Wavy, Undée, 34, 159.
 Wedone, Sir R. de; Arms, 208.
 Welles; Arms, 72.
 Wellington, the Duke of; Arms, 27.
 Supporters, 92; Augmentation, 103, 158, 211.

- Westminster Abbey, Heraldry of, 19, 26, 67, 93, 291, 326.
Westminster Hall, Heraldry of, 27, 91,
223, 269.
Westphalia; Arms, 272.
Wheatamstede, John de, Abbot of
St. Albans, 75, 148, 326.
Wheathampstead Church, Brass at, 79.
Wheat-Sheaf. See Garbe.
Wheel, Catherine Wheel, 160.
White Ensign, 264.
Whitmore, Mr., his "Elements of Heraldry," 323.
Whitworth, Shield at, 14.
Widow, Widower; Arms, 176.
Wife and Husband, Marshalling their Arms, 175.
Willers, De; Arms, 65.
William I.; Arms, 18, 88, 267.
William II.; Arms, 88, 267; Badge,
143.
William III. and Mary, Arms, 269.
William III.; Arms, 271.
William IV.; Arms, 272.
Winchelsea; Seal of the Mayor of, 171.
Windsor Herald, 131.
Wingfield; Arms, 17.
Wings in Crests, 219.
Woodstock, Duke Thomas of, 181, 243,
242; Badge, 148.
Worcester, Charles, Earl of, 194;
Henry, Earl of, 193; John, Earl of, 222.
Worcester Cathedral, 238, 327.
Wortele, Worteley, De; Arms, 203.
Wreath, Orle, Crest-Wreath, Wreathed, 160.
Wyndesor, Wm. de; Seal, 221, 250.
Wynford, The Baron; Supporters, 99.
Wyvern, Wivern, 72, 160.
Yarmouth, Great; Arms, 171.
Yngelfeld, Sir R. de; Arms, 208.
York, Dukes of, 183.
York, Archbishop of; Arms, 101.
York, Rose of, 150, 235; Collar of,
110; Livery Colours of, 136.
York Cathedral, Heraldic Glass at, 92
York Herald, 131.
Zouche, de La; Arms, 72, 118, 186.
Arms, 186.

GETTY CENTER LIBRARY

3 3125 00100 7034

GX 456

